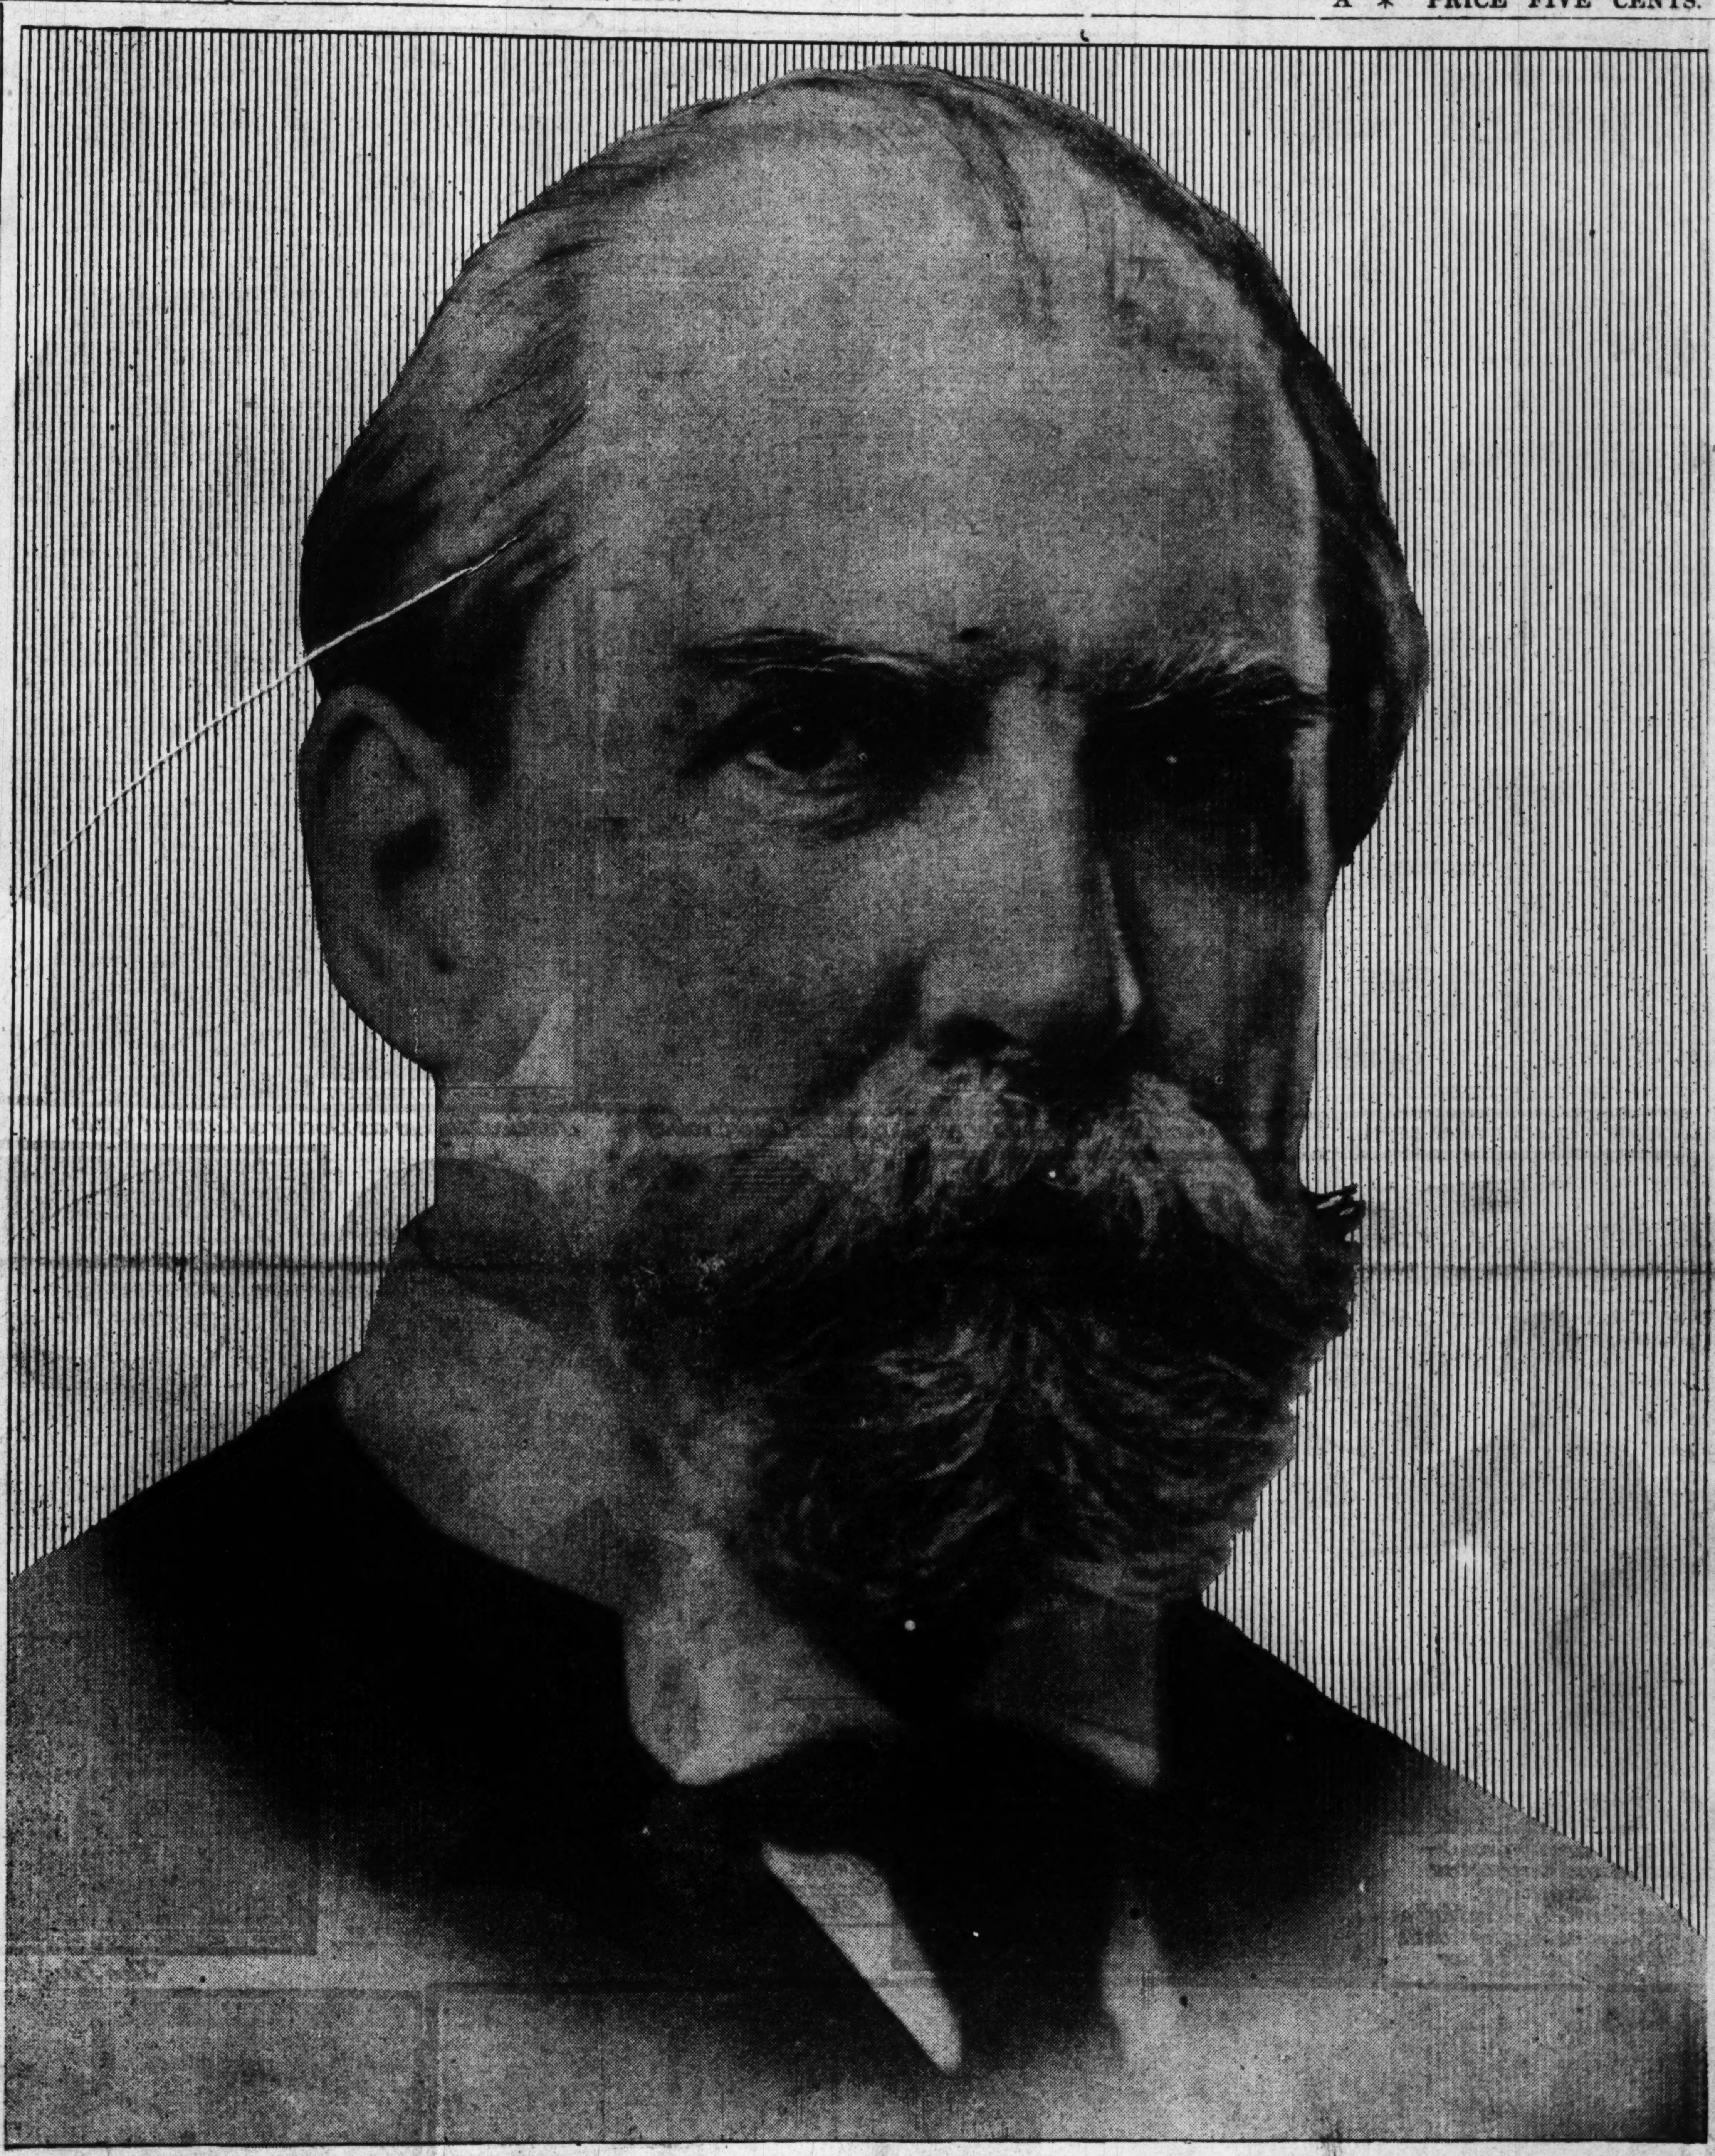
Republican Nominee's Acceptance Embraces Roosevelt Policies; T. R. Holds Moose Off; Summary of Political Situation.



"I have resigned my judicial office and am ready to devote myself unreservedly to the campaign."—Charles E. Hughes.

Political news of the last twenty-four hours—embracing developments of the first importance in the making of American history—may be summarized as follows:

Charles Evans Hughes, associate justice of the United States Supreme court, was nominated for president by practically a unanimous vote in the Republican convention, although he persisted to the last in his policy of silence and refusal to seek the office, and although it was not known when he was named whether he would accept or decline the honor.

Charles W. Fairbanks of Indiana, running mate of Roosevelt in the landslide of 1904, was named for vice president.

Theodore Roosevelt, refusing to accept Hughes as the fusion nominee of the two parties, was nominated for president by the Progressive national convention, which selected as its nominee for the vice presidency John M. Parker of New Orleans.

Quits Bench; Starts Campaign.

Instantly on receipt of telegraphic notice of his nomination Justice Hughes in Washington sent his resignation from the Supreme court to President Wilson, and the president quite as promptly accepted it.

At the same time Justice Hughes dispatched to the Republican convention a telegram of acceptance, in which for the first time he broke his silence and set forth his attitude on the issues of the hour. The acceptance was communicated to the convention before it adjourned.

Hughes Gives His Creed.

In this letter of acceptance Justice Hughes said, among other things:

> I stand for the firm and unflinching maintenance of all the rights of American citizens on land and sea. I neither impugn motives nor underestimate difficulties. But it is most regrettably true that in our foreign relations we have suffered incalculably from the weak and vacillating course which has been taken with regard to Mexico, a course lamentably wrong with regard to both our rights and our duties. We interfered without consistency, and while seeking to dictate when we were not concerned, we utterly failed to appreciate and discharge our plain duty to our own citizens.
>
> At the outset of the administration the high responsibilities of our diplomatic intercourse with foreign nations were subordinated to a conception of partisan requirements and presented to the world a humiliating spectacle of ineptitude.
>
> Belated efforts have not availed to recover the influence and prestige so unfortunately sacrificed, and brave words have been stripped of their force by indecision.
>
> I desire to see our diplomacy restored to its best standards, and to have these advance; to have no sacrifices of national interests to partisan expediency; to have the first ability of the country always at its command.
>
> I stand for an Americanism that knows no ulterior purpose, for a pariotism that is single and complete. Whether native or naturalized, of whatever race or creed, we have but one country, and we do not for an instant tolerate any division of allegiance.
>
> I believe in making prompt provision to assure absolutely our national security. I believe in preparedness, not only entirely adequate for our defense with respect to numbers and equipment, in both army and navy, but with all thoroughness to the end that in each branch of the service there may be the utmost efficiency under the most competent administrative heads.
>
> In view of our abiding ideals, there is danger of militarism in this country. We have no policies of aggression, no lust for territory, no zeal for strife.
>
> It is in this spirit that we demand adequate provision for national defense, and we condemn the inexcusable neglect that has been shown in this matter of first national importance. We must have the strength which self-respect demands, the strength of an efficient nation ready for every emergency.
>
> We must conserve the best interests of labor, realizing that in democracy partiotism and strength must be rooted in even handed justice.
>
> In preventing, as we must, unjust discrimination and monopolistic practices, we must still be zealous to assure the foundations of honest business.
>
> Particularly should we seek the expansion of foreign trade. We must not throttle enterprise, here or abroad, but rather promote it and take pride in honorable achievement.

The acceptance of the vice presidential nomination by Mr. Fairbanks was announced late in the afternoon.

Roosevelt Declines Progressive Nomination.

When Col. Roosevelt in Oyster Bay received notice of his nomination by the Progressive convention he telegraphed a letter to the Bull Moose party declining conditionally to head a third ticket.

He suggested in this letter that his conditional refusal to be the Progressive candidate be referred to the Progressive national committee and that if the committee should find Mr. Hughes' statement of views satisfactory his declination of the Progressive nomination should be regarded definite. If the Hughes statement should be considered unsatisfactory Col. Roosevelt said he would confer with the committee on "whatever action we may severally deem appropriate to meet the needs of the country."

Progressives Delay Action.

The Progressive national committee held a meeting last night and elected officers, but did not pass on the suggestion made by Col. Roosevelt or frame a reply to his letter. The committee adjourned until June 25 when the conditional declination of the colonel will be considered.

Some of the Progressive leaders said they had not read Mr. Hughes' statement, while others who had read it offered no criticism of the attitude on questions of the day outlined therein.

There seemed to be a prevalent opinion in Progressive as well as Republican circles that the election of Hughes could not justifiably be opposed by the Bull Moose party in view of the Republican candidate's clearcut exposition of policies for which the Progressives and particularly Col. Roosevelt have been contending.

Little Chance for Third Ticket.

The Progressive national committee may name another leader, such as Victor Murdock or Hiram Johnson, for president, but the prospect is that a third ticket so constituted by a committee instead of a representative convention would not carry much weight.

Whether intentional or not, the conditional refusal of the nomination by Roosevelt has served to further the reunion of the two parties in support of Hughes. By holding out the possibility of his later acceptance the colonel effectually prevented the Progressive convention from naming another leader. At the same time he saved himself from the embarrassment of accepting peace forthwith on Republican terms.

T. R. May Indorse Hughes.

It is well known that Col. Roosevelt earnestly believes that the defeat of President Wilson will promote the best interests of the country, and many Progressive as well as Republican leaders are confident that eventually he will indorse Hughes and issue a patriotic appeal to the country to support the Republican ticket.

The policy pursued by the colonel in regard to the Progressive nomination has minimized the power of the third party to obstruct the success of the Republican ticket and if a presidential candidate should be placed in the field in place of Roosevelt the action would be so belated as to be ineffective. For these reasons it is considered not unlikely that the Progressive ticket and the third party will fade out of the reckoning so far as this campaign is concerned.

Col. Roosevelt in a final interview with newspaper men at Oyster Bay refused to discuss Justice Hughes' statement.

"And now, gentlemen, I'll say good-by. There's no use of your coming up here again or staying in town. I'll have nothing at all to say. No, no; no picture. I'm out of politics."

MAY PICK NEW CHIEF.

BY CHARLES N. WHEELER.

Theodore Roosevelt, who was nominated by acclamation for president of the United States in the Progressive national convention yesterday, has declined the nomination conditionally.

Following his nomination, which was made at 12:32 in the afternoon, the convention recessed and reconvened at 3 o'clock to receive the message from Oyster Bay.

Both Progressive and Republican leaders in touch with Oyster Bay were satisfied at night that Roosevelt will stand with Hughes on the statement issued by the Republican nominee. They believe Col. Roosevelt is definitely out of the Moose party, leaving it leaderless, as far as he is concerned, for this campaign at least, and that he will be one of the supporters of the Republican ticket this fall.

THE COLONEL'S ANSWER.

Roosevelt's reply to the nomination follows:

"I am very grateful for the honor you confer upon me by nominating me as president. I cannot accept it at this time. I do not know the attitude of the candidate of the Republican party toward the vital questions of the day. Therefore, if you desire an immediate decision, I must decline the nomination.

"But if you prefer it I suggest that my conditional refusal to run be placed in the hands of the Progressive national committee. If Mr. Hughes' statements when he makes them shall satisfy the committee that it is for the interest of the country that he be elected they can act accordingly and treat my refusal as definitely accepted.

"If they are not satisfied they can so notify the Progressive party and at the same time they can confer with me and then determine on whatever action we may severally deem appropriate to meet the needs of the country.

"THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

"Oyster Bay, June 10, 1916."

The convention, after naming Col. John M. Parker of Louisiana for vice president by acclamation, following the withdrawal from the field of Raymond Robins and Gov. Johnson of California, adjourned sine die.

NATIONAL COMMITTEE MEETS.

The national committee of the Progressive party, to which was referred Roosevelt's message, conditionally declining the nomination, held a four hour session after the national convention adjourned sine die.

They discussed T. R.'s message, which gave them a chill, and decided not to continue the negotiations with Roosevelt at this time. They adjourned to meet again in Chicago on June 25, at which time a reply will be made, if at all, to the Oyster Bay message.

The committee reëlected the old officers, with Victor Murdock chairman; George W. Perkins, chairman of the executive committee; Matthew Hale of Massachusetts, vice chairman; Elon R. Hooker of New York, treasurer; and Oscar King Davis, secretary. The official statement was that the party would be kept alive.

FOUR TICKETS—MURDOCK.

Chairman Murdock said he expected four tickets in the field this fall—Republican, Democratic, Progressive, and a hyphenated Prohibition-Pacifist ticket with Bryan and Ford backing it.

While some of the Moose leaders have a faint hope that Roosevelt yet will lead their ticket, they said they have other "timber" if he quits. They mentioned Gifford Pinchot, Gov. Johnson, and John M. Parker, whom they nominated for vice president.

"I have no further statement to add to that given out by Secretary Davis," said Mr. Perkins after he had left the meeting of the executive committee. "I have not yet read Justice Hughes' statement, but shall do so tonight and will be in a position to comment on it tomorrow."

ROOSEVELT'S WET BLANKET.

The Roosevelt message fell like a wet blanket over the convention, which was just nearing the end of four days of tumult and frenzy seldom, if ever, equaled in national conventions in this country.

The reaction set in instantly, and the convention, which had been yelling itself mad for Roosevelt, preparedness,

ROOSEVELT OUT OF POLITICS; MAY SUPPORT HUGHES

Hints He Will Not Head Third Ticket—Justice's Message Is Acceptable.

"Col. Roosevelt will give Hughes his heartiest support," Nicholas Longworth, son-in-law of Col. Roosevelt, said in Chicago last night. "He will do so because Hughes will declare for a platform of the highest Americanism."

Oyster Bay, N. Y., June 10.—[Special.]—The last battle of Col. Roosevelt's career has ended.

This was evident to the correspondents who met him at Sagamore hill tonight who listened to his recital of what he had told the Progressive national committee about his conditional refusal of the Progressive nomination, who read in his manner more than his words that he would not lead a third party at the next election, who received his parting handshake and heard him say good-by, and who heard him admonish a photographer. "No, no; no picture. I'm out of politics."

It was a fight worth while that Col. Roosevelt fought and lost. For weeks and months he struggled to be the next president—not for any selfish reason, as he told those close to him, but because he thought his nomination by a reunited Republican party and his inevitable election in the fall would be for the country's good.

Will Accept Hughes' Statement.

He kept on fighting until the last minute—fighting for Americanism and preparedness, fighting against the present administration, fighting against the hyphenates, fighting for America first, last, and all the time; and, though he himself is beaten, he has forced from Justice Hughes a declaration of Americanism which he and the Progressives undoubtedly will accept. The Progressive national committee will do what their greatest leader tells them to, and there is no doubt here that he will tell them to take Hughes and make the best of it.

One question remains unanswered—that is, to what extent Col. Roosevelt will support Justice Hughes. He may go into the campaign actively to secure the defeat of President Wilson, but it is more likely his support will not be as vigorous as his campaign during the last weeks has been.

Family Wants Him to Retire.

He probably will retire to lead the life of a country gentleman, surrounded by his books and his family, and devoting himself to writing. In fact, his family plays an important part in his life. Mrs. Roosevelt and all of them have felt that he has been in public life long enough.

When Col. Roosevelt notified the news-

HUGHES' MESSAGE OF ACCEPTANCE

Washington, D. C., June 10.—Following is the message Justice Hughes sent to Chairman Harding accepting the Republican nomination for president:

"Mr. Chairman and Delegates: I have not desired the nomination. I have wished to remain on the bench. But in this critical period of our national history I recognize that it is your right to summon and that it is my paramount duty to respond.

"You speak at a time of national exigency transcending merely partisan considerations. You voice the demand for a dominant, thoroughgoing Americanism, with firm protective upbuilding policies essential to our peace and security; and to that call, in this crisis, I cannot fail to answer with the pledge of all that is in me to the service of our country. Therefore, I accept the nomination.

For Rights of Americans.

"I stand for the firm and unflinching maintenance of all the rights of American citizens on land and sea. I neither impugn motives nor underestimate difficulties. But it is most regrettably true that in our foreign relations we have suffered incalculably from the weak and vacillating course which has been taken with regard to Mexico, a course lamentably wrong with regard to both our rights and our duties.

"We interfered without consistency, and while seeking to dictate when we were not concerned, we utterly failed to appreciate and discharge our plain duty to our own citizens.

"At the outset of the administration the high responsibilities of our diplomatic intercourse with foreign nations were subordinated to a conception of partisan requirements and presented to the world a humiliating spectacle of ineptitude.

United States Has Lost Prestige.

"Belated efforts have not availed to recover the influence and prestige so unfortunately sacrificed, and brave words have been stripped of their force by indecision.

"I desire to see our diplomacy restored to its best standards and to have these advance; to have no sacrifices of national interests to partisan expediency; to have the first ability of the country always at its command, here and abroad, in diplomatic intercourse; to maintain firmly our rights under international law, insisting steadfastly upon all our rights as neutrals, and, fully performing our international obligations; and by the clear correctness and justice of our position and our manifest ability and disposition to sustain them to dignify our place among the nations.

Have Only One Country.

"I stand for an Americanism that knows no ulterior purpose for a patriotism which is single and complete. Whether native or naturalized, of whatever race or creed, we have but one country, and we do not for an instant tolerate any division of allegiance.

"I believe in making prompt provision to assure absolutely our national security. I believe in preparedness, not only entirely adequate for our defense with respect to numbers and equipment, in both army and navy, but with all thoroughness to the end that in each branch of the service there may be the utmost efficiency under the most competent administrative heads.

"We are devoted to the ideals of honorable peace. We wish to promote all wise and practical measures for the just settlement of international disputes.

No Danger of Militarism.

"In view of our abiding ideals, there is no danger of militarism in this country. We have no policies of aggression, no lust for territory, no zeal for strife.

"It is in this spirit that we demand adequate provision for national defense, and we condemn the inexcusable neglect that has been shown in this matter of first national importance. We must have the strength which self-respect demands, the strength of an efficient nation ready for every emergency.

"Our preparation must be industrial and economical as well. Our severest test will come after the war is over. We must make a fair and wiser adjustment of the tariff, in accordance with sound principles to secure our economic independence and maintain American standards of living.

"We must conserve the best interests of labor, realizing that in democracy patriotism and strength must be rooted in even handed justice.

For Honest Business.

"In preventing, as we must, unjust discrimination and monopolistic practices, we must still be zealous to assure the foundations of honest business.

"Particularly should we seek the expansion of foreign trade. We must not throttle enterprise, here or abroad, but rather promote it and take pride in honorable achievement.

"We must take up the serious problem of transportation, of interstate and foreign commerce, in a sensible and candid manner, and provide an enduring basis for prosperity by the intelligent use of the constitutional powers of congress, so as adequately to protect the public on the one hand and on the other to conserve the essential instrumentalities of progress.

"I stand for the principles of our civil service laws. In every department of government the highest efficiency must be insisted upon. All laws and programs are vain without efficient and impartial administration.

Indorses G. O. P. Platform.

"I cannot, within the limits of this statement, speak upon all the subjects that will require attention. I can only say that I fully indorse the platform you have adopted.

"I deeply appreciate the responsibility you impose. I should have been glad to have that responsibility placed upon another. But I shall undertake to meet it, grateful for the confidence you express.

"I sincerely trust all former differences may be forgotten and that we may have united effort in a patriotic realization of our national need and opportunity.

"I have resigned my judicial office, and I am ready to devote myself unreservedly to the campaign.

"CHARLES E. HUGHES."

CONVENTION CROWD GIVES $1,000,000 TO HOTELS.

More than $1,000,000 was spent in Chicago hotels and restaurants in the five days the convention visitors were in the city. Manager Harry Stevens of the Hotel La Salle estimated last night an average of $250,000 was spent each day. This figure excludes the ordinary income of the hotels and restaurants.

According to these figures, Chicago is $900,000 ahead on the convention. As an inducement to bring the convention here, the hotel keepers' association and various other business men pledged the national committee $100,000.

More than twice this amount was taken in on each of the five days. This does not include the money spent in the department stores, estimated at another $1,000,000.

USED TO OVATIONS FOR 'DAD.'

Mrs. Alice Longworth is so used to hearing her father, Col. Roosevelt, "ovated," that she merely rises curiously, looks around a minute, and then resumes her seat. In every convention since 1900 she has seen her father one of the central figures—or the storm center—of the convention.

BIG HUGHES CELEBRATION.

Nomination Stirs Glens Falls, N. Y., City of His Birth—Much Red Fire and Parade.

Glens Falls, N. Y., June 10.—[Special.]—The nomination of Justice Hughes was received in this city, his birthplace, by a great demonstration. Factory and mill whistles were sounded simultaneously for ten minutes and flags were displayed. This evening a big street parade, with much red fire and led by a band, took place, having the informal support of the chamber of commerce, a committee from that body having had charge of the arrangements.

First Club on Band Wagon Adopts Slogan an Hour After Candidate Is Named.

Fourteen advertising men and printers met at luncheon at the Hotel La Salle yesterday an hour after Hughes was nominated and formed the first "Hughes for President" club in Chicago. As secretary of the organization, Coleman Eliot Clague, a son of Stanley Clague, vice president of the Taylor-Critchfield-Clague company, sent this telegram to the candidate:

"The first Hughes for President club of Chicago was organized here this afternoon by newspaper men and business men of Chicago. Our slogan will be: 'Good news—President Hughes.'"

The organization will be completed at another meeting to be called within ten days.

UNITED PARTY AND VICTORY SEEN BY G. O. P.

Ringing Statement of Justice on Americanism and Defense Cheers Leaders

HOPE FOR AID OF T. R.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING

Amid extraordinary enthusiasm, evoked by the character of the candidate and by the enhanced prospect of a reunited and triumphant party, the Republicans nominated Associate Justice Charles Evans Hughes of the United States Supreme court for president in the final session of their national convention in the Coliseum yesterday.

Former Vice President Charles Warren Fairbanks of Indiana, the running mate of Col. Roosevelt in the landslide of 1904, was nominated for vice president and accepted.

Theodore Roosevelt, nominated by the Progressive party, provisionally declined to head a third ticket. The prospect is that he will make this refusal definite within a short time and indorse the candidacy of Hughes.

END OF SCHISM SEEN.

This action practically reunites the factions of the old party, for it is unlikely that the Progressive organization, if kept alive by leaders other than the colonel, will cut any appreciable figure in the election next November. The prospect is that the normal Republican majority of the country will be united in support of Hughes.

The Republican candidates go into the campaign under the alliterative slogan:

"Hughes, Harmony and Home Defense."

JUSTICE HUGHES ACCEPTS.

Justice Hughes, advised by telegraph of his selection, accepted the nomination, resigned from the bench, and sent to the convention a clear cut, inspiring statement of his position on the issues of the hour, including the fostering of a true Americanism and the provision of adequate national defense.

The first message from their new leader was received by the Republicans as a ringing appeal to Americans to enlist in the service of a cause dedicated to achieving a new prestige for the United States among the nations of the world and safeguarding the welfare of Americans at home and abroad.

MOOSE NOMINATE COLONEL.

Almost at the same time the Republicans named Justice Hughes in a stampede of the delegations the Progressive national convention, assembled in the Auditorium, nominated Theodore Roosevelt for president. This action followed the failure of the peace negotiations between the two parties to agree on a fusion nominee and the rejection by the Progressives of the Republican proposal to make Hughes the common candidate of the factions.

Shortly after Roosevelt was nominated the Progressive convention was thrown into commotion by receipt of the news that Hughes had resigned from the bench, and accepted the Republican leadership in a statement that left little to be desired even by the most radical of the Bull Moosers, who had been demanding that the jurist express himself on current issues before receiving their consideration.

SEEK OYSTER BAY ADVICE.

Realizing that Hughes by quick and resourceful action had taken the wind out of the sails of the third party, the Progressives proceeded to mark time and to consult Oyster Bay.

Eventually came a message from Col. Roosevelt declining the Bull Moose nomination on the condition that the statement made by Mr. Hughes should prove satisfactory to the Progressive party. The Progressive leaders had discussed with the colonel over the long distance telephone the situation produced by the Hughes statement, which could not be rejected with any semblance of justification.

REFUSAL GOES TO COMMITTEE.

In accordance with the wishes of the colonel the conditional declination of the nomination was referred to the Progressive national committee, which has the power to fill vacancies in the ticket. It would be within the province of this committee to name another Progressive for presidential candidate, such as Victor Murdock or Hiram Johnson.

John M. Parker of Louisiana was nominated for vice president by the Progressives. He accepted the place on the ticket in full knowledge of Col.

HUGHES' CALL TO ARMS FOR PARTY BRINGS OLD THRILL TO REPUBLICANS

Roosevelt's unwillingness to head a movement of opposition to Hughes.

Many Progressive leaders who are fully cognizant of Mr. Roosevelt's earnest desire to encompass the defeat of President Wilson believe not only that the colonel will refuse definitely to head the third ticket but will use his influence to procure virtual fusion on Hughes.

BODY BLOWS TO THIRD PARTY.

The triumph of the Republicans in naming a progressive candidate on the most progressive platform ever adopted and the refusal of Col. Roosevelt to knife that ticket are body blows to the third party. Republican leaders and many Progressives are of the opinion that the Bull Moose party is dead for the period of this campaign, if not for all time.

The extraordinary circumstances of the preconvention campaign found a fitting culmination in the events of yesterday. An unbossed convention, allowed the fullest deliberation, selected the man it deemed best qualified for leadership and offered him the nomination without the slightest solicitation on his part. It was the most impressive illustration of the office seeking the man that has been afforded the cynical politicians.

PRESIDENCY SEEKS THE MAN.

While the Republicans of the country were discussing Hughes and Roosevelt as the only two men who might be relied upon to defeat President Wilson, and were veering steadily toward Hughes as the preferable candidate of the pair, the justice maintained a Trappist silence. He refused to lift a finger to seek the honor.

He repudiated those who were gathering delegates in his behalf. He would do nothing that would place a justice of the Supreme court in the light of seeking political preferment, which, in his opinion, would have been a gross violation of the proprieties.

The justice would not even state his views on public questions, because such action would have stamped him as a receptive if not active candidate for the presidential nomination. He fought to keep his name off primary ballots. Still, the sentiment favoring his nomination waxed mightier throughout the country.

RIVAL OF FIELD FROM START.

When the convention assembled Hughes was the most formidable candidate. Yet he was without accredited campaign managers. Gov. Whitman, his close personal friend, had assumed charge of the Hughes campaign and had associated with him Frank H. Hitchcock, a resourceful politician who had gone on rounding up delegates for the justice despite the repudiation of his operations in Virginia contained in the letter Mr. Hughes wrote to Representative Slemp several months ago.

The favorite sons arrayed themselves against Hughes, but found they made no headway against the popular conviction that the party must have a winner and that Hughes measures up to that standard. The Old Guard schemed and maneuvered to eliminate Hughes as well as Roosevelt.

Between Hughes and Roosevelt the Old Guard was in a dilemma. Roosevelt had insulted and trampled on the Old Guard, yet he would be more satisfactory than Hughes in doling out patronage. Hughes never had been involved in the factional fight in the party, but he was known as an austere man who would not be "reasonable" in allowing the politicians the spoils of office.

OLD GUARD GETS INTO LINE.

The Old Guard found that it held the balance of power in the convention, that with the aid of the favorite sons the nomination of Roosevelt could be prevented, but that the allies could not hold their lines against Hughes with his backing of an increasing popular sentiment, and that sooner or later its balance of power would fade away. This is exactly what happened, and the Old Guard early made its arrangements to get aboard the Hughes band wagon.

Senator Penrose said at the outset that the convention would be unbossed. He saw that the flow of the tide toward Hughes could not be stemmed. The feelings of the Old Guard were expressed thus by one of its leaders:

"We are going to nominate Hughes, and gosh how we dread it."

UNDER OBLIGATION TO NONE.

Thus it falls out that Hughes assumes the leadership of the party under circumstances exceptionally favorable to the interests of the people. He is under obligations to no man more than another for his nomination. He has made no pledges save those concerning his policies given to the party and to the country. He has not quarreled with his party and enjoys the support of the regular Republicans of 1912. As a man always recognized as a progressive Republican, he has the confidence and good will of the vast majority of those Republicans who left the old party to follow Col. Roosevelt four years ago.

The imputation that Hughes is a "pussyfooter" has fallen flat. He rigidly conformed to the ideal that a member of the Supreme court must not seek political preferment. The sincerity of his assertion that he would much rather remain on the bench cannot be challenged. When the party called him to service he responded, but before accepting he resigned from his judicial office. His ideal that the Supreme court never should harbor a candidate for office was maintained with scrupulous care.

FILLS "HEROIC MOOD" BILL.

Relinquishing a life job, Hughes, who is a man of no great means, has risked defeat and retirement from public life to serve his country and his party. He has announced that he is ready to lead the fight for new national ideals with ardor and complete devotion to the task. In all this there is no trace of "pussyfooting." On the contrary, there is a manifestation of the qualities of leadership which Col. Roosevelt has said the country must call to its aid if it is in a "heroic mood."

The Republicans are delighted with the manner in which Hughes instantly threw aside the cloak of silence and plunged into the fray. He is known as a remarkable campaigner and the Republicans have no doubt that he will stir the country as it rarely has been stirred and put the Wilson administration and the Democratic party on the defensive from the outset.

EARLY START OF CAMPAIGN.

In the Republican camp there is the utmost confidence that the country will respond with enthusiasm to the appeal of the new leader, the inspiring qualities of which are revealed in the message of acceptance he sent to the convention.

The plan of the Republican leaders is to get an early start in the campaign. Mr. Hughes will make several extended speaking tours of the country. The organization work will be handled by the Republican national committee, the chairman of which will be selected by the candidate himself. At a meeting yesterday afternoon the committee authorized the appointment of a subcommittee of five to consult Mr. Hughes on this matter. Frank H. Hitchcock and Joseph B. Kealing have been suggested for the place and there is talk of retaining Chairman Hilles of the old committee.

FOLLOWS TRIBUNE FORECAST.

The nomination of Hughes was a foregone conclusion when the convention adjourned Friday night. The process of selection, of which it was the privilege of THE TRIBUNE to inform the country exclusively yesterday morning, worked out exactly as predicted as to the nomination of both Mr. Hughes and Mr. Fairbanks.

The efforts to establish a formal peace between the factions based on the selection of a fusion nominee were a complete failure, as had been anticipated. The Progressives refused to accept Hughes as their nominee and clung to Roosevelt. The Republicans refused to accept Roosevelt and proceeded to nominate Hughes because none other could be named.

FUSION PLANS FAIL.

When the members of the joint conference committee of the two conventions met at 9 o'clock yesterday morning the nomination of Hughes on the first ballot of the day had become a certainty. It was known that Senator Sherman would break the solid phalanx of the allied favorite sons by delivering his delegates to Hughes. That meant a stampede to Hughes on the first ballot.

The Republican members of the committee, therefore, asked the Progressive members to agree upon Hughes as the fusion nominee of both conventions. The Progressives who had been in communication with Oyster Bay declined to do this. It transpired later that Col. Roosevelt had declined to agree to fusion on Hughes because he did not want to acquire any responsibility for the selection of the justice. He intimated that he might later indorse the candidacy of Mr. Hughes, but he did not want to aid in the nomination of a man whose principles and performances he may wish to repudiate and condemn at some subsequent time.

MOOSE REFUSE HUGHES.

The Progressive conferees, thus forewarned of the colonel's unwillingness to share any part of the responsibility for the nomination of Hughes, informed the Republican members of the committee that they could not agree to the proposition submitted to them formally in writing to make the justice the fusion candidate. They said, however, that they were willing to present to the Progressive convention the formal proposition of the Republicans to agree on Hughes.

T. R. OFFERS LODGE.

As an alternative proposal to that presented by the Republicans the Progressives submitted a telegram from Col. Roosevelt in which he uttered an impressive appeal for peace and suggested the acceptance of Senator Lodge of Massachusetts as the common nominee of both conventions.

The Republican conferees said that they were without authority to accept Lodge and that under the circumstances existing such an agreement would be futile for the nomination of Hughes within the next two hours was a certainty with or without a peace compact with the Progressives.

It was agreed that the Hughes proposal of the Republicans and the Lodge proposal from Roosevelt should be presented in both conventions for action thereon. The peace conference then broke up and its members repaired to their respective conventions.

ALL OVER BUT THE VOTING.

The Republican convention had been killing time until the appearance of the peace commissioners. Finally Senator Smoot, chairman of the Republican conferees, took the platform and read to the convention the proposals made by each side in the peace committee, and the Roosevelt telegram. As he read a phone message told him the Progressive convention had laid the Hughes proposal and the Roosevelt telegram on the table.

That meant all peace negotiations were off and the third roll call was ordered. The favorite sons withdrew and the landslide to the justice began.

THE CLOSING SESSION

BY HENRY M. HYDE.

This is the great day. Over night the situation has cleared. Delegates coming into the Coliseum from the welcome sunshine outside have lost their anxious and apprehensive look. The presidential nomination seems to be determined.

"On the first ballot," one hears them saying, "Weeks has released all his delegates. Sherman's bunch, too, will go to Hughes on the first roll call."

In Michigan avenue—barred for a mile to traffic—Mayor Thompson has just given a show for the benefit of visitors, distinguished and otherwise. The hose cart has made a fast run and the new police ambulance has gone clanging down the avenue. Chauncey M. Depew and other delegates walking to the convention are doubtless greatly impressed by the display of Chicago's metropolitan equipment.

"All but one of Missouri's delegates will plump for Hughes," comes the word to the press stand. Plainly the Hughes band wagon is to be quickly crowded.

Spectators Await Climax.

There is no hurry about calling the session to order. At 11:30 the delegates are still standing in groups, whispering together, their arms about each other's shoulders. All the distinguished guests of previous sessions are in their seats to see the climax of the great show. The band blares away almost unnoticed. Hemenway of Indiana comes across the aisle to whisper to Penrose. The only question left open—so the gossip goes—is the selection of a candidate for vice president.

"They won't pick Borah or any other man who is in the senate. They can't afford to run the chance of losing a Republican senator. I guess it will be Fairbanks."

South Dakota delegates bring in with them a pretty little Indian girl in all her savage finery. Her straight black hair is crowned by a headdress of beads and wampum, above which project three or four crimson feathers. Her skirt and waist are of fringed and bearded deerskin.

It is nearing noon and still the convention has not been called to order. What can be the matter? Has Roosevelt spilled the beans at the last moment? Has something happened to change the Hughes decision.

Plainly some big question has been raised, else a full hour would not be wasted at the start. Now people in the galleries are clapping and cheering for the show to open.

An Offset to Marshall.

Gossip comes to the press stand that Roosevelt has wired demanding the nomination of Senator Lodge for president. But more directly and positively it is declared that the ticket is already positively settled. It will be Hughes and Fairbanks.

It is Fairbanks to balance Vice President Marshall, also of Indiana; besides the Hoosier state has a big electoral vote and there are two seats in the United States senate at stake there.

Just at noon Sergeant at Arms Stone drops his gavel. The crowds are enormous. People are standing in the galleries and about the walls on the floor.

Senator Smoot of Utah is presented by Chairman Harding to make a further report from the committee appointed to confer with the Progressives. He begins by reading a letter to the Progressive committee by the Republican conferees and suggesting Justice Hughes as a candidate for the presidency, to be nominated by both conventions. In reply the Progressives agree to present the matter to their convention at its meeting already in session.

Message from Oyster Bay.

But now comes the sensation. Straight from Oyster Bay comes a message from T. R. It is addressed to both the Progressive and the Republican conventions. And it suggests that both agree to nominate Senator Lodge of Massachusetts as candidate for president. When the name of the Massachusetts statesman is read the delegates from his own state exhibit a modest enthusiasm.

Senator Smoot concludes by stating that the Progressive party convention—now in session—has already laid on the table both the letter from Theodore Roosevelt suggesting the nomination of Senator Lodge and the Republican suggestion that Justice Hughes be chosen.

Instantly the roll call is ordered for the third ballot for president. It is apparent that it will be almost unanimous for Hughes. One by one each of the favorite sons is withdrawn and state after state throws its solid delegation for the Supreme ocurt justice.

Withdraw Roosevelt Name.

Speaking, as he says, for all the Roosevelt delegates in the convention, Archie Stephenson of Colorado withdraws the name of the former president. From the gallery comes an answering cry of "Amen."

Senator Weeks takes the platform and withdraws his own name.

"I ask the indulgence of the convention for one moment only," Senator Weeks says. "I have been a candidate before this convention for the nomination for the presidency. It is apparent to me that the convention prefers another, and, not wishing to delay the proceedings of the convention, I desire to withdraw my name, with the request that those who have supported me shall follow tht dictates of their own judgment as to whom they shall support hereafter.

"I want to say to this convention that there are no political scars on me. And in thanking those who have supported me I believe I can say with confidence that they will join me in doing their utmost to promote the success of the candidates of this convention at the ensuing election this fall."

Sherman Is Withdrawn.

Congressman Rodenburg announces that Senator Sherman thanks the delegates who have supported him and releases them from further allegiance.

Medill McCormick in a brief talk announces his willingness as a Roosevelt Republican to support Hughes. Other favorite sons withdraw.

State after state comes in solid for Justice Hughes. But still there are a few delegates who will not desert the Roosevelt banner, even in the face of certain defeat.

With the call of New Jersey, it is discovered that Justice Hughes had already received a majority of the votes in the convention. But there is no excitement. The roll call continues. In Wisconsin three delegates go down with the La Follette ship. Just before 1 o'clock the reading clerk calls the Philippine islands at the bottom of the list.

Out of the total of 987 votes in the convention, Justice Hughes has received 949½. Most of the delegates get to their feet and begin to talk and move about. The big white and gold banner of California, with the grizzly bear in its center, comes down the center aisle.

The band plays. There are scattering cheers, plenty of noise and disorder, but as a demonstration it is depressing.

Upon the platform Senator Penrose, Chairman Hilles, Nicholas Murray Butler Senator Sutherland, and Chairman Harding have their heads together in a circle. Are they nominating a vice president? Some one produces a newly made banner and brings it down to the front. It reads:

"Hughes; Harmony, and Home Defense."

It is fifteen minutes after the end of the roll call before the vote is announced.

It shows that only seven delegates followed the advice of Col. Roosevelt and voted for Senator Lodge.

Nomination Made Unanimous.

Alexander P. Moore of Pittsburgh climbs on a chair, and, declaring that he has fought to the last ditch for Roosevelt, moves that the nomination of Justice Hughes be made unanimous. Senator Lodge takes the platform and in a brief speech seconds the motion to make the Hughes nomination unanimous.

"Mr. Chairman, my fellow delegates," Senator Lodge says. "This great convention has chosen as its candidate a strong, able, distinguished, upright man and a thorough American. He should have the cordial support not only of every Republican from one end of the country to the other, but of every man who honestly believes that another four years of the present administration would be a calamity to the people of the United States because it is disintegrating public sentiment, lowering American spirit, and failing to stand for the conscience and the soul of the American people.

"It is an honor and a pleasure to me to second the motion of Mr. Moore of Pennsylvania that the nomination of Mr. Justice Hughes be made unanimous."

Roar of "Ayes" Heard.

The question is put and there is a roar of "ayes."

"There are no 'noes,'" cries Chairman Harding.

Now the convention goes on to name a candidate for vice president. Colorado yields to Pennsylvania and John Wanamaker, small and scarcely audible, names from the speakers' platform Charles Warren Fairbanks of Indiana.

This is the favored name and the delegates wait with apparent reluctance for other candidates to be nominated. But former Senator Elmer J. Burkett of Nebraska has been making a real campaign for the vice presidency. He has an orator, who is stuffed with eloquence and demands a hearing. From the platform he preaches the claims of the country west of the Mississippi river, while the delegates generally talk, walk about the aisles, and give him a perfunctory cheer as he concludes.

Senator Fulton of Oregon spends fifteen minutes in getting ready to place in nomination William Grant Webster of Chicago, who is a perpetual candidate for almost everything, and who carried the primaries in Oregon by a majority of 50,000. The delegates grow restless at his eloquence, and there are yells of "Name your man." In the midst of a gale of laughter the nomination is finally made.

While the roll call on the vice presidency is under way William Jennings Bryan leaves the press gallery.

"I predict that this spirited contest," he says with vast sarcasm, "will end in a victory for Fairbanks," and out he goes without a smile.

Convention in Disorder.

All the states have voted. Fairbanks has gone through by a tremendous majority. While the tellers add the vote the convention is in great disorder. The galleries are more than half empty. Many of the delegates have already gone. So great is the confusion that Chairman Harding is forced to appeal for attention.

"There are certain important formalities which we must attend to," he said. "The delegates must come to order. The clerk will announce the vote for vice presidential candidates."

The total number of votes for Fairbanks is 863. And now comes a rumor that the man from Indiana will refuse to accept the nomination. He has been vice president once, and the position is said to have no further charm for him. But the nomination is made unanimous.

Mayor Thompson's entertainment committee announces an exhibition of fireworks for the evening in Grant park. On Sunday morning they invite the delegates to an automobile tour of the city.

Chairman Hilles comes to the front of the speaker's platform. There is a formal motion or two. The gavel falls. The convention is over.

HUGHES PUNCH CALLS 'PREPARE' AND U. S. FIRST

Grills Wilson Foreign Policy; Touches Lightly on "Hyphenism"; For Unity.

BY J. P. YODER.

[UNITED PRESS STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., June 10.—Charles Evans Hughes, plain citizen, today answered the call of his party in a declaration of principles that blended Wilsonian diction with Rooseveltian punch.

The former Supreme court justice became a plain citizen within three hours after his nomination as president by the Republican national convention by formally tendering his resignation to President Wilson. The president immediately accepted.

Mr. Hughes declined to comment on Roosevelt's action in refusing to accept the Progressive presidential nomination.

"The judge has nothing to say," his secretary announced.

Justice Hughes in his declaration of principles declared for "firm and unflinching maintenance of all the rights of American citizens on land and sea." He assailed the present administration as "weak and vacillating" in its attitude toward Mexico, which, he said, has "presented to the world a humiliating spectacle of ineptitude."

Defines Term "Americanism."

He said he stands for Americanism, and defined the term. The Americanism he stands for, he said, "knows no ulterior purposes; for patriotism is single and complete."

In this connection he touched only lightly on the subject of "hyphenism," when he said:

"Whether native or naturalized, of whatever race or creed, we have but one country and do not for an instant tolerate any division of allegiance."

Mr. Hughes made a plea for reunited Republicanism.

As to national defense, Mr. Hughes declared himself in favor of "prompt provision to secure absolutely our national security." But in declaring for a defense "adequate not only in numbers and equipment but with all thoroughness," Mr. Hughes, in the next sentence, spoke for promotion of all "wise and practical measures for a just settlement of international disputes."

Letter of Resignation.

Justice Hughes' letter of resignation to the president read:

"To the President: I hereby resign the office of associate justice of the Supreme court of the United States."

"CHARLES EVANS HUGHES."

The president replied:

"Dear Mr. Justice Hughes: I am in receipt of your letter of resignation and feel constrained to yield to your desire. I therefore accept your resignation as justice of the Supreme court of the United States, to take effect at once.

WOODROW WILSON."

Justice Hughes as usual, through his secretary, announced tonight his plans for the campaign are not even in embryo. He expected to rest completely tomorrow and, beginning Monday, give his entire time and attention to the approaching campaign.

Gets to Work This Week.

Candidate Hughes expects to confer next week with party leaders. Frank H. Hitchcock, repudiated as the Chicago manager of the Hughes boom, will be among the first to see Hughes.

All plans for the Hughes' summer vacation have been abandoned until after he has met the Republicand leaders.

Whether Mr. Hughes will go on the stump, or who he will select to manage his campaign, are questions that have not been given consideration so far.

It was admitted, however, that he undoubtedly would "get over and let the folks see him," but it was said he probably would "adjust his campaign to meet the campaign of the enemy."

Luncheon Is Interrupted.

Justice Hughes was at luncneon with his family when the news of his nomination was brought to the house by reporters—beating Senator Harding's message by several minutes. The justice came downstairs hastily. There was the sound of swishing skirts in the upper hall, where his excited family was gathered.

The justice smiled nervously, his calm failing him for the moment. He listened to the brief announcement that he had been nominated, paused a moment, thanked his visitors, and said he would have a statement ready by 3 o'clock. Then he pleasantly bowed the visitors out and started upstairs.

Open House to Visitors.

The volley of telegrams started early, and the maid finally left the door open to admit messengers and casual visitors who dropped in to leave their congratulations.

Among the hundreds of telegrams received was one from former President Taft. It read:

"I congratulate you on a testimonial o your standing as a statesman, citizen and patriot—unique and unexampled in the history of American politics—and I felicitate the country on an opportunity it will certainly embrace."

Of the candidates before the Republican convention, Fairbanks, Root, Weeks, Cummins, Burton, and Knox sent telegrams of congratulations and support. Six delegates from Colorado who supported Col. Roosevelt assured him of their support.

Son of Justice Day Calls.

The first friend to arrive was Attorney Rufus Day, son of the Supreme court justice, with a message from his father, who is ill in Canton, O. He drove up, sent in his card, and rode away without making the unnecessary attempt to break in on the compilation of the response to the convention.

Among the other callers was Robert H. Fuller, private secretary to Mr. Hughes while he was governor of New York.

Not long afterward Justice Brandeis and Mrs. Brandeis arrived and were received by Mr. and Mrs. Hughes. Justice Brandeis was Boston correspondent of the Hughes law firm years ago, and the two men have been friends ever since. The visitors remained half an hour.

PRAISE FOR POLICE

Sergeant-at-Arms of G. O. P. Gathering Commends Chief Healey's Force and the Firemen.

Chief of Police Healey was elated when he returned to his office yesterday from the Republican convention at the Coliseum.

"Sergeant-at-Arms William Stone paid the Chicago police and firemen a big compliment," he said. "As the people were preparing to file out of the Coliseum, Mr. Stone asked the police and firemen to gather at the speaker's platform. He mounted the platform then and praised the men, saying that in his twenty-four years' experience with conventions he never saw one where the police and firemen gave such untiring attention as at the one just closed."

The chief also praised detectives who watched convention throngs for thieves.

"Not a single complaint of a visitor or other person being robbed by a pickpocket was made during the two conventions," he said. "The men worked eighteen hour shifts."

A banquet, as a vote of thanks to nineteen out of town police officers who have been assigned to Chicago during the convention, was given last night in the Crystal room of the Hotel Sherman by Chief Healey. The chief praised the out of town police for their efficient work. A vote of thanks from Mayor Thompson was read. The speakers were Chief Healey, First Deputy Superintendent Herman F. Schuettler, Capt. Morgan C. Collins, Lieuts. James V. Larkin and John Miller.

GERMANS LINE UP FOR HUGHES; BACKED HIS RACE

Alliance Leader Declares Teuton Body Worked for Six Months to Aid Justice.

Voters of German birth or descent will generalty favor Justice Hughes next November if the German-American alliance, the central body of practically all the German-American societies in the country, has the influence it is believed to possess. The alliance estimates there are 3,000,000 of these voters in the country.

Official announcement that the alliance, through a committee of its members appointed to handle the political situation, had agreed yesterday to devote its every energy to the election of the Supreme court judge as president was made by Louis E. Brandt, secretary of the German-American alliance of Chicago and the German-American alliance of Illinois.

Send Out 3,000,000 Letters.

Secretary Brandt spoke in the absence of Fred Walther, president of the league, who is in Wyoming.

"I am preparing now to send out letters to the 3,000,000 German-Americans or Americans of German descent throughout the United States," said Mr. Brandt yesterday. "The letters call upon them to vote for Justice Hughes. A meeting of the political committee of the German-American alliance will be held Wednesday, when the situation will be considered further.

"That's what we have been working for for the past six months—to insure the election of Hughes," Mr. Brandt continued. "We were determined all along to defeat Roosevelt and Root, and we will swing our vote to Hughes to defeat Wilson. Yes. We are in favor of Hughes. He is our candidate. It was to engineer this drive that the meeting of representatives of the alliance from all over the country was held a week ago at the Kaiserhof hotel here. It was there that the final plans for the campaign were promulgated.

Action by Parent Body.

"At this meeting the Philadelphia German-American alliance, which is the parent body, urged the appointment of the political committee to handle the political situation, as the main body concluded it could not act itself directly in such a situation."

Mr. Brandt stated further that the political fight for Hughes would in consequence be handled from Chicago. He said the alliance controlled the German vote of 249,000 in Chicago alone and 21,000 in thirty-nine larger cities of Illinois. He admitted this was the first time the German-American alliance had asserted itself politically as in the present instance, but that now its members, on account of peculiar conditions arising from the European war, would go in heavily for politics.

Bound to Secrecy.

Dr. H. Gerhard, chairman of the political committee, said:

"We are bound to secrecy and nothing official will be given out until after our meeting next Wednesday afternoon in Turnverein hall. The meeting should be over at 4 o'clock, and immediately afterward I will prepare a statement for the press. You will have to excuse me until then. I can discuss the political situation as it affects our members in no way whatsoever."

Dr. Gerhard had just concluded a conference with Bernard Ridder, editor of the New York Staats-Zeitung. He and Mr. Ridder are looked upon as the spokesmen for the alliance's undertaking. Mr. Ridder was equally reticent.

EXPLAINING THE CONVENTION'S INDIFFERENCE TO DEMONSTRATIONS

BY PERCY HAMMOND.

THE convention was something like a shambles early in the day, and even while Senator Weeks, the first of the victims, was depositing his aspirations upon the block, the tumbril was arriving with the other unfortunates. They seemed to be a courageous lot, for there were no audible wailings. One after another they subjected themselves (or were subjected) to the ministrations of old Dr. Guillotine, the well known throat specialist, and they seemed to like it. Weeks, Sherman, Fairbanks, Root, Cummins, Burton, and their lesser fellows made their exit gracefully and stoutly, with no lamentations; and then the sacrificial rites were turned into a festival.

Like other superficial observers of the proceedings you may have been mystified by the absence of violent fires among the delegates. Such demonstrations as the oratory suggested were not the ruddy outbursts of political inebriety, but the indifferent counterfeit of men with their minds on something else, discharging an empty obligation. They must all have wanted to vote for Justice Hughes, and they were probably saying to themselves in the words of the cereal ad, "Eventually—Why Not Now?"

So, after the artificial hoorah and pageant inspired by parochial influences were over they voted for Hughes, and they voted for him with a determined unanimity that persuaded a tyro in such matters that their action was the result of no frameup.

Hurried impressions, of course, are rarely accurate, but from those glimpses one caught of Senator Penrose and Mr. Crane and the other Old Guardsmen during the third ballot one suspected them to be depressed. Discontent existed upon the brow of the hefty Pennsylvanian, and Mr. Crane, soft shoeing about the platform, looked like a distressed atom or a grain of dust, drifting, worried, and superfluous.

◆

If you had been able to scrutinize from the press stand the adjacent delegations of New York, Pennsylvania, and Indiana you would have discerned within their contents a certain melancholy while the representatives of the commonwealths in the rear of the hall were voting for Hughes. The youthful and patrician Senator Wadsworth of New York coldly withdrew the name of Elihu Root, not caring to remove, during the process, his chewing gum. The Indiana statesmen seemed genuinely regretful over the discarding of Mr. Fairbanks, but the Illinois and Ohio outfits appeared to be reconciled to the passing of Sherman and Burton. Young Gov. Willis, the vivacious executive of Ohio, was quite the most nonchalant and debonair figure in the happenings. He mounted his chair every now and then and was picturesque and imposing of appearance if not in remarks. I suspect that 90 per cent of the delegates wanted Hughes and knew they were going to get him, even when they were cheering for some one else.

◆

Senator Smoot, the angular Mormon, appealed to you, no doubt as a perspicacious politician when he presented the Progressive dossier and read Col. Roosevelt's unpopular recommendation of Senator Lodge for president. An actor less astute would, perhaps, have given the colonel's manifesto none of the advantages of emphasis and inflection; but Senator Smoot, with an unruly lock of hair sticking from the back of his head like the plumage of a game cock, did the best he could to make the correspondence impressive. He also knew that it was to be Hughes.

◆

After Justice Hughes had been thoroughly nominated, Mr. John Wanamaker, the eminent retail tradesman, lifted his still, small voice in praise of Mr. Fairbanks as an appropriate candidate for vice president. The Indiana delegation looked askance at this, engaging themselves at once in muttered consultations. It had been bruited about that Mr. Fairbanks' son had said that his father, being rich, socially unambitious, and aweary of the shallow honors of the vice presidency, would, if nominated and elected, refuse to qualify. Therefore, while Indiana was called upon to vote, it did so for Mr. Fairbanks in a doubtful undertone. However, a long distance telephone soon gave assurance that Mr. Fairbanks was willing, if not eager, to shoulder the republic's minor burdens; and the convention donned its cerements and entered its eternal cell.

It is said that Senator Harding of Ohio, the chairman of the convention, was hurt in his feelings because the press men present referred to his opening address in terms of journalistic contempt. Loyal Ohioans inform me that the senator's virile, progressive, and vigorous pronouncements were emasculated by some of the more timorous members of the national committee, and that his keynote was not the full blooded thing that he intended it to be. At any rate, his engineering of the convention's meditations was benign and paternal. He mitigated the dignity of his austere position with the genial hospitality of a prosperous Boniface, and he was gracious and good to look upon.

TAFT ELATED BY HUGHES VICTORY AND T. R. DEFEAT

Ex-President Lauds Justice as Right Man for the Place; Leaders Pledge Aid.

Philadelphia, Pa., June 10.—[Special.]—Ex-President Taft, in the Union League tonight, exulted over the nomination of Justice Hughes for president on the Republican ticket, eulogized the candidate, and intimated that he would take the stump for him if asked to do so.

But Mr. Taft acted more elated over the elimination of Col. Roosevelt from the Republican nomination than he appeared happy over the nomination of Justice Hughes.

"What do you think of Mr. Hughes?" was the first query that met Mr. Taft.

"Justice Hughes is the highest type of man for the office," was Mr. Taft's prompt response. "I only hope that Roosevelt will support Hughes."

Burton Says He's Satisfied.

Cleveland O., June 10.—"The nomination of Justice Hughes is quite satisfactory to me," said Senator Burton.

Root Sure Hughes Will Win.

Utica, N. Y., June 10.—[Special.]—Word of the nomination of Justice Hughes for president by the Republican national convention reached former Senator Elihu Root at the latter's summer home on College Hill, Clinton. Mr. Root made this statement:

"It is plain that Hughes had been nominated because a great mass of the rank and file of the Republican party and the constituents of the delegates considered him the best man and wanted him for their candidate. He is able, experienced, courageous, high minded, and American to the core. He will be loyal to the platform upon which he has been nominated and with which, I am sure, he agrees. I am confident that he will be elected and will be a president of high quality, competent to deal with the serious conditions confronting the government of our country."

Sherman Sees Democrat Defeat.

Springfield, Ill., June 10.—[Special.]—The Republicans will elect their entire ticket next fall, United States Senator Sherman declared at his home here tonight, in discussing the nomination of Mr. Hughes. Senator Sherman said:

"My duty was plain early this morning. It was to ask all friends of mine to give their support to Mr. Hughes and nominate him. With him to lead our campaign in declaration of Republican principles as adopted in our platform and the inspiration given by Senator Harding's opening address, we shall elect our ticket."

MESSAGE BY HARDING

Permanent Chairman in Congratulations Tells of "Deliberation and Enthusiasm."

Warren G. Harding, permanent chairman of the Republican national convention, sent to Justice Hughes at Washington yesterday a message of congratulation as follows:

With deliberation and enthusiasm, under circumstances which could not have been more complimentary, and with unanimity never excelled in past conventions, you have been nominated by the Republicans of the nation as our candidate for president of the United States.

Your eminent fitness for this high office, your sterling integrity and unsullied private character are understood and appreciated by your countrymen.

Voicing the sentiments of the convention over which I have presided by the courtesy of my fellow delegates, I congratulate you and the country upon the outcome of this convention.

WARREN G. HARDING.

HISTORY OF PUBLIC CAREER OF THE NEW REPUBLICAN STANDARD BEARER

HUGHES WINS POLITICAL FAME AS GOVERNOR

Ignores New York Bosses and Gains Public Confidence by His Fearlessness.

Charles Evans Hughes was born at Glens Falls, N. Y., in 1862. His father, grandfather, and an uncle were Baptist clergymen in Wales. The father came to this country in 1855. The mother was Mary Catherine Connolly, a school teacher. The family lived in Glens Falls, then in Sandy Hill, then Oswego and Newark.

Charles Evans was delicate in his youth and was taught by his mother at home for some years. At 14 he was refused admission to the College of the City of New York, but only on account of his age.

A year after he entered Hamilton (Colgate) college, but later entered Brown university as a sophomore, graduating in 1881 at the age of 19, winning one of the two senior prizes for "ability, character, and attainment."

Teaches School.

The same year he began teaching Greek and mathematics in a school at Delhi. He started his law studies and gained a fellowship at Columbia, teaching private classes in addition at night.

Graduating as a lawyer he practiced for two years and then became a professor of law at Cornell. Later he taught in the New York Law school.

His first partnership was as junior member of Carter, Hughes & Dwight. He married Miss Antoinette Carter, his partner's daughter. The firm afterward became Carter, Hughes, Rounds & Schurman, and later Hughes, Rounds & Schurman, with offices at 96 Broadway.

Not a Familiar Figure.

Mr. Hughes as a lawyer was not generally known to the public until 1904. He was not even a familiar figure in the courts, for his partners were the trial lawyers and he consulted with clients and other lawyers in the office. Those who did know him, however, realized his profound knowledge of law and his reliability as an adviser.

The New York assembly of 1904 appointed a committee on gas and the chairman, Senator Stevens, engaged Mr. Hughes as its attorney. Then began one of the most notable legislative investigations ever held. Instead of turning upon political influence, it was kept strictly to the franchises and the relation of production to cost.

Mr. Hughes by his persistent questioning brought out the fact that some of the franchises in New York City had expired and had never been renewed; that the merger of the companies had been illegal, and that the plants of the gas and electric companies were worth not more than a quarter of the $200,000,000 capitalization the stocks and bonds represented. The dollar gas produced paid 90 per cent gross profit.

Results in Bills.

The findings of the committee resulted in bills passed by the legislature fixing the price at 80 cents. The cost of electric light and power was also cut down at the same time. A commission was established to regulate the issue of stock and bonds and to fix the candle power of gas furnished the public.

Later the life insurance scandal came to light through the Alexander-Hyde fight and a legislative committee appointed to go into the whole matter of insurance also chose Mr. Hughes. He went at this problem in the same thorough and dogged way he did the other. Of the character and results of this inquiry it is not necessary here to go into details.

It was proved that among the other misuses of funds hundreds of thousands of dollars belonging to policy holders had gone as gifts to national and state campaign funds, and that large sums were set aside to corrupt state legislators.

Shows Up "Big Three."

Had Hughes been a politician this would have been a golden opportunity to advance his interests, but he stoutly refused to allow Cortelyou, the chairman of the Republican national committee, or Cornelius Bliss, its treasurer, to be called. Neither did he try to convict the men in the legislature whom millions of money had been used to bribe.

But he showed unsparingly the wholesale mismanagement of the "Big Three" insurance companies, and the inefficiency, or worse, of the state insurance department. So complete and convincing was the showing he made that although some of the legislature and even of his own committee were tainted with bribery, the bills he drafted were passed unanimously.

During this investigation he was approached and asked if he would accept the nomination for mayor, upon which he replied:

"In my judgment I have no right to accept the nomination. A paramount public duty forbids it. It is not necesary to enlarge upon the importance of the insurance investigation. That is undisputed. It is dealing with questions vital to the interests of millions of our fellow citizens throughout the land. It presents an opportunity for public service second to none, and involves correlative responsibility. I have devoted myself unreservedly to this work. It commands all my energies. It is imperative that I continue it."

McClellan Defeats Hearst.

In a whirlwind city campaign in New York Mr. Hearst had been defeated by Mr. McClellan by a bare 4,000 votes. For several days the result was in doubt, and Mr. Hearst charged that fraud had been practiced. His followers believed as he did. He then became the candidate of his own Independence league for governor and forced Tammany to endorse him.

The Republicans were fighting each other. The scandals in the various state departments had greatly weakened the party, but in spite of this all the elective incumbents demanded renomination. There was not a leader among the known politicians who could be elected. Then Congressman Parsons sprung Hughes on the convention and word came from Washington that President Roosevelt had said the lawyer was the only man who could win. He was nominated by acclamation.

Leads His Ticket.

In the campaign which followed Mr. Hughes departed from the usual course and made his appeal to Democrats as well as Republicans. He repeatedly said that he wished to be the governor of all the people, not of any party. This hurt him with Republican politicians. The result was that he was the only man on his ticket who was elected. He ran tens of thousands ahead of his fellow-candidates and beat Hearst by 53,841 votes for the term 1907-8.

His inaugural address suggested a recount of the votes cast at the municipal election in New York City. He said that it was better that elections should be honestly conducted than that any one should or should not hold office. He promised thaat every department of the state should be investigated and he recommended that a bill be passed to regulate all public service corporations—steam and street railroads, railways, gas, electric light, and water. After a reasonable profit to the corporations they must make return to the public in the shape of reduced fares and charges.

These recommendations were accepted by the legislature, which was willing to let the governor have his way in this so long as he let them have their say about the patronage. The Democrats who were elected with him soon replaced Republican officeholders with men of their own stripe. They brought the list to Gov. Hughes and asked which committees he wished to control. He promptly told them that he didn't care to look at their lists. He would not interfere with the legislature and that he didn't want it to interfere with him.

When he began to make such appointments as were in his power there were further surprises for the politicians. Parsons and Tim Woodruff, political bosses in New York and Brooklyn, had agreed on men as superintendent of public works and election superintendent. Hughes ignored them and appointed men of his own choice.

Previous to Hughes' time political leaders who came to see the governor passed through the throngs of waiters and closeted themselves with the governor they had made. This was all changed. When a politician called and Mr. Hughes wished to receive him he did not do so in his private office. Instead, he came out among the other men waiting for an audience and asked the man to state his business, not in whispers but aloud so all might hear. It may be imagined how disconcerting this must have been.

Hard on the Leaders.

He did not have a confidant. No one "had his ear." Parsons and other leaders found they had absolutely no influence with him. Parsons had nominated him, but Hughes had not urged it and did not consider himself beholden to Parsons or to any other man. He had made no promises and the men he appointed to office were often unknown in political circles and were men to whom the appointments came as a complete surprise. But it was observed that they almost invariably were men well equipped for the places.

At a Republican dinner he said that he regarded party organization "only as a method of expressing the public will and not as a means of livelihood for its members." The Republican party was much greater than the organization, and when the will of the organization was contrary to the party's wishes, the Democrats would win, as had been demonstrated more than once. This was said early in the term and it threw cold water on the leaders. They had to get used to the douche, for he repeated the sentiment in other speeches and lived up to his words.

From the first he had strong opposition from Republican and Democratic bosses upstate and downstate. They blocked his reform measures and fought him with the old weapons of politics. The Democratic bosses opposed him on principle. The Republican bosses said he was destroying the party. But the party through long control of the bosses had almost destroyed itself. What Hughes was doing was to restore it to public confidence by eliminating the bosses and their corrupt tools in the departments.

Appeals to Public Opinion.

Even when President Roosevelt removed a federal official in the state and intimated that Hughes might appoint his successor, the governor refused this chance to increase his power.

Whenever his plans were balked he appealed to public opinion, and in nearly every case he got public indorsement for his men or his measures. Hardly any governor would have hesitated to sign the 2 cent railway fare bill, but Hughes took the measure, read it through carefully, and vetoed it. In his message he said:

"Injustice on the part of railroad corporations toward the public does not justify injustice on the part of the state toward the railroad corporations. The action of the government should be fair and impartial, and upon this every citizen, whatever his interest, is entitled to insist. We shall make matters no better, but worse, if to cure one wrong we establish another. The fact that those in control of railroad corporations have been guilty of grossly improper financiering and of illegal and injurious discriminations in charges points clearly to the necessity of effective state action, but does not require or warrant arbitrary reprisals. In dealing with these questions democracy must demonstrate its capacity to act upon deliberation and to deal justly."

Commission Is Remedy.

The remedy, instead of the bill proposed, was found in the establishment of the public service commission.

He succeeded in getting passed a public utilities bill of comprehensive nature. Three commissions have jurisdiction over common carriers, light companies, and public service corporations of every sort. There was great opposition, but Hughes, going to the people, so aroused public opinion that he carried the day. It was in this session that the 2 cent railroad fare bill was vetoed by the governor.

Wins a Second Time.

At the close of his first term he was renominated and again won, defeating Lewis S. Chanler, his Democratic opponent, by about 70,000 votes. In his second address of acceptance he made this pledge: "To do my duty according to my conscience. If elected, it will be my ambition to give the state efficient and honorable administration, free from taint of bossism or of servitude to any private interest."

He urged that the governor be given direct control over the heads of the administrative departments. In his annual address he advocated direct nominations at primaries for all elective officers. He fought for this for two years, but was beaten. He urged other election reforms, but the assembly adjourned without passing any of his measures.

Wallops Politicians.

He dealt a severe blow to the politicians by approving the state civil service commission's resolution, putting under merit rules the county superintendent and all other officers connected with highways. This removed from the patronage of the Republican machine in fifty-two counties over 100 salaried positions.

He was twice beaten in trying to force the removal of an inefficient politician, the superintendent of insurance. His fight for direct primaries was carried into his second year. The legislature substituted its bill for his, but he vetoed it as unsatisfactory. He called a special session, but he was beaten there also. He succeeded in having passed a progressive inheritance tax, increasing the state's revenue by about $4,000,000.

Taft Offers Chair.

In April, 1910, while still governor he was offered by President Taft the vacant chair of Justice Brewer on the bench of the Supreme court of the United States. He accepted, was nominated and confirmed by the senate. Col. Roosevelt had etermined to cause him to run for a third term as governor, but Mr. Hughes desired at that time to retire from political life. The appointment met with wide approval, not only from the legal profession, but from the general public.

Justice Hughes' name was mentioned as a presidential candidate just before the convention of 1912, but nothing came of it. This year it appeared again. He forbade its use on the Nebraska primary ballot, but Oregon led the way in its choice of Hughes, and Vermont followed.

Nurses Boom Along.

Mr. Frank Hitchcock nursed the boom along in spite of the justice's denials that he was a candidate or that he desired any expression of public opinion on him in that capacity.

Four children were born to the Hughes family. Charles E. Jr. is married to Miss Stewart of New York. There are three daughters, Elizabeth, Helen, and Catherine.

Besides his other honors Justice Hughes is a trustee of the University of Chicago.

HUGHES' ATTITUDE ON PUBLIC QUESTIONS

His Republicanism:

"We are all interested in the success of the Republican party. I have been a Republican from the time I came of age. I am grateful for the splendid services it has rendered to the country and for the memories of the noble men under whose leadership in repeated crises the party has proved itself equal to the task of preserving and administering the government. There is no political organization in this country which at this time has such an opportunity of serving the people by efficient administration and by wise constructive effort in the correction of known evils. The party has its future in its own keeping, and if it will measure up to its traditions and meet its opportunities it will for many years be invincible both in state and nation."

His attitude toward public service commissions bill:

"I am here retained by the people of the state of New York to see that justice is done and with no disposition to injure any investment, but with every desire to give the fullest opportunity to enterprise and with every purpose to shield and protect every just property interest, I stand for the people of the state of New York against extortion, against favoritism, against financial scandal, and against everything that goes to corrupt our politics by interference with the freedom of our legislature and administration. I stand for honest government and effective regulation by the state of the public service corporations."

His attitude toward public office:

"Work in your chosen field to the best of your ability; enter into political activities without thought or demand of reward; do your duty as a citizen because it is your duty and not because you expect office; keep yourself free from embarrassing obligations; be ready to take office if it comes your way and you can take it, but never let the thought of your selection stay your efforts in aiding the community to better things."

An advocate of preparedness:

"We are devoted to the interests of peace and we cherish no policy of aggression. The maintenance of our ideals is our surest protection. It is our constant aim to live in friendship with all nations and to realize the aims of a free government secure from the interruptions of strife and the wastes of war. It is entirely consistent with these aims, and it is our duty, to make adequate provision for our defense and to maintain the efficiency of our army and navy, and this I favor."

When asked by friends in 1908 to allow his name to be used as a nominee for the presidency:

"I cannot fail to recognize the great honor which the nomination would confer or the obligation of service which it would impose. Nor should I care to be thought lacking in appreciation of the confidence and esteem which prompt the efforts of those who sincerely desire to bring it about. The matter is one for the party to decide, and, whatever its decision, I shall be content.

His appeal for party loyalty:

"We make our appeal to the common sense of the American people, which has never failed to express itself decisively in a great crisis. We are pledged to achieve reforms in the American manner, in accordance with the genius of our institutions and with love of truth and even handed justice.

Enemies of our republic:

"The unscrupulous, who have no sympathy with democratic ideals, and who, by their abuse of the privileges obtained from the state and by their cynical indifference to public obligations, bring law and government into contempt; those who seek profit in unprincipled agitation. The second thrive upon the evils created by the first."

"Socialism is to him un-American; he does not favor government ownership of railroads, but he believes in effective regulation; the Sherman anti-trust bill he thought in 1908 should be cleared up and made more explicit; corporation offenders should be imprisoned, not fined."

The tariff:

"I believe in a protective tariff. It is an established policy . . . essential to the interests of our wage earners, in that it makes possible the payment of wages on the scale to which we are accustomed and thus maintains our American standards of living.

"But I do not believe in making this policy a cover for exorbitant rates or for obtaining special privileges from the government which are not based upon consideration of the general welfare. I believe that the tariff should be revised. And in order to effect whatever readjustment may be necessary to make the tariff schedules consistent with the principles underlying the protective policy, I favor the appointment of an expert commission, so that the facts may be ascertained without delay and that congress may dispose of the matter in the fairest possible manner."

Methods and mental temperament:

"I do not believe in arbitrary action. We desire prosperity. We are anxious that there should be fair opportunities for all the workers of the land, for the extension of industry and commerce, and that there should be the widest diffusion of blessings among a contented people.

"To attain these ends the rule of the people must be a rule of reason and every effort must be dominated by the sense of justice. We must be patient, impartial, and thorough; investigation must precede action; good will must displace passion, and the sole motive must be to seek the truth and to do the right."

Administration and service:

"With reference to matters of administration, it has been sought to conduct the public affairs solely in the interest of the people, and not in behalf of any special interest or for selfish purposes, and not for partisan advantage, save as fidelity and efficiency may have their due reward in public confidence. . . . If there is one thing more than another for which I desire the present administration to stand, it is for disinterestedness in public service."

Party workers:

"I esteem those who in an honorable manner work for the party. Political activity, by virtue of the experience and knowledge of affairs gained in it, so far from being a disqualification, may be a most important qualification for office. But I want that political activity to be of such a character as to leave a man free and independent in the dignity of his manhood to perform the duties of office, if appointed, unembarrassed by improper influences and unaffected by accumulated obligations."

What public office meant:

"To me public office means a burden of responsibility—a burden of incessant toil at times almost intolerable—which, under honorable conditions and at the command of the people, it may be a duty and even a pleasure to assume, but it is far from being an object of ambition. I have not sought nor shall I seek, directly or indirectly, to influence the selection or the vote of any delegate to any convention."

On successful men:

"I regard a successful man as one who has utilized to its fullest extent the best ability in him. One man may have great ability as a money maker; then he would be successful when he had made much money. Another man may have ability as an artist; he is successful when he has won fame by his art. If a man leaves any one of his talents to lie idle he is not a successful man. Mere money making is a poor sort of success."

On religion:

"My views on religion are not what most of my church friends would regard as orthodox; in fact, I have rather free views, but I recognize that we have in the church the greatest conservative force in our affairs, and, if for no other reason than this, I feel it should be supported. There is a lot of cant about it, but it has a great power for good, whether one agrees or not with the teachings of its ministers."

America first. From Justice Hughes' speech in Washington, June 5, 1916:

"This flag is the symbol of our national unity, our national endeavor, of our national aspiration. It tells you of the . . . sacrifice of brave men and women to whom the ideals and honor of this nation have been dearer than life.

"It means America first; it means an undivided allegiance. It means America united, strong and efficient, equal to her tasks. It means that you cannot be saved by the valor and devotion of your ancestors; that to each generation comes its patriotic duty; and that upon your willingness to sacrifice and endure, as those before you have sacrificed and endured, rests the national hope.

"It speaks of equal rights; of the inspiration of free institutions exemplified and vindicated; of liberty under the law, intelligently conceived and impartially administered. There is not a thread in it but scores self-indulgence, weakness, and rapacity.

"It is eloquent of our common interests, outweighing all divergencies of opinion, and of our common destiny."

HUGHES INQUIRY REVOLUTIONIZES LIFE INSURANCE

Sweeping Investigation of 'Big Three' Uncovers Gigantic Frauds.

From 1905 to 1916 is not a long period as time goes, but it is long enough to make some men forget what took place at New York City in the former year. But it is not likely to be forgotten by several million holders of life insurance that in 1905 Charles Evans Hughes uncovered during a legislative investigation the colossal mismanagement of three of the largest life insurance companies in the world, and that the result of this exposure was a revision of the laws governing that form of security, sweeping away the possibility of such fraud and mismanagement and giving to millions of the insured their rights as partners and stockholders in the companies they maintained by their premiums.

This was the work of Charles Evans Hughes, and it was accomplished in spite of the tremendous influence of great capitalistic interests, in spite of the efforts of politicians and bankers, and in the face of every obstacle which those interests could throw in the investigator's way.

Quarrel Starts Things.

When the quarrel in the Equitable Life Assurance company developed into a public scandal in New York eleven years ago, a legislative committee headed by Senator Armstrong was appointed to go into the whole subject of life insurance as managed in the state.

Mr. Hughes' remarkable success a short time before in conducting the gas investigation led the chairman of the committee to desire his assistance in the new inquiry. Mr. Hughes was at that time in Europe, but a cablegram reached him and he replied affirmatively, specifying, however, that he should not be hampered in any way while conducting the investigation. He received that assurance and came home.

Three Companies Involved.

At that time there were three great companies in the life insurance business in New York City—the New York Life, the Equitable Life Assurance company, and the Mutual Life company. They had been doing an enormous business for years on charters the terms of which the public had forgotten, if it ever knew. In the hands of unscrupulous men these institutions, possessing millions of the people's money, had violated the charter requirements in every way, used the funds for speculation and appropriated it to their own profit. Huge sums had been lost and made in this way.

Together the three companies had assets amounting to nearly $1,500,000,000, and there was in available capital a million dollars in cash passing into their hands every day. These funds were being invested in every conceivable form of securities, some good but many worthless.

Millions Wasted.

In reaching out for new insurance millions of dollars were spent in extravagant agencies, headed by men at exorbitant salaries in charge of armies of subordinates.

Great masses of the capital were fed out to trust companies and banks, who in turn used these funds as they thought best. In this way the insurance companies obtained control of a large number of trust institutions.

The state insurance department had been controlled by these insurance companies for a generation or more. Through their contributions to party campaign funds they were enabled to name the state superintendent of insurance of each incoming administration. He was invariably a politician and he did the bidding of the men who put him in office. If a new rival company appeared he could so hamper its activity by his reports that it could, if necessary, be put out of business in a short time.

Controlled Legislation.

No insurance bill could pass the legislature without the indorsement of the Big Three companies. On the other hand, they had actually had passed a bill prohibiting a policyholder from suing his own company. They absolutely controlled the insurance business of the state. The leading officers of the companies voted themselves princely salaries and their offices were fitted up with the greatest extravagance.

This was the situation when Mr. Hughes arrived in New York to take up the work of investigation. Chairman Armstrong gave him the greatest latitude in his labors and the committee put at his command the full powers granted by the legislature.

In a marvelously short time he made himself master of the subject and then began a repetiton of the relentless examination of witnesses which took place in the gas inquiry.

Rottenness Exposed.

Bit by bit the rottenness was exposed, Hughes' scalpel going to the bone every time. Presidents, clerks, accountants were interrogated on the most minute details of their business.

Financiers and politicians, lobbyists and legislators were ground through his mill with the most relentless force. He would not take "I don't know" so long as he believed the man was holding anything back.

Against him were arrayed some of the greatest attorneys of New York, but he made them look like law clerks before he got through with them.

He compelled E. H. Harriman to admit that he had borrowed huge sums from the Equitable and that in return he had tried to have J. H. Hyde of that company appointed ambassador to France. He brought out that the Mutual was paying certain newspapers a dollar a line for favorable reports of the inquiry; that each of the Big Three had given $50,000 to the Republican national committee; and he made Tom Platt tell how he mulcted the Equitable for cash whenever the party needed it. Former Gov. Odell had to confess that he had used his office to force settlement of private suits against the Big Three.

Pressure from political sources was brought upon Mr. Hughes to have him call to the stand Chairman Cortelyou and Cornelius Bliss, treasurer of the Republican national committee, but he replied that he was a private counsel conducting a legal examination of insurance companies, and not a partisan trying to indict political rivals.

James Hazen Hyde of the Equitable company, who lived at the rate of a million a year on policy holders' money, was forced by the exposure to leave the country for Paris, from which he never has permanently returned.

McCall Forced Out.

President John A. McCall of the New York Life, another great spender, was forced out of the business entirely and died a few years later a poor man. "Andy" Hamilton, the lobbyist, ran away at the beginning of the trouble and lived several years abroad, only returning after the close of the investigation. Mr. George W. Perkins, who had risen from the job of insurance clerk in Chicago to a place where he commanded great influence in the financial world, was indicted, but the indictment was later quashed.

One of the worst wrongs of the insurance conspiracy was practiced upon policy holders by means of deferred dividends. As a writer on the subject says: "Under this plan, the companies did not pay their dividends every year, but accumulated them for certain periods, usualy twenty years, and then paid them only to survivors. If you died or dropped your policy before the expiration of this period, you received no dividends at all. These unpaid dividends, held in the companies' treasuries, amounted to enormous sums—about $67,000,000 in the Equitable, $70,000,000 in the Mutual, and $47,000,000 in the New York Life.

Law Corrects Abuses.

"This scheme not only made life insurance a sytem of wholesale gambling but, in these great surpluses of liquid capital, furnished a huge corruption fund. Without this source of supply the big salaries, the high agents' commisions, the extravagant office buildings, the legislative bribery, the financial profits to insiders, would have been practically impossible. Evidently the most effectual way of reforming the abuses was to remove the cause. In framing a law requiring insurance companies to pay their dividends annually, this is precisely what Mr. Hughes did.

Revolution in Insurance.

"In other words, these dividends henceforth will become the property of the policy holders, and will not be diverted, to the extent of many millions annually, into other hands. This single change establishes as complete a revolution in life insurance conditions as the abolition of the protective tariff would work in the nation's fiscal policy.

At one time the Equitable was keeping $40,000,000 of its policyholders' money in trust companies.

The investigation included the affairs of thirteen companies; 200 witnesses were examined and the printed testimony filled nine large volumes. Charters, by-laws, and investments, were all thoroughly aired. He put expert accountants on the stand and in a few minutes showed he knew more of their business than they themselves.

Drafts New Laws.

The results of this grand inquisition were that the iniquities of the companies were thoroughly exposed, and that Mr. Hughes drafted new insurance laws for the state which the legislature adopted unanimously. The companies had to sell their trust company and bank stocks within a specified time; the annual business a company could do was limited, thus banishing the feverish competition which led to extravagances of agencies and advertising; campaign contributions were forbidden; standard policies introduced, and the companies' reports must be given the greatest publicity. A deferred dividend became a thing of the past, and the companies' bank balances were kept on a business basis.

The men with the $150,000 salaries went out of office and their successors were content to do better work for the policy holders at less wages. Agencies were curtailed and merged—and the whole administration took on a healthier tone.

The consequence of all this was that after a temporary setback caused by the investigation all the companies began to increase their business, but the profits, instead of going into the pockets of the Big Three clique, went to the policy holders in the form of increased dividends.

POLITICAL BETTING SLIGHT.

Less than $15,000 Collected by Hughes Backers During Convention Week.

Very little betting was carried on during convention week. Less than $15,000 was collected by Hughes backers, despite the fact that odds were 8 to 5.

MOOSE VICE PRESIDENTIAL NOMINEE HEADS 'CHANGE.

John M. Parker of Louisiana President of New Orleans Board of Trade and Cotton Exchange.

Four or five days ago a medium sized, iron gray haired southerner came to Chicago and snapped in a dignified way at George W. Perkins and the conservative Bull Moose who sought to delay the nomination of Theodore Roosevelt.

Last night this southerner, John M. Parker of Louisiana, was the candidate for vice president on the Bull Moose ticket. He was nominated unanimously.

Parker is 53 years old. He was born at Bethel Church, Miss., in 1863. When a boy he went to Louisiana and later engaged in cotton planting. He is president of the New Orleans board of trade and the cotton exchange.

Last spring the Louisiana Progressives nominated him for governor, and he was defeated. He has never held a political office.

HUGHES FAMILY HOME LOVING ONE; LIVES STUDIOUS

Nominee and His Wife Pay Little Attention to Social Affairs in Washington.

BY ROBERTA V. BRADSHAW.

Washington, D. C., June 10.—[Special.]—Since the G. O. P.'s discovery of presidential timber in Charles E. Hughes, associate justice of the United States Supreme court and one time governor of New York, a red brick house "half way up the hill" in Sixteenth street northwest, Washington, D. C., has become the center of a nation wide interest.

The personal cards of ambitious residents of this thoroughfare, which, beginning fairly at the main entrance of the White House, sweeps onward to one of the principal entrances to Rock Creek park, bear the legend: "Avenue of the Presidents."

In contradistinction, the card of the woman who stands a big chance of being the next mistress of the White House, reads:

"Mrs. Hughes, 2100 Sixteenth street."

House Selected by Wife.

Mrs. Hughes herself is responsible for the selection of the "comfy" looking residence, one of a colony of similar homes that are thrown into high relief by the surpassing magnificence of the neighboring residences, among which are the embassies of Russia and Spain and the homes of Mrs. Marshall Field, Mrs. Franklin MacVeagh, and Mr Frank L. Polk, counselor of the department of state.

Five years ago Mrs. Hughes picked out this house, which at first was leased and afterward purchased. When she made the rounds of the real estate offices she specified her requirements. They ran something like this:

"A comfortable house with a bit of garden or some greensward one with airy, commodious rooms, and one that will lend itself to the disposition of books." She got just what she wanted.

Soon after she took possession the lawn began to "look up," and an air of system and efficiency became apparent even to the casual onlooker. It took no wiseacre to discover that the new chatelaine of the Supreme court circle was a home maker.

Not of Usual Sort.

The house piques the curiosity. It is not at all a usual sort of residence. Standing on a corner, the big windows of the main drawing room on the second floor overlook the sward. If one seeks to enter the home of the possible president of the United States, one cannot do it without taking thought, for there is no entrance facing the main street.

One walks the width of the plat of lawn to reach the sole portal which opens from the side street.

Once within, a colonial stairway mounts to the second floor and from a "landing" (a square space set with tables, fitted with a window seat and graced by a sort of impromptu conservatory) one enters the big drawing room. There are a few pictures on the walls—watercolors and a distinctive engraving or etching. A few old pieces of Chippendale keep company gracefully with modern reproductions.

The rugs and wall hangings are of neutral tone and that is about as far as one may go in the description of the tangible things of the household; for the principal part of the Hughes home is "atmoshere." One would know offhand that "scholarly folks" dwelt therein

Family of Studious Ones.

Of the family of six all are college graduates or collegians in the making, with the exception of 9 year old Elizabeth, who was born in the executive mansion at Albany The other day Miss Catherine Hughes was graduated from the National Cathedral school and all the world knows now that her distinguished father broke an eloquent silence when as a guest at the graduation exercises of her class he made his brief but historic speech on the significance of the flag.

The unheralded appearance of Justice and Mrs. Hughes on such an occasion is typical of the attitude they take towards their children.

They are an "old fashioned family" as regards family life. When Washington got to know Mrs. Hughes better it discovered that she was not only a "bookish woman," but one interested in large affairs, albeit never a propagandist.

"Doubtless," said a woman who most frequently comes in contact with her, "Mrs. Hughes is a suffragist, but I never heard her say so."

However, there are no two ways about the fact that she is a largely intelligent woman, and not only a home builder but a "good wife and mother," as the old fashioned folk interpret the homely phrase.

"I take a personal interest in the children's progress in their studies," remarked Mrs. Hughes a short time ago. Mrs. Hughes attended Wellesley college for two years and is loyal to it. Miss Helen Hughes, the eldest daughter, was graduated two years ago from Vassar college and she heard the news of her father's nomination at Poughkeepsie, where she went to attend her class reunion.

Follows Wish of Mother.

When Miss Helen was ready for college her father was chief executive of New York and it was his wish that his daughter should go to Vassar, but Catherine will follow her mother's wish and enter Wellesley.

Mrs. Hughes does not altogether approve of girls "too young for college" being absent from home, therefore Catherine was a day pupil at the National Cathedral school and Elizabeth attends a day school near her home. They both study under their mother's watchful eye.

The only son of the house, Charles E. Hughes Jr., had the advantage of the personal oversight of both his father and mother. He was graduated first from Columbia and later from the Harvard law school. In June, 1914, he was married to Miss Marjory Bruce Stuart, daughter of Henry C. Stuart of New York.

A Girlish Looking Woman.

A girlish looking woman, tall and slender, Mrs. Hughes has blue eyes, a finely chiseled nose, a mobile mouth, and a fair complexion. There are traces of gray in her hair, but nobody would surmise that she was a grandmother. The first grandchild in the family belongs to Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Hughes Jr., whose marriage occurred a short time subsequent to that of his chum, Mr. Francis Bowes Sayre, son-in-law of President Wilson.

Mr. Hughes was one of the ushers at the wedding of Miss Jessie Woodrow Wilson and Mr. Sayre in November, 1913. One of the few entertainments apart from the purely official dinners arranged each year by the wives of the Supreme court justices, that Mrs. Hughes has given, were the several dinners and teas planned for the ushers and out of town guests at the Sayre-Wilson wedding.

Mrs. Hughes and her daughters take a keen interest in the progress of world events, and since coming to Washington Mrs. Hughes has materially enlarged her interest in national affairs.

No "Going In" for Society.

While Mrs. Hughes performs punctiliously the social requirements of her station, she makes no pretense of "going in" for society. Her name is seldom to be found on luncheon lists. She is not keen on the tea and bridge parties which enliven the Washington season.

She makes the round of calls exacted of wives of Supreme court justices and she observes her weekly "at home" days. On these occasions Washington finds Mrs. Hughes affable, sympathetic, and politic. There is little formality as expressed in liveried service.

Mrs. Hughes herself presides at the simply arranged tea table which is generally placed close by one of the windows at the extreme end of the oblong drawing room. A white capped maid stands at hand to serve guests who get a good cup of tea and palatable sandwiches and toothsome sweets. There is no butler.

Daughter Not in Society.

Miss Hughes, like her mother, has much more interest in big affairs than in society. The eldest daughter of the household did not make a formal debut. Two years out of college, there are not a hundred persons in Washington society who would know her by sight today. She dances and she rides, but these are incidental but not main issues in her life..

Apparently neither Mrs. Hughes nor her daughters are given over to absorbing friendships. Their main interests seem to lie within their family circle. All are devoted churchgoers and the Hughes pew at Calvary Baptist church is filled every Sunday. Miss Elizabeth files in, then Miss Catherine, and the justice and his wife complete the family group.

Seek to Avoid Crowd.

For years they passed the summers at a camp at Lake Placid in the Adirondacks. Recently they have spent their summers at Rangely lakes, Maine. Mrs. Hughes and the Misses Hughes are good for a five mile tramp any day. Justice Hughes makes the two mile trip daily to the capitol and back on foot. Washington does not know of the family as golfers or country club habitués.

Mrs. Hughes does her own marketing. She maps out her menus not only for the family dinners but the formal fetes. Mrs. Hughes and her daughters dress simply. While they are always in the mode, even the most observing would be stumped if somebody asked that usual question:

"What did Mrs. Hughes and her daughters have on?"

Altogether, if the Republican standard bearer wins out next November it will be a very conscientious, methodical, old fashioned, well managed, well educated, intelligent, keen minded, serious sort of family who will move into the historic mansion which for over a hundred years has housed the chief magistrates of the nation and their family circle.

HUGHES SPREADS GLOOM OVER ST. LOUIS DEMOCRATS.

Acceptance of G. O. P. Nomination and Stand He Takes Locks Lips of Convention Leaders.

St. Louis, Mo., June 10.—[Special.]—The acceptance by Charles E. Hughes of the Republican nomination, his statement indicating his position on the issues of the campaign, and Col. Roosevelt's tentative declination of the Progressive nomination, threw a pall of gloom over Democratic officials in St. Louis tonight.

A few minutes before Hughes' nomination was flashed over the wires, any one of a hundred or more nationally prominent Democratic officials was ready to say it didn't make any difference whether it was Hughes or Roosevelt or both on the same ticket.

When they learned Hughes had accepted without a moment's hesitation, that he had given out a statement defining his position on the platform in an unmistakable manner and that he had already gotten into the campaign, they changed their minds. Not a single one of them would discuss the situation for publication.

FAIRBANKS ACCEPTS

Tried to Head Off the Nomination, He Says, but Will Answer Duty's Call.

Indianapolis, Ind., June 10.—Charles Warren Fairbanks, in a statement given out here tonight, accepted the nomination for vice president made at the Republican national convention in Chicago today. His statement follows:

"I was not a candidate for the vice presidential nomination and requested the chairman of the Indiana delegation to withdraw my name if presented. The nomination was made and the convention adjourned before my dispatch was received. I feel it my duty, under the circumstances, to accept the commission which the party has so generously and unanimously placed in my hands."

In reply to a telegram of congratulations which he sent Justice Hughes Mr. Fairbanks received the following:

"Your telegram is deeply appreciated. I heartily congratulate you upon your nomination. It is most gratifying to me.

"CHARLES E. HUGHES."

Ford's Men Fly to Bandwagon.

Henry Ford's boys from Michigan got out of the trenches and onto the Hughes bandwagon after the first ballot.

C. W. FAIRBANKS LONG A FIGURE IN POLITICS

Was Vice President with T. R. and Served Two Terms in United States Senate.

Charles Warren Fairbanks was born May 11, 1852, on a farm near Union Center, Ind. He was graduated A. B. at Ohio Wesleyan university in 1872.

His first employment was as agent for the Associated Press at Pittsburgh and Cleveland, from 1872 to 1874. He then studied for the bar and was admitted in Ohio in 1874, and began practicing at Indianapolis, where he has ever since resided.

From this time on he was identified with local and state politics. He presided at the Republican state conventions in 1892 and 1898, and was a delegate at large to the Republican national convention which nominated McKinley in St. Louis in 1896, being chosen temporary chairman.

Elected Vice President in 1904.

At the second McKinley convention in Philadelphia Mr. Fairbanks was chairman of the committee on resolutions. In 1904 he was unanimously chosen to run as vice president with Roosevelt and was elected.

Back in 1893 he aspired to the senate, but was defeated by David Turpie, a Democrat. In 1896, however, he succeeded and served the term from 1897 to 1903, and against was chosen for the term 1903 to 1909. On his nomination for vice president he resigned from the senate.

He served as a member of the joint high British-American commission in 1898, being chairman of the American commissioners. He represented the United States at the tercentenary celebration at Quebec in 1908.

He is a trustee of the Ohio Wesleyan university, of De Pauw university, regent of the Smithsonian institution, president of the Methodist Hospital of Indiana and of the Indiana Forestry association.

He received the degree of A. M. from Ohio Wesleyan in 1875 and L. L. D. in 1901, from Baker university 1903, from Iowa State university in 1903, and from Northwestern university in 1907.

As an attorney Mr. Fairbanks ranks among the most distinguished of his profession in the country. His practice in all the courts of Indiana and at the Supreme court of the United States has been most successful and he has the highest respect from the bar and bench.

One to Be Reckoned With.

It was in the Harrison campaign of 1888 that the leaders of the party came to realize that in Mr. Fairbanks they had not merely a wheel horse who could be depended on for routine work but an enthusiastic yet shrewd worker, a speaker of ability, and one to be reckoned with in the future.

Mr. Fairbanks has always shown a clear understanding of the issues before the people. He is a fluent orator without flourish who really convinces campaign audiences. His aid is always sought by chairmen and readily given.

In the senate he came to the front sooner than most new members. He took part in a number of labor measures in a way to win the commendation of workingmen. He was chairman of the committee on immigration, where, too, he attracted attention by his thorough investigation of the subject. Arbitration between capital and labor is another matter in which he took an active interest.

Mr. Fairbanks in 1874 married Miss Cornelia Cole, who had been in college with him.

Mrs. Fairbanks died Oct. 24, 1913, in Indianapolis, survived by all five of her children. The eldest daughter, Adelaide, is the wife of Lieut. John W. Timmons, U. S. N. The other children are sons, Warren C., Frederick, Richard, and Robert Fairbanks. Frederick attracted some attention to himself in 1906 when he eloped with Miss Helen E. Scott, daughter of a Carnegie steel millionaire.

SON OF HUGHES IN DARK.

Plattsburg, N. Y., June 10.—[Special.]—Charles E. Hughes Jr., who is hiking it with the best of them at the military camp here, had just as much curiosity as any one to find out whether his father had accepted the Republican nomination when word of the convention's choice reached the citizen - soldiers. Young Hughes was in the dark about his father's attitude until a later message told of his acceptance.

STATE LEADERS PLEDGE FEALTY TO THE NOMINEE

Root and Other Candidates Rally Under Banner of Justice Hughes.

BY E. O. PHILLIPS.

New York's Root delegates whipped into line behind Hughes and Fairbanks just as soon as the delegation could be assembled at the Root headquarters after the convention had adjourned. All factional differences in the Empire state were buried and out flashed the promise that New York is good for a 200,000 Republican majority in November.

New York's harmony was symptomatic of the most self-evident spirit of optimism and good feeling that has been recorded in Republican conventions in the last twelve years.

It was echoed in every state delegation. Not a northern state that belongs normally in the Republican column failed to forecast a sweeping victory for national and state tickets next fall.

Telegram Sent to Hughes.

This was the telegram sent to Justice Hughes by John W. Dwight, manager of the Elihu Root campaign, after it had been heard and wildly applauded by the delegates who had stood pat for Root through the convention fight:

"Most sincere congratulations. I feel sure that you will lead the Republican party to victory and redeem the country from an incompetent Democracy. The friends of Elihu Root will give you unqualified and enthusiastic support.

"JOHN W. DWIGHT."

Statement by Harding.

Senator Warren G. Harding, chairman of the convention, expressed the sentiment that was found in every state delegation in this statement:

"No stronger ticket could have been named. Justice Hughes will command the confidence of all American citizens, and will be overwhelmingly elected. Our people have been thinking only of the great judge, but he already has put aside judicial robes and emerges as a fearless and militant Republican leader. This is a great day of restored Republicanism and restored Americanism. His brief acceptance rings clear with a vigor like that of Roosevelt, and has the dignity and force that has characterized Justice Hughes' public career."

Complete satisfaction, without a shadow of complaint, marked the final statements at the campaign headquarters of the candidates who went to defeat in the face of the Hughes landslide as the flags came down.

Senator Sherman's Illinois friends were particularly gratified with the result, the Illinois delegation feeling that their state's action, early yesterday morning, in determining definitely to break to Hughes on the first ballot of the day, had determined the issue in favor of the justice. This belief was well founded, as the enthusiastic compliments and thanks of the Hughes men from New York clearly evidenced.

McCormick's Speech Feature.

Medill McCormick's speech on the convention floor, in which he went the route for Hughes, was one of the features of nomination day that was accepted as marked significance.

"Mr. McCormick's position, so clearly stated, means that Illinois will be Republican beyond the shadow of a doubt. The party is now absolutely unified and harmonized," was the comment of State Chairman Fred E. Sterling.

Republicans from nearly every state commented most favorably upon Mr. McCormick's statement.

Ohio had an impromptu ratification meeting in the Burton headquarters in which more than 1,000 Ohioans joined. Senator Harding read the telegram of acceptance from Mr. Hughes, announcing that he had resigned from the Supreme court bench. The criticism of President Wilson's Mexican and foreign policies was greeted with wild cheers.

"We will carry Ohio for the Republican ticket by 150,000," said Granville W. Mooney, Mr. Burton's campaign manager. "We did the best that we could under the circumstances that developed. The state and the candidates are left in the best possible situation. Senator Burton might have been nominated for vice president, but it did not seem that he could afford to be a candidate for any less position than that of the president. We go back to Ohio with the name of our distinguished leader unsullied and he still stands in as prominent a position as ever."

Massachusetts pointed to the speech of Senator Weeks in withdrawing his name from the consideration of the convention as evidence of the feeling there.

"There is no question about the result in Massachusetts or in New England," Senator Henry Cabot Lodge said. "The nominations, I believe, will be eminently satisfactory to our people."

Iowa Men Satisfied.

Iowa, expressing satisfaction at the fairness and consideration that had been given to the candidacy of Senator Cummins, predicted a sweeping Republican victory in the Hawkeye state. The Wisconsin delegates who followed the leadership of Gov. Philipp were original Hughes men and naturally tremendously pleased with the result. All but two of the La Follette delegates voted for Hughes in the convention. The sentiment was that the Republicans will have no difficulty whatever in Wisconsin.

Views of the Leaders.

THE TRIBUNE secured an expression of the feeling within the delegations from most of the states that are usually Republican as follows:

CALIFORNIA.

J. O. Hayes said: "In spite of Gov. Johnson's influence, I know definitely that California will go strong for Hughes—strong enough to put through our whole state ticket. I know it sounds extravagant, but I have it straight from Roosevelt men. We elect half of the state senate and the entire assembly this year, and we expect to carry them, not despite Hughes but on account of him."

COLORADO.

National Committeeman Dr. Hubert Work: "We expect to renominate and reëlect our present governor and to carry almost all of the state ticket. It is not unlikely that if Roosevelt declines to run, there will be only the Democratic ticket against us, though it is too early to predict. Besides co[illegible]essmen we will elect members of the legislature. Hughes will help the ticket."

INDIANA.

James P. Goodrich, former member of the Republican national committee, asserted: "They can't beat us now. That statement by Mr. Hughes is a dandy. The Indiana Republicans are going to clean house, and we'll just plaster them. Hughes and Fairbanks will carry the state by at least 50,000 with the whole ticket. That means that two Republican senators will go to Congress."

KANSAS.

Congressman Philip Campbell, Congressman D. R. Anthony Jr., and former national committeemen agreed that Justice Hughes will carry the Republican party to victory. "The support of Justice Hughes will grow and strengthen," said A. W. Swayze, a Kansas banker, now a stanch Republican but formerly a Roosevelt enthusiast, "and when the election time comes around Kansas will go Republican."

MASSACHUSETTS.

Gov. Samuel W. McCall said: "Now that Mr. Hughes has been nominated, I believe he will lend great strength to the state ticket. I am looking for a Republican victory in Massachusetts and I don't think the Democrats have a chance."

MICHIGAN.

C. E. Burleigh of Kalamazoo, who says he has been a Roosevelt man for twenty years, made this statement: "If Roosevelt does not run Hughes will carry Michigan by 200,000 without any trouble. We carried the state for Roosevelt by 60,000 in 1912 and this will be easy. I think Roosevelt and the Progressives have shown themselves real men."

Walter J. Hodges, also of Kalamazoo, said: "We're back of Hughes on his declaration of principles. We were Progressives four years ago and thought Roosevelt the logical man for both parties this year. But the main thing is to beat Wilson, and Hughes will do that."

MINNESOTA.

"We are very well satisfied," said State Senator F. A. Duxbury, delegate from Minnesota, "providing, of course, Roosevelt does not run. It has been a Roosevelt state, but it is a Republican state, too, and we are not worrying about Teddy running. He ought to be patriotic enough not to butt in now."

NEBRASKA.

"It was a happy outcome of a situation which might have ended seriously," said E. R. Gurney, chairman of the Nebraska state delegation. "Our state has been friendly to Hughes right along. More than 10,000 voters wrote his name on the ballot in our state and he would have carried it at the recent primary if his name had been printed on the ballot. Wilson is tremendously unpopular because of the Germans and other foreigners in our state. If the prospect of a Republican division can be avoided by the elimination of Roosevelt as a Republican candidate then I can see an easy victory in the state for Mr. Hughes and the whole ticket."

NEW YORK.

Frederick C. Tanner, chairman of the New York state Republican committee, said: "Governor Hughes was chosen because he was the people's choice. The people will support him because they need him; Roosevelt will support him because Roosevelt is patriotic. The Republican party is reunited."

OHIO.

A. R. Johnson, former congressman, said: "You can put Ohio down in the Republican column sure. Every good man in Ohio will vote for the Republican candidates. Fairbanks is as well liked there as he is in Indiana. Of course, Hughes is popular and regarded very highly. The ticket will get all of the Republicans, ninety-five per cent of the Progressives and a great many Democrats who are not at all satisfied with the Wilson administration. The Republican candidates will have a majority of at least 100,000 and probably 150,000." Granville Moody, who was manager of the Burton campaign, indorsed Mr. Johnson's views.

OREGON.

Ralph E. Williams, national committeeman: "There is no question about Hughes helping our state ticket. At present we haven't a single Democrat from Oregon in congress. Roosevelt? Why talk about him now. It's Hughes or Wilson, and there is no question about Hughes being strong enough to carry the state ticket along with the national one. We'll win by 50,000; and what I say for Oregon goes for the whole of the northwest."

PENNSYLVANIA.

"The ticket nominated today will be elected by a decisive vote, and it will carry Pennsylvania by an old time Republican majority," said Senator Penrose. With it will be elected a majority in both branches of congress. Under the peculiar circumstances surrounding the party, brought about by the unfortunate division of 1912, the nomination of Justice Hughes was preëminently the logical outcome. Everybody wants harmony and a healing of dissensions of the past."

LARDNER TALKS TO A BEAUTIFUL LADY

Ring Courteously Answers Her Question Ten Different Ways.

BULLETIN, 12:80 A. M.

Aboard the Slave Special, Bound for St. Louis—All having a grand time and wisht you was here. Grandest scenery I ever seen. They got regular beds on the train that they fold up and use them for seats in the day time. Can't hardly wait to get to St. Louis. Must close and look for a dime to give the porter in the A. M.—Lardner.

BY RING W. LARDNER.

Found out by reading the morning paper that the convention was going to open yesterday's session at ten of the clock, instead of eleven as heretofore. Also found out that it was now ten of the clock and that my badge was at THE TRIBUNE office, twelve miles from Riverside. The way to go from Riverside to the Coliseum is to take a train and get off of it at Sixteenth and Canal and then pray that there'll be an Eighteenth Street car waiting. But THE TRIBUNE office is not located at Sixteenth and Canal or nowheres near it.

I did the best I could and reached the Coliseum at half past eleven. The session hadn't started yet, but began the instant I took my seat. The delegates were evidently finding out whose presence mattered and whose did not and if they had staid here a few more weeks and read the papers every day they might have learned a great deal more.

Here's a Hot One.

The first good thing I said after I set down next to Percy Hammond was as follows:

"Well," I said, "if the Coliseum and all its contents should burn up, what a big help it'd be to the United States."

Then, fearing his feelings might be hurt, I added:

"The only real loss would be that of a popular dramatic critic."

A few rows ahead of us the Rev. Waters from next door, and the Rev. Bryan from Lincoln, but not the same Lincoln you got to keep talking about in a nominating speech, were having a discussion.

I could overhear only a brief snatch of it.

"No," said the Rev. Bryan, "you misunderstood me. What I said was that if Johnson had been himself he could of licked Willard the best day he ever walked."

Mr. Smootah Again.

After Doc Levy had prayed in vain that the convention would do the right thing Mr. Harding introduced Mr. Smootah, it being one of the rules as laid down by Mr. Warren of Michigan that Mr. Smootah must be the first speaker every morning to make it legal. Mr. Smootah read a report of what had came off between his committee, composed of he and Mr. Borax of Idaho and I forget who else, and the same kind of a committee from the Auditorium. I want to say that if reporters on a paper had written an important story the way Mr. Smootah and the Progressive committee and Mr. Roosevelt wrote this here report, the city editor would of took away their police cards and made gravy from their giblets. They left the news till the final paragraph, just like you was going to write up a murder and done it this way:

At 8:35 yesterday morning Lucius Bowen used his toothbrush. At 8:56 he offset this by eating sausage and soft boiled eggs. He then put on his hat and started down to his office. He got there. At 2:30 in the afternoon a man stabbed him to death. The man was jealous. His name was Walter Canning.

A Beautiful Lady.

Mr. Smootah's report, including the Progressive report and the Roosevelt letter, kept us on tender hooks, as they say, and a beautiful lady setting next to me ast me seven or eight times what was going to be the real gist. I give her seven or eight good answers. The report also started off "Chicago, Ill., June 10," in order to keep the degredations from thinking that the confreres had snuck away to Palm Beach for a few hours to talk things over.

What Mr. Roosevelt said in his communication was that he didn't care who the Republicans nominated as long as they nominated Mr. Lodge. This made a big hit with the gallery and had the effect of an overdose of ale on the degregations.

When the cheering had let up Mr. Harding give the platform to Mr. Weeks, whose talk was so short that many of us would of voted for him had he ran. But he says:

"I would rather be happy than be president."

News from Illinois.

Then Illinois got up and says Sherman was through, thinking it was news. Then Mr. Harding says we would have the third ballad. The first fifty or sixty degregations had went for Hughes when Gov. Willis from Ohio rose up and hollered that Sen. Burton had authorized him to withdraw his name from the entry list, or in horse and mosquito parlance, to scratch him. This was considered very unselfish on the part of the Sen. Pretty soon Indiana got up and scratched Mr. Fairbanks of the Wabash. Indiana looked tickled to death, like a spnked child. Then it was up to the New York Rooters to scratch Eli, and we couldn't help wondering what that girl who on Friday had given her larynx to his cause thought about it.

Pennsylvania says it had 72 votes for Hughes and three for Roosevelt and one for Absent, who's a brother of Ibid and Anon.

The voting was gave pause by the uprising of a gentleman from Indiana.

The Chairman's Words.

"Will the gentleman from Indiana," says Mr. Harding, "tell me whyinell he don't set down?" or words to that effect.

"Mr. Chairman," says the guy, "I move that the rules is suspended with and——"

"Sit down!" says everybody, and I and him both felt sorry for him.

The voting finally got all over with at last and they figured up and found out where Hughes had been nominated, which come like a big surprise.

And you should have heard the demonstration!

I remember back in 1905 after Michigan had got beat 2 to 0 and the first beating they had got beat in years and it was Thanksgiving day and the Michigan boys had boughten seats to Hattie Williams' show at the Illinois and their plan was to go down there after their victory and bust up the show, but they didn't get no victory. Well, I was there to that show and the Michigan boys was trying to be game and make light of it and so on. Well, that's what this here demonstration reminded me like yesterday.

Why, Indeed?

And another time I went in the clubhouse at the Cub park just after the Athletics had beat them the last game of the world's series. But why continue?

To make me feel all the better during the big demonstration, I ast Percy Hammond if he knowed when we was going to St. Louis.

"Yes," he says. "Tonight."

I didn't believe him and I ast Mr. Phillips.

"Tonight," he says.

"How long have you fellas knew it?" I ast them.

"A long while," they says.

"Much obliged for being so clubby," I says, and I hope it stang them.

Not That Jonah.

I left the Coliseum soon afterwards and who should I run into but Jonah Kuhio Kalanianole, one of the delegates from Hawaii, and it ain't the Jonah that the whale swallowed or the whale would of choked on his surname.

"Well," I says, "what do you think of the outcome?"

"I do not speak ze Engleesh," he says. So I translated.

"Nun," I ast him, "was denken auf dem Beach at Wakiki?"

"Oloha Oe," he says, meaning "Good-night."

WILSON SILENT ON HUGHES CHOICE AND T. R.'S REFUSAL.

Advisers Say Events Will Not Influence Democratic Campaign—President Speaks This Week.

Washington, D. C., June 10.—No formal comment on the selection of Justice Hughes or on Col. Roosevelt's conditional refusal of the Progressive nomination was made at the White House, and it was said none would be forthcoming. The president's closest advisers did not expect Col. Roosevelt to be a candidate on the Progressive ticket, but made no secret of their hope that he might. They insisted, however, that his refusal would have no effect on the Democratic campaign.

The trend of the president's campaign speeches probably will be indicated in addresses he will deliver Tuesday at the West Point graduation exercises and Wednesday at a Flag day celebration, following a preparedness parade here.

Administration leaders said tonight they expected the campaign to be carried on along dignified lines, with the president paying little attention to personalities and dwelling on the legislative achievements of the last three years, the fact that the United States is at peace, and the prosperity of the nation.

COOK IN A COOL KITCHEN

With the

CALORIC ELECTRIC COOKER

Cord to be connected to any electric light fixture.

Cook by electricity in a compartment so insulated that in baking beans or roasting beef not enough heat escapes to melt a dish of ice cream set on your cooker.

Cheaper Than Gas

Electricity usually costs more than gas, but when used in the Caloric Electric Cooker it costs less.

This is because every iota of heat created is concentrated on the work of cooking. Every bit of heat goes into the food. None escapes into the air.

The food is placed in the cooker and the electricity turned on. When the proper temperature has been reached the current is shut off and the food continues to cook in the heat thus generated, because the heat can not escape through the hermetically sealed wells of the Caloric Electric.

Nor can any odors escape, nor any of the delicious natural flavor of the food. And since the moisture is retained, foods like roasts do not shrink in cooking. This feature alone will save the cost of the Caloric Electric within three months. A patented valve, working automatically, allows just enough steam to escape at proper intervals to keep the food at proper cooking temperature.

ALL REPUBLICANS SEE VICTORY FOR JUSTICE HUGHES

Lawmakers in Capital Unite on New Yorker—Democrats Predict Defeat.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., June 10.—[Special.]—Republicans in the senate and house of representatives generally showed enthusiasm over the nomination of Justice Hughes as the standard bearer of his party.

Democrats did not show much of a desire to talk about it, and there was an apparent strong regret that he had been named. Their professed reason was that they "did not like to see a Supreme justice leave the bench."

The actual reason. Republicans believe, is that they recognize Hughes as a candidate of enormous strength.

Nomination Pros and Cons.

Here are some of the observations:

Senator Cummins of Iowa, Republican—I am a Republican always. I was a candidate before the Republican national convention and abide by its decision. I assume that it is not necessary for me to say that I will support its nominee. I repeat I am a Republican and a good one.

Senator Jones of Washington, Progressive—I have been predicting Justice Hughes' nomination for some time. It seems to me that his nomination ought to unite the party. I cannot see any reason why anybody should object to him. He accepts the platform, of course, in accepting the nomination. I have not any doubt that when he makes his formal speech of acceptance there will not be any question about his attitude on the leading issues of the day. I cannot see any excuse for Republicans not supporting him. I expect him to be elected by a very large majority.

Cites Old Declaration.

Senator Reed of Missouri, Democrat—According to the press reports, a year ago Mr. Justice Hughes wrote to a prominent Republican, E. C. Stokes of New York, and Mr. Stokes sent the justice a copy of the interview the latter had had with Rabbi Wise, and asked him if it expressed his views. The justice is quoted as follows: "I think my statement covered the ground. It seems to me very clear that as a member of the Supreme court I have no right to be a candidate either openly or passively. I cannot remain working here and hold an equivocal position before the country, and I must, therefore, ask that no steps be taken to bring my name before the convention." I agree with the justice that it is not right for him to be a candidate. I do not know that morals and ethics have changed since he made that statement.

Senator Schafroth of Colorado, Democrat—I expected Hughes' nomination. I prefer very much Justice Hughes for the Republican nomination. We Democrats of course, expect to defeat him at the polls, but we will have a good, safe man for president in the event that Hughes should by any chance be elected, as contrasted with some of the other candidates before the conventions in Chicago.

Called High Class Man.

Senator Fletcher of Florida, Democrat—Hughes' nomination is just what I have been expecting for a week or more. I do not know what his views are on the great questions of the day. So far as the Republican platform is concerned, it is so general and vague that you cannot tell what the party stands for. I regard Hughes as a high class man. He has stood for independence in his views and would not be controlled by any party machine. In that respect and in others that might be mentioned I do not believe he differs greatly from President Wilson.

Senator Norris of Nebraska, Republican—Hughes is satisfactory to me.

Senator Hoke Smith of Georgia, Democrat—It is too soon yet to form any estimate of the nomination. I do not want to discuss it.

Senator Vardaman of Mississippi, Democrat—I do not think I care to say anything.

Senator Pomerene of Ohio, Democrat—I am very sorry to see a very great justice of the Supreme court retired to private life.

Senator Bankhead of Alabama—I do not know enough about the situation in Chicago or here to say anything about the nomination of Hughes.

Sees Defeat of Hughes.

Senator Thomas of Colorado (Democrat)—I think Hughes is a stronger man than Roosevelt, but not strong enough to defeat President Wilson. I very much regret the first nomination of a presidential candidate from the Supreme court bench. It is an unfortunate thing, as it will doubtless serve as a precedent, and will tend to weaken the influence of the court among the people.

Senator Page of Vermont (Republican)—The nomination pleases me very much.

Senator Myers of Montana (Democrat)—I believe that President Wilson will beat Hughes. I think the latter is a good man.

Senator Poindexter of Washington (Republican)—It is a great nomination. Hughes' record and character will appeal to the voters of the country. The Republican party can unite on him, and he will have an overwhelming victory.

Representatives James R. Mann of Illinois (Republican), minority leader of the house—The seemingly impossible has happened. The office of president is seeking the man, not the man the office. In the greatest crisis of the world's history America should put forward its best. The American people, by general consensus of opinion, have looked to Mr. Justice Hughes as the ablest man to fill the office of president. This opinion has controlled the Republican convention. He has not desired the office, and has not striven to obtain it, but as a patriot he must yield to public opinion that he is the best fitted to the office in these strenuous times. His calm poise, his broadness of intelligent vision, and his firm determination to uphold the best principles of American liberty and the highest civilization make it certain that when elected the safety of American ideas will be assured under his administration.

Will Carry Illinois.

Representative Chiperfield of Illinois (Republican)—I think Hughes' nomination will be generally acceptable to Republicans in Illinois. The nomination of Fairbanks for vice president makes up a fine ticket. I have no doubt it will carry the state by 150,000 majority.

Representative Hawley of Oregon (Republican)—I am satisfied from the top of the sky to the center of the earth. You know we started the Hughes movement in earnest in Oregon. His nomination means a Republican president in 1917.

Representative Stiness of Rhode Island (Republican)—Hughes' nomination means a Republican president, and, so far as Rhode Island is concerned, a Republican senator and three Republican members of the house from that state.

Representative Johnson of Washington, Republican—Hughes will be elected.

FAIRBANKS' SON IS THICK.

Charles Warren Fairbanks' son Freddie is so thin he got lost behind a fish pole on the lake front. He was rescued by friends who followed the noise made by his new spring suit.

REPUBLICAN PRESS PREDICTS VICTORY FOR HUGHES

Without exception the Republican press of the country, which so far has expressed itself on the Republican choice of Charles E. Hughes for president, believes the former justice is the right man for the place. Many express the hope that Col. Roosevelt will join in a movement to defeat Wilson. The Democratic press indicate a belief that the party is facing a hard fight in November.

REPUBLICAN COMMENT.

NEW YORK CITY.

NEW YORK SUN [Rep.]—The Sun accepts with alacrity the opportunity to support for president of the United States a man like Charles Evans Hughes against the man that Woodrow Wilson has shown himself to be. We hold with Col. Roosevelt that it would be a crime against this nation to continue in power for four years longer the administration thus by him impeached.

NEW YORK PRESS [Rep.]—There is no doubt that Mr. Hughes' acceptance, as this paper reads and as the country will receive it, will confirm Col. Roosevelt in his determination to reunite the Republican party in the purpose of taking the United States government out of the control of the Democratic party, so that the nation's interest, safety, and honor may not be further endangered.

NEW YORK.

ALBANY EVENING JOURNAL [Rep.] (owned by William Barnes)—They have nominated a Republican whose character and ability make him worthy to be the standard bearers of his party. Charles Evans Hughes' judicial temperament, which, with his legal ability, gained for him a place in the highest judicial tribunal of the United States, will be a valuable asset in the position of chief executive of the nation, which now more than in many years will require a clear and level mind, free from the influence of impulses and excitable emotions. Also he has the firmness that will not permit wavering when the right course is determined.

PENNSYLVANIA.

PHILADELPHIA INQUIRER [Rep.]—The nomination of Charles E. Hughes represents the subordination of preference to prudence, ambition to expediency, and of sentiment to reason. Justice Hughes' public career has been one of exceptional, of extraordinary, of disconcerting brevity.

PHILADELPHIA PRESS [Rep.]—It is recognized that he (Hughes) is a man that no other man or coterie of men can handle or dictate to in the smallest degree. He is his own master. His mind earnestly seeks the truth, and, having found it, adheres to it inflexibly.

PITTSBURGH DISPATCH [Rep.]—The selection of Hughes probably represents the inclinations as well as the expectations of the body of Republican voters throughout the country. On the dominating issue of preparedness it is believed Mr. Hughes will be found neither militarist nor pacifist.

PITTSBURGH LEADER [Rep.]—There are doubtless many Republicans who will feel some sense of disappointment that Col. Roosevelt is not the nominee, but Col. Roosevelt himself is so good an American that he will support Mr. Hughes when Mr. Hughes has declared himself for those principles which are more to Col. Roosevelt than the presidency.

PITTSBURGH PRESS [Rep.]—Col. Roosevelt, by refusing provisionally to accept the Progressive party nomination, apparently is about to vindicate the affectionately enthusiastic admiration of his millions of partisans by showing that when the interests of faction or party conflict with the interests of all America, even of all humanity, he is a factionist and partisan no longer.

PITTSBURGH GAZETTE-TIMES [Rep.]—Charles Evans Hughes is a candidate behind whom all the Republicans can rally with assurance that he will be elected and give the country an administration at Washington restoring our nation to the position to which it is entitled in the world at large and assuring preparedness, protection, and permanent prosperity at home.

MASSACHUSETTS.

BOSTON HERALD (Rep.)—Common sense and common patriotism have triumphed at Chicago in the nomination of Charles E. Hughes. It is the best selection that could have been made; it does honor to the American electorate and affords new vindication of the sustained power of our great democracy.

OHIO.

CLEVELAND LEADER [Rep.]—Charles Evans Hughes has given his countrymen ample proof of his ability to make a notable and in every way successful president. No one can picture him as lacking in patriotic devotion to his country; it is unimaginable that he should truckle to any secret influence or bend to open pressure. Republicans, truue Progressives, and independents can join in working for his election.

MINNESOTA.

ST. PAUL PIONEER PRESS [Rep.]—Justice Hughes has broke his long silence with a statement that has all of the superficial evidences of sincerity and seems calculated to meet the demand of the moment. But the perplexing feature of the situation is the attitude of Col. Roosevelt. He has occupied the position abandoned by Justice Hughes and become the sphinx of the hour.

MISSOURI.

ST. LOUIS GLOBE DEMOCRAT [Rep.]—The honor and dignity of the party have been maintained. We have surrendered nothing. If Roosevelt decides to run the country will understand he is not actuated by patriotism.

CALIFORNIA.

SAN FRANCISCO CHRONICLE [Rep.]—There can be no doubt concerning the outcome of the campaign. No matter what action may be taken by the so-called Progressives, it will prove negligible, because they no longer have a party nor an organization. The vast majority of those formerly connected with the movement will act on the declaration of their erstwhile leader, that it is vitally necessary to defeat Wilson.

WASHINGTON.

SEATTLE TIMES [Rep.]—Roosevelt, although no longer the dominant figure in the anti-Democratic lineup, still is a vital factor in all Republican calculations. He may not be able to elect Hughes, but he certainly can defeat him. At this time, with his future policy still a closed book and with the decision of the country on the Hughes declaration of principles a matter of speculation, it looks like Wilson—probably after a harder fight than in 1912 and by a reduced electoral vote, but Wilson, nevertheless.

DEMOCRATIC COMMENT.

NEW YORK CITY.

NEW YORK WORLD [Dem.]—In nominating Justice Hughes for president the Republican party has paid to Woodrow Wilson the highest compliment it was capable of paying to him. It has taken the Republican Wilson to be its standard bearer because it did not dare take anybody who presented a contrast to the Democratic Wilson.

PENNSYLVANIA.

PHILADELPHIA RECORD [Dem.]—Of all the candidates whose names were placed in nomination at the Republican convention Justice Hughes is undoubtedly the foeman most worthy of Woodrow Wilson's steel.

PITTSBURGH POST [Dem.]—With the nomination by the Republican national convention of Charles Evans Hughes, and with the tentative declination by Theodore Roosevelt to head a third party ticket, the prospects at this writing are that the campaign this year will resume the form of a straight test between the Democrats and the Republicans.

MISSOURI.

ST. LOUIS REPUBLIC [Dem.]—The Republican party has nominated a man whose attitude toward these "American" issues was not known. Everything had been made ready, including the resignation from the Supreme court and the telegram of acceptance. And Hughes "thawed."

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH [Ind. Dem.]—Roosevelt's colossal bluff was called. The political event of greatest significance at Chicago was his complete and final repudiation by the Republican party. Hughes' initial statement deals with critical generalities. He suggests no vital issues.

INDEPENDENT COMMENT

MASSACHUSETTS.

BOSTON POST [Ind.]—Justice Hughes is a good man, and he will be a strong candidate. He is honorable, able, and, or at least once seemed to be, somewhat progressive as confirmed Republicans go. He will, we feel, make a campaign of dignity, decency, and courtesy, but a nomination and an election are two different things this year.

PHILADELPHIA PUBLIC LEDGER [Ind.]—The nomination of Justice Hughes should put new life and hope into the Republican party, cement the loyalty of every true Republican, and win the ungrudging support of that vast and growing element among the American people which is disposed to put the character and honor of public officials above mere partisan labels.

LAUNCH HUGHES CAMPAIGN

"Uncle Joe," Gov. Whitman, and Others Start Things Going at Hamilton Club Rally.

THE Hughes presidential campaign was launched last night at the Hamilton club with an old time political rally. Several Republicans who expect to take the stump for Mr. Hughes made their first speeches in behalf of his candidacy.

"Uncle Joe" Cannon, Gov. Whitman of New York, Senator Reed Smoot of Utah, and Myron T. Herrick of Ohio were among those who talked. Congressman Cannon told about a visit which he and his daughter made some time ago to the Hughes home in Washington.

"As we were leaving," stated Mr. Cannon, "I said to him: 'Mr. Justice, you will be, in my judgment, the next president of the United States,' And he said: 'O, no; I'm not a candidate. I'm not going to be a candidate.'

"Mrs. Hughes said: 'No, his future is in his present position.'

"There is a sentiment all over the country that this is the man. He was not seeking the nomination, but it had to come to him."

MAIL AWAITS POLITICIANS.

Stacks of Letters Accumulate in Michigan Avenue Hotels for Guests Who Have Gone.

General delivery pigeon holes in candidate's row hotels tonight are full of undelivered mail for well known Americans. A great many of these letters probably never will be delivered. A casual glance through the stacks choking the boxes discloses mail for Theodore Roosevelt, Victor Murdock, Ogden L. Mills, Henry Moscowitz, Thomas A. Edison, Hiram Johnson, Charles E. Hughes, W. J. Bryan, and others.

ALL HAD CHANCE AT CONVENTION OF THE UNBOSSED

Roosevelt, Old Guard, and Galleries Fail to Shake Calm Deliberation of Delegates.

BY E. O. PHILLIPS.

It was an unbossed convention at the Coliseum.

After all was over and there was time to take stock of what had happened these distinguishing features were outstanding as compared particularly with some preceding conventions:

Cool, calm deliberation marked every move.

Theodore Roosevelt couldn't boss it. The Old Guard couldn't boss it, and the galleries couldn't boss it.

Each and every candidate had his day in court and every possible chance to do what he could for himself without outside influence or intimidation or hindered by manipulation within the convention itself.

When the delegates themselves had made up their minds they proceeded to nominate. No orders came from hidden hedquarters. No signals were flashed Nothing was cooked up by an inner circle which controlled deliverable votes.

Penrose Bows to Delegates.

At the first roll call the remarkable scene was witnessed of Senator Boies Penrose of Pennsylvania asking the chairman of the convention that the delegation of which he was chairman be polled so that he could announce the real vote of the state, which never was split in the time of Matt Quay and not in Penrose's reign until 1912.

Penrose was two or three moments behind New York. Gov. Whitman had demanded and secured a poll of his delegation, the roll was called, and each man voted as he wished.

The second ballot came along, and Gov. McCall secured a poll of Massachusetts, and former Senator Murray Crane, "than whom there is no whomer" in the days when the Old Guard was in its prime, and Senator Lodge and Senator Weeks' alternate and all the rest of them, came into the open and cast their individual votes.

"Six months ago I said that the nominee would be born in the convention, and he was," is the concise verdict of Chairman Charles D. Hilles of the old national committee.

As long ago as the national committee meeting in December it was clear that no machine or artificial combination would control the Chicago convention and dictate the nominee. The fact that delegates would be elected in twenty-one states by direct primaries was responsible for the consciousness of the inner circle that 1912 would not repeat. There was no Republican administration in Washington, and the south, with its restricted representation was not the quondam fertile field for the northern campaign manager with administration backing.

"On the Square."

The word went around, quietly but effectively, that the convention would be "on the square," and the best man would win. If this had not been believed the crop of favorite sons would have been much smaller.

It is known that expert and able politicians in each one of the camps of the allies had the thorough and consistent belief that his particular candidate had as good a chance for the big money as any other. The idea is that these experts could not and would not have jobbed themselves into any such conclusion, knowing as much as they do about national politics, if they thought the cards had been stacked.

As John W. Dwight, Root's campaign manager, said at night: "This has been the most representative body of men that ever has met in a political convention. It was a convention above suspicion; a convention that acted honorably and with the sole purpose of conserving the best interests of the nation. It was a legal convention, elected under primary laws and in accord with party precedents. After mature consideration, without spectacular effects and in the calm conviction that it has acted wisely and well, the convention has made its nominations."

2,000 Pages of Testimony.

When the national committee met to consider the comparatively few contests presented it approached the contests judicially. More than 2,000 pages of testimony were taken in the case of the four delegates at large from Georgia. Contests were settled on their merits, it is now agreed by both sides to the contests. Men of opposite facions were seated in the same state and the losers did not seriously press their causes before the credentials committee.

All through the convention the one time bosses sat quietly and with nothing to say or do except wait for the balloting to start. When the voting did start about all they could do was to cast their own votes. The convention itself did the rest.

ROOSEVELT MAY QUIT MOOSE AND SUPPORT HUGHES

Delegates Denounce Perkins for Effort to Compromise with the G. O. P.

and Americanism for days, took on a pacifist spectacle.

With Roosevelt apparently out of it the preparedness issue was lost sight of, and prohibition and semi-pacifism stalked into the great theater, eliciting shouts of approval. Even William Jennings Bryan, who was in the audience, was given an ovation.

Meantime, too, with the hero of Oyster Bay out of the cast, the insurgent leaders tore loose with bitter criticism of Perkins and his aids for having led them up into the high mountain of hopes of a reunited party with T. R. at the head and then leaving them stranded without even T. R. to appeal to.

Victor Murdock, the national chairman, whose heart was heavy and whose wrath was hot, led the pacifist spirits in the final minutes of a convention which had refused to listen to anything but Roosevelt's preparedness for days.

Compliment to Bryan.

After flaying Perkins and his forces he pointed out Mr. Bryan and paid him the compliment of "being sincere." He said Bryan was going to get at St. Louis a dose of what the Progs had gotten here in Chicago, and that eventually there would be a fourth ticket in the field, with prohibition and pacifism the great issues, headed by Mr. Bryan and Henry Ford of Detroit.

In the midst of the pacifist enthusiasm aroused, calls for contributions to a campaign fund brought quick and substantial responses, some of the contributors pledging themselves individually to $10,000 each.

This fund, Chairman Robins said, will be used not only in perpetuating the Progressive party, but in making a hot campaign this fall. But with Roosevelt out of the cast, most of the leaders see little in the immediate future for the Progressive party, either as an organization or as an influential movement in this country.

Speculation as to who will lead the Moose ticket in the event of Roosevelt's eventual elimination carried the names of Raymond Robins, Victor Murdock, and Chester Rowell of California.

Call for Nominations.

At the opening of the 3 o'clock session Chairman Robins announced a message from Oyster Bay was on its way to the convention hall and counseled delay. While waiting the delegates clamored for Victor Murdock, but it was found he was not in the hall. Then there were calls for Henry J. Allen of Kansas, and finally Chairman Robins decided to give in to their impatience and proceed with the nominations for vice president.

When California was reached on the roll call by states there were shouts of "Johnson! Johnson!" but a delegate from California arose and announced that that state would pass for the time being. Uproarious laughter was provoked when Indiana was reached by a call for "Mr. Fairbanks."

Robins Refuses Job.

Declaring that the party needed a man who "stood strongly for the social and industrial program," H. P. Gardner of Maine named Raymond Robins, but the chair declined by saying he had no time for honorable mention, and there was no second.

Delegate Everett Colby of New Jersey then named Col. John M. Parker, the "rebel captain from Louisiana," and the crowd went wild. The nomination was seconded by delegates from Connecticut, Georgia, Iowa, Ohio, Kentucky, Missouri, New York, and other states. A delegate from Kentucky named Hiram Johnson, but the governor of California declined in a speech seconding the nomination of Col. Parker and a plea for the convention to nominate him to cement the party in the north and south.

"Shoulder to Shoulder."

"Now in these last hours of the convention," he said, "we'll fight shoulder to shoulder a good fight. We've fought not in vain to win and now we find every candidate is, or claims to be, a Progressive. There has been real achievement for our nation. Whether we continue to fight—and I promise you it will be continued in our western states—we have missed no opportunity."

James R. Garfield of Ohio took the gavel and Chairman Robins seconded the nomination for Illinois. Judge W. L. Howell of Louisiana thanked the convention for the tribute to the state's native son. On motion of Mr. Robins the roll call was suspended, and when Acting Chairman Garfield called for the vote the entire convention rose in a body and shouted a deafening roar of ayes.

The entire crowd cheered as Gov. Johnson and Henry J. Allen escorted Col. Parker to the platform, where he made a brief address of thanks and pledged himself to do his utmost to promote the principles for which the party stands.

Victor Murdock Critical.

Victor Murdock was recognized and announced a meeting of the national committee in the Auditorium hotel immediately after adjournment. At first he refused to go to the platform in answer to the insistent calls for a speech, but finally consented when Chairman Robins sent an usher after him.

"I see we beat the Republicans today by about thirty seconds," he said. "It is my hope that we beat them worse than that next November. The people down at the Coliseum have got what they think is a band wagon. If any of this crowd attempt to get aboard it they will find it is an ice wagon.

"I want to say here that if I had had my way we would have beat them by two days. When I came up here on this platform on Wednesday I found Col. Parker loaded——"

The crowd cheered.

Thinks Delay Harmful.

"Loaded," continued the speaker, "with a nomination speech for Theodore Roosevelt. He wanted them to do it then. I wanted them to do it then. I feel now that things may have been different had we done this sooner. When I came to Chicago I felt that the Progressive party was going to do in a straightforward manner what it came here to do—to name Theodore Roosevelt. Instead I have sat here for three days in a regular hell of humiliation and seen our party dickering in star chamber sessions, in the dark places, using the old political tricks.

"They used that oldest of all political schemes—delay. We met the same thing in Washington. Delay, delay, delay. I am not a Republican; I am a Progressive. I have always found that when a Progressive meets a Republican half way he gets the worst of it. I was against it, but some of us thought some things could be gained by a conference. You have seen the result. Now I think the colonel should tell us frankly and openly that he is our candidate so we may go out and fight for him.

"I am going to tell you a little something about playing politics. Luck may be with us in the coming campaign. You know why."

Bryan Blushes in Limelight.

"Why!" chorused the delegates.

"I'll tell you why."

He looked around the stage and asked in tones audible to the delegates, "Is he here?"

"Is who here?" asked several of those near the platform.

"William Jennings Bryan," replied Murdock.

All eyes were turned to where Col. Bryan's face was visible in the press stand. There was a broad smile on his face, and he blushed a deep red from his chin to his bald head as Murdock nodded a greeting.

The crowd cheered until the chairman was compelled to rap for order in a preparedness convention to avert a demonstration for one of the country's stanchest pacifists. The yells for Bryan stopped only when Murdock held up his hand and continued.

"William Jennings Bryan," he said, "true to his convictions, is a rock ribbed, dyed in the wool pacifist and prohibitionist. There is something interesting going to happen at the convention of the Democratic party. Down at St. Louis they are going to try to force a strong militaristic and preparedness plank down Bryan's throat. And William Jennings Bryan is not going to swallow it. I expect to see a new ticket in the race—a pacifist and prohibition ticket with William J. Bryan and Henry Ford at its head."

Sums for Convention.

When he had finished Chairman Robins said the convention had showed its spirit in words and that it now should back up those words with deeds by contributing to a convention contribution. He called for contributions of not less than $10,000. Sums of this amount were pledged by Louis Emory of Pennsylvania and Mrs. John B. [illegible] of Baltimore and Texas.

The New Jersey delegation pledged $20,000 and sums of $5,000 were offered by Gifford Pinchot, Mrs. Carl B. Wood of Connecticut, William Flinn of Pennsylvania, William Decker of Pennsylvania, Delegate Timkin of Canton, O., Irving Kirkwood of the Kansas City Star, and others. More than $100,000 in all was pledged.

George W. Perkins then delivered what one delegate characterized as a "funeral address." He admitted, he said, that some mistakes may have been made, but that he thought the party's record as a whole was one to be proud of. He was brief.

"Bunked at Finish."

Col. Roosevelt's message was then read.

"Bunked at the finish," was the comment of one delegate at its conclusion.

"I think Col. Roosevelt would not have thrown such a damper on things if he had said he would withhold his acceptance for a while, instead of using the word 'decline,'" said another.

Mr. Garfield moved that the colonel's letter be approved and given to the executive committee, and it was so ordered.

The delegates filed out of the Auditorium and, although it was not raining, the "atmosphere" was extremely damp.

The holding of the Moose delegates for the final act right up to the last minute produced a dramatic situation.

Hope that Roosevelt might be taken by the Republicans was abandoned by nearly all the delegates as they filed into the convention hall. They wanted to go ahead and have it done without further parleying with or waiting on the Coliseum people.

Sit on Lid.

It took the combined efforts of Theodore Roosevelt himself, Chairman Robins, George W. Perkins, James R. Garfield, and John M. Parker of Louisiana to hold down the lid.

With their ears glued to the telephone over which every act in the Coliseum convention was being flashed to the platform in the Auditorium the leaders waited, heart sick and crushed over the impending defeat of Roosevelt as the Republican standard bearer, but outwardly smiling to the sea of impatient faces turned toward them.

Everybody knew what the program was. Failing to stem the Hughes tide in the Coliseum convention, the Moosers were to get Roosevelt nominated in their convention and do it first. Whatever else was to transpire that was now the one end in view—beat the Republicans to it with T. R. in his own convention.

Repeatedly it seemed that the delegates could not be held down. They broke loose time and again and threatened to "do it now," but Raymond Robins, wielding the hammer with both hands, and all the convention aids waving their hands to the delegates to sit down, brought them back to a state of suppressed eagerness until word came of the impeding nomination of Hughes in the Coliseum. Then the nomination of Roosevelt was rushed ahead.

RADICAL MOOSE FIRM FOR PARTY

Determined to Keep Up the Fight Despite Roosevelt Action.

PERKINS KEEPS SILENT.

BY H. L. RENNICK.

[UNITED PRESS STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Some Bull Moose leaders last night favored acceptance of the colonel's tentative refusal as a definite rejection of the nomination and of the party. Others believed he could be persuaded to run. The most radical Progressives, determined to continue the party at any cost, were ready to nominate another man as their presidential candidate.

Among them were the western Progresives, leaders in states where the Progressive party has won political control.

John M. Parker of Louisiana, nominated by the Progessives as their vice presidential candidate, pledged himself, in an address delivered shortly before the convention adjourned late this afternoon, to continue the fight.

Governor Hiram Johnson of California, declaring he had been heartbroken all week, said: "We are going to keep on with the fight, especially on the Pacific coast."

"The Progressive movement will go on," said Gifford Pinchot, "and I hope it will be under the name of the Progressive party."

"We may have another candidate," said Benjamin Griffith of Grand Junction, Colo., a leader of the Bull Moose in his state.

"The party should continue despite the action of its leader," said Austin E. Griffiths, national committeeman from Washington state.

Raymond Robins, the chairman of the convention; James R. Garfield of Ohio and Victor Murdock of Kansas and others pledged themselves to keep up the fight.

But George W. Perkins, chairman of the Progressive executive committee, who fought hardest for a compromise with the Republicans, said nothing about continuing the fight. Neither did he offer to aid the financing of a campaign when Robins called for contributions before adjournment.

Sixty-five thousand dollars was pledged, but the convention had not heard of Col. Roosevelt's tentative refusal at that time.

29,866 Eight Cylinder Cadillacs have been built and sold in the last twenty months.

29,866 Cadillac Eights in twenty months means nearly 1,500 per month—nearly 60 cars per working day—a larger production than that of any car at half the Cadillac price.

29,866 Cadillac Eights at $2,080 each means over $60,000,000 invested by the most discriminating buyers in the world—largely on faith in Cadillac ability and integrity.

29,866 Cadillac buyers have given the Cadillac Eight the most marvelous reception—the most amazing market—ever dreamed of for a high grade car.

29,866 Cadillac Eights in successful use today constitute a broader, truer proof of Cadillac quality than any high grade car has ever had.

29,866 Cadillac Eights in twenty months is a greater number than any maker of high grade cars (price $2,000 or over) has ever produced in twenty years.

29,866 Cadillac Eights in twenty months is a greater number than that produced of all the other cars combined selling at $2,000 or more.

And These

29,866 Cadillac Eights have been bought in twenty months because the Cadillac offers a combination not procurable in any other car at any price.

That Is

The combination of velvety smoothness in action—eager, responsive power—marvelous ease of handling—design that leads the industry—high grade construction beyond question—proof of all of these by performance—and value for the money which is admittedly unequalled.

Painful Swollen Veins Quickly Relieved and Reduced

Mrs. R. M. Remler, of Federal, Kansas, writes an interesting account of her success in reducing a severe case of enlarged veins that should be encouraging to others similarly afflicted. She suffered with badly swollen and inflamed veins (in fact, one had broken) for more than seven years before she became acquainted with Absorbine, Jr., and used it. Absorbine, Jr., was faithfully applied for several weeks, and to quote from her letter, "The large knots in the veins left, it was all nicely healed and has not bothered me since."

Absorbine, Jr., is an antiseptic liniment—healing, cooling, and soothing. Safe and pleasant to use. $1.00 and $2.00 at your druggist's or postpaid. Liberal trial bottle postpaid for 10c in stamps.

CHICAGO FRIENDS OF COLONEL HOPE HE WILL NOT RUN

Admirers Fear Third Candidate Would Elect Wilson, as Four Years Ago.

After hearing of Col. Roosevelt's conditional declination to accept the Progressive nomination, and while yet uncertain whether he would make it permanent, there was generally expressed hope among Chicago admirers of the Colonel that he would finally elect to support Hughes. They said that if he ran the most he could do was to bring about the conditions of 1912—though there were many who thought he could have but a fraction of the strength he had then.

Men who were for Roosevelt before the convention declare they will throw their support to Hughes even if Roosevelt should make the mistake of running.

Some of Their Views.

Some of the expressions follow:

Arthur L. Farwell, member of Roosevelt Republican committee—I will vote for Hughes even if Roosevelt should decide to run. I don't think Roosevelt will make the race. I hope not. If he runs and splits the Republican vote again Wilson will be elected. Hughes satisfies me. I think if Roosevelt stays out of the race Hughes will defeat Wilson. I think he will make a fine president.

A. A. Sprague II., member Roosevelt Republican committee—If Roosevelt declines to support Hughes I will work with the Republican party. As the nominee of my party I will give Hughes my best support.

James B. Forgan—It is a duty Col. Roosevelt owes to the country and the Republican party to decline entering a third party into the race. Col. Roosevelt is a great man, but it would spell certain ruin for the principles advocated by the Progressive and the Republican platforms if he entered a third party and split the vote. It would result in the same situation developed in 1912. I hope Col. Roosevelt will decline to split the party.

John G. Shedd, president Marshall Field & Co.—I am greatly pleased at the nomination of Justice Hughes. He is the most available man in the country for the presidency. I believe Col. Roosevelt will see the inadvisability of a split. Justice Hughes advocates the very principles indorsed by Col. Roosevelt. He has the courage to carry out his convictions and if Col. Roosevelt desires his own principles carried out I think he will give his support. I feel that he will.

Former Gov. C. S. Deneen—I think Hughes makes an excellent candidate in all respects, and I believe that Fairbanks is a great strength to the ticket. Hughes was the only man of presidential size before the convention who was not mixed up in the bitter fight of 1912. Republicans and Progressives should find it very congenial to come together and give him their earnest support. I think he will make a powerful and determined president.

Harry Pratt Judson, president University of Chicago—I have known Justice Hughes for many years and know him as a man who is well equipped to handle any situation that may arise. He is a big man and will make an ideal president. I hope and believe Mr. Roosevelt will decline to enter as a third candidate. In the event he decides to run there is little doubt that it will result in a Democratic victory. The platforms of the Progressive and Republican parties are almost identical and there is no reason why personality should be injected into the situation.

Arthur Swanson, acting dean Northwestern University School of Commerce—Mr. Hughes is the strongest man the Republican party could select. Mr. Roosevelt wouldn't pull as well as Mr. Hughes because of the antagonism developed in the last four years. I don't think Hughes will favor the pro-German interests as has been intimated. I think he would be for the welfare of America. I, however, am for Wilson. Mr. Roosevelt has done a great service as an agitator. His awakening of the people in the last few months is a distinct benefit, but I should rather leave the executive end of his policies to Hughes or Wilson. While speaking of preparedness I hope the candidates will awake to the need of industrial preparedness.

A. W. Harris, president Northwestern university—I don't think Hughes can be elected. I don't think he ought to be. Any party which selects a man who has refrained from taking a stand and making his views known should be defeated. Hughes may make a very good president. He may make a very bad one. It is like buying a pig in a poke.

ROOSEVELT'S APPEAL FOR PEACE WITH LODGE STANDARD BEARER

Col. Roosevelt's telegram of appeal for harmony and urging Senator Lodge as a fusion candidate for president as read to the Republican and Progressive conventions follows:

To the Conferees of the Progressive Party:

Gentlemen: I understand that this morning you are to have your last conference with the conferees of the Republican national convention, that they have repeatedly asked you to present for their consideration a second choice, but that your committee has not seen its way clear to do this.

For months I have thought of this matter, and for the last few weeks it has been the chief thing of which I have thought, as I feel with all my heart that it is the imperative duty of all of us who wish to see our country restored to the position she should hold to sink all minor differences and come together if by any possibility we can find a common standing ground.

Recalls Jackson Message.

The day before yesterday in my telegram to Senator Jackson, I said:

"Can we not, forgetting past differences, now join for the safety and honor of our country to enforce the policies of genuine Americanism and genuine preparedness? Surely we can afford to act in accordance with the words of Abraham Lincoln when he said, 'May not all having a common interest reunite in a common effort to save our common country? May we not ask those who have not differed with us to join in the same spirit toward those who have?'

"As far as my soul is known to me it is in this same spirit that at this time I make my appeal to the Republicans and Progressives assembled in Chicago."

Means It Now.

What I thus said I meant with all my soul, and I mean it now; and I ask you and the members of the Progressive convention, which I am informed applauded that telegram when read to the convention, now to help me make those words good by our deeds.

I deeply appreciate your loyalty to me and the position in support of me which you have taken. But it would be an injustice both to you and myself not to regard that loyalty to me as fundamentally a loyalty to the principles you and I represent.

In the statement of the Progressive national committee issued in January last and in my statement made at Trinidad in February last we pledged ourselves to leave nothing undone to reach an honorable agreement with the Republicans in order to achieve the end we have in view.

Suggests Lodge as Compromise.

In view of the conditions existing, I suggest the name of Senator Lodge of Massachusetts. He is a man of the highest integrity, of the broadest national spirit, and of the keenest devotion to the public good. For thirty years he has been in the house of representatives and in the senate at Washington. For twenty years he has been a member of the foreign affairs committee. For a long period he was a member of the naval affairs committee.

He has not only a wide experience in public affairs but a peculiarly close acquaintance with the very type of question that now is pressing for settlement. He has consistently fought for preparedness, preparedness for the navy, preparedness in fortifying the Panama canal, preparedness in upbuilding the army.

Points to His Record.

He has been on the whole the member with the largest vision and the most intelligent devotion to American needs that we have had on the foreign affairs committee during this generation. He rendered distinguished service on the Alaskan boundary international commission.

In addition, he has been one of the staunchest fighters for different measures of economic reform in the direction of justice, championing such measures as the pure food law, the safety appliance law, the workmen's compensation act, the national law prohibiting the labor of children, the Hepburn rate bill, the bill creating a bureau of corporations, and many similar measures.

Asks Name Be Presented.

I, therefore, urge upon you favorably to consider his name and report on it to the conferees from the Republican national convention, and if you do not agree with me in this respect, nevertheless to transmit this telegram to the Republican conferees and to request them to place it before their convention, at the same time yourself laying the telegram before the convention.

Let me again quote from my telegram of the day before yesterday to Senator Jackson of Maryland: "The differences that have divided not merely Republicans and Progressives, but good Americans of all shades of political belief from one another in the past, sink into nothing when compared with the issues which now demand decision, for these issues are vital to the national life.

Unified Americanism His Plea.

"They are the issues of a unified Americanism and of national preparedness. If we are not all of us Americans and nothing else, scorning to divide along lines of section, of creed, or of national origin, then the nation itself will crumble into dust. If we are not thoroughly prepared, if we have not developed a strength which respects the rights of others, but which is also ready to enforce from others respect for its own rights, then sooner or later we shall have to submit to the will of an alien conqueror."

I wrote the above sentences because I felt them deep in my heart. They set forth the vital needs of this time. The nomination of Senator Lodge will meet those vital needs. I earnestly ask that what you can do to bring about that nomination in the name of our common Americanism be done.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

HARDING FINDS CHICAGO GREAT CONVENTION CITY.

Chairman of Republican Meeting Says City Did Handsomely by Delegates—Praises Hospitality.

"Chicago is a great convention city," said Senator Warren G. Harding, chairman of the Republican convention. "It has done handsomely by the great gathering of Republicans, and I think they are all eminently satisfied with convention arrangements and the bestowal of Chicago's hospitality. So far as the presiding officer knows, everything has been eminently pleasing."

Just before Mr. Harding's gavel fell on the words: "This convention is adjourned, sine die," Will H. Hayes of Indiana moved a vote of thanks to Mayor Thompson. The motion was seconded by Senator Penrose and the galleries were delighted at the demonstrative affirmative accorded the resolution.

Hints He Will Not Head Third Ticket—Justice's Message Is Acceptable.

paper correspondents that he would receive them it was at the end of a day in which he had sought seclusion in the gunroom of his big house on the hilltop and during which he had kept in constant touch over the telepphone with the men who were fighting for him in Chicago.

Relates Message to the Moose.

He came into the library dressed in his khaki suit and smiling. He said "Hello," and, turning to his secretary, asked him to go upstairs to watch the telephone in his absence. Then he motioned toward the chairs and said, with a grin:

"What have I got to say? Nothing at all; nothing.'"

Then he offered to tell them what he had said over the telephone to the Progressive national committee.

He related how he had told them that if they wanted an immediate answer to their nomination it would have to be "No," otherwise he would give them a conditional refusal. They were to consider Justice Hughes' statement and to report to him whether or not they deemed it satisfactory. If they found it satisfactory and he found their conclusion satisfactory to him, then the conditional refusal to accept their nomination would become absolute.

Silent on Hughes' Message.

"I leave it to the party to decide," he said.

"Then your decision is not final yet?" he was asked.

"No, my decision is not final yet," he replied, but more in the manner of hopelessly repeating something somebody else has said than in a sentient statement of his own.

"And you will say nothing about Justice Hughes' statement?" he was asked. No, he would say nothing about it, he said.

He was asked if he had any idea when the Progressive national committee would make its decision. He said he had no idea. He pointed out that his proposal of Senator Lodge as a compromise candidate had been presented to the Republican convention before the third ballot was taken. He went on to say that at 4 o'clock this morning he was talking over his special wire to two of the Progressive harmony conferees and one of the Republican conferees.

They had discussed the situation and the colonel had made his suggestion of Senator Lodge as a candidate upon whom both parties could agree. At that time, the colonel said tonight, his proposal was just what the Republican conferee had wanted, and he had said so.

"And now, gentlemen," the colonel announced, "I'll say good-by. There's no use of your coming up here again or staying in town." He held out his hand. "I'll have nothing at all to say."

"But you'll say something when the Progressive committee reports to you," some one interposed.

"Maybe, but that news will come from them. Good-by."

He began shaking hands all around and with something of his old gayety said, "I hate to see you go, for you add to the scenic features of Oyster Bay."

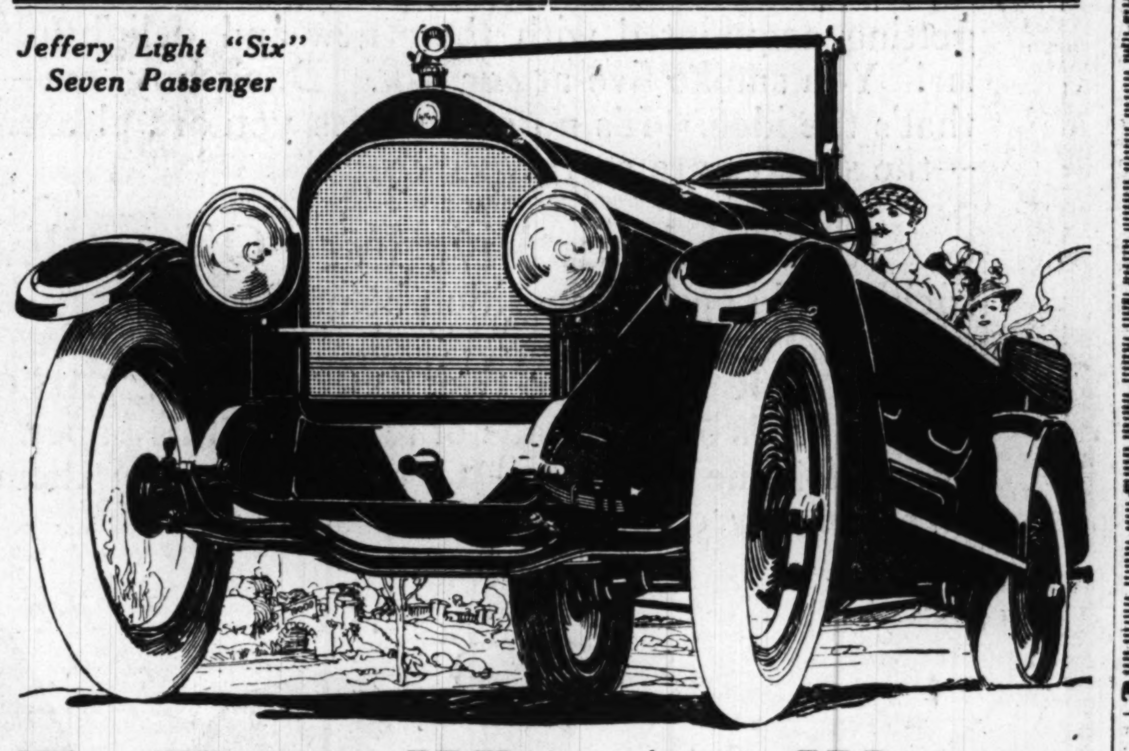
Jeffery Light "Six" Seven Passenger



To Those Who Are Waiting For a Jeffery "Six"

THIS is the first advertisement of a Jeffery Automobile which has appeared in a Chicago paper in the past five weeks.

We are taking this means to advise the hundreds of people who have asked us to notify them that we can now make a few additional, immediate deliveries of the Jeffery Seven Passenger Light "Six."

—BUT ONLY A FEW.

For weeks shipments on our regular contract allotment of Jeffery cars have been and are insufficient to fill the orders we have on our books. We are still far from being "caught up."

But—by a special arrangement, and by offering to take from the Thomas B. Jeffery Co. every car whose shipment had been delayed or canceled by every other dealer in this country, and by offering to purchase outright at once from other Jeffery dealers every unsold Six they had in stock, we are able to take care of just a few more of the hundreds who have wanted this car but could not get it.

Remember, please, that there are not many of these extra cars. Only a few can be taken care of. If you are to be one of the few, you must act now. Now is your chance to get the only automobile ever sold in this city on this sort of a demonstration—

That you are to select your own test of its superiority in every point.

That you are to make this test FLEXIBILITY, the POWER of its motor, its performance through sand and Cook County's mud, HILL CLIMBING ABILITY—whatever you wish, or all of them combined—just as you wish.

We will then take this car out on a side by side test with any other car in its price class that you can persuade to make the trial. If we cannot outdemonstrate the other car—if we cannot prove to your satisfaction that we have in this Jeffery a car of superior performance—you are to buy the other car.

Not only is this new Jeffery the most powerful car ever sold at its price, but it is one of the most beautiful as well. There is nothing to compare with it in smartness—no other car in which you would rather be seen.

A Word About "Fours"

In response to the many hundreds of inquiries for information, we regret to say we can make no promise of delivery of four-cylinder models before July 1st. The demand for the Jeffery "Four," with the new roll edge body, is beyond question greater than for any other high grade car ever sold in this city. It has no competition at its price and its only peer in popular demand of all cars sold at under $2000 is the Jeffery Light "Six."

Orders for the few Jeffery "Sixes" we can supply will be filled in rotation. Your immediate attention is absolutely necessary if you are to obtain one of these cars this summer.

RELATIVES PLAN BIG REUNION AT FAIRBANKS HOME

Nominee's Daughter, Mrs. Timmons, Tells of Elation Over Father's Selection.

BY HARRIET FERRILL.

The wave of enthusiasm that swept Fairbanks into a vice president's berth yesterday wasn't unexpected by at least one member of his family—his daughter, Mrs. John Wesley Timmons of Indianapolis. She was watching the "big show" in the Coliseum from a box with her sister-in-law, Mrs. Warren C. Fairbanks.

The only surprising part to Mrs. Timmons was that her father wasn't nominated for president. She had witnessed many "political combustions" in conventions of other years—the one in 1908, for example, and usually the name of Fairbanks figured in most of the demonstrations. For many years as the daughter of Senator Fairbanks and vice president, and the wife of a naval officer, she has considered Washington her home.

Hoped for White House.

"The Indianians, of course, expected father to go to the White House,' Mrs. Timmons said, "but the strength of Hughes banished this hope the second day of the convention. When one expects nothing there is no disappointment. Then when the spontaneous cry for Fairbanks for second place broke in the big Coliseum we were overjoyed and gratified, although we thought something of the sort might come."

Richard Fairbanks was a sergeant at the door during the nomination of his father while Fred C. Fairbanks was in a distant box from his sister. The Fairbanks family, however, intend to get together in Indianapolis soon for a jollification.

Warren C. Fairbanks lives in his father's home in Indianapolis. Mrs. Warren C. Fairbanks was the guest of Mrs. Lewis Swift during the convention. She was Miss Ethel Cassidy of Pittsburgh. The Warren Fairbankses have two small daughters, Edith, 11 years old, and Cornelia, 6 years old.

Other Fairbanks Children.

Fred C. Fairbanks, another son of the vice presidential nominee, also has two children, Charles Warren Fairbanks III., 8 years old, and Cornelia Scott Fairbanks 6 years old. Richard Fairbanks, a third son, is a widower like his father and lives in Indianapolis. He has one son, Richard Monroe Fairbanks, who has counted four birthdays. Mrs. Timmons has no children.

Since her husband, Lieutenant Commander John Wesley Timmons of the Texas, left the shore for the sea she has been living in Indianapolis. He is now on a cruise on the Texas from Cuba and was unable to attend the convention. They will anchor at Newport, where Mrs. Timmons will spend the summer.

Mrs. Timmons will perhaps remain in Chicago until tomorrow celebrating. Last night she dined with a number of senators from Missouri at the Blackstone. She occupied a suite with Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Babler at the Congress during the convention.

Ball at Country Club.

The exodus of celebrities from the hotels at the close of the convention wasn't so great as was expected. Many of the notables and their wives remained for the convention ball at the South Shore Country club last night when the board of governors, of which Everett C. Brown is president, welcomed more than 3,000 persons.

The dinner parties were many. At Mr. Brown's table were Mr. and Mrs. Franklin P. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Edward A Leicht, Miss Geraldine Lermat, Miss Janet Dixon, Mrs. Warren Everett, and Mr. D. B. Gann.

Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Goodrich and their three sons entertained a group of Washington correspondents.

The presence of Mrs. Douglas Robinson of New York, sister of Theodore Roosevelt, was known to but few till she checked out of the Blackstone yesterday.

AS A WOMAN SEES POLITICS

Mildred Farwell Notes Her Impressions as Delegates Are Leaving.

LIKES HUGHES' WORDS.

BY MILDRED FARWELL.

Did the gentleman's hand tremble with rage or did it not when at the morning's convention he read the communication of a certain distinguished citizen from Oyster Bay?

Why such a long eulogy of another distinguished citizen from Massachusetts? Was it just to be disagreeable? It did not get the latter any "furreder"—only put him in rather an embarrassing situation.

If a woman had done a thing like that she would be stigmatized as a cat. It is such an old, old method as almost to be out of date in the annals of feminine wiles. The modern woman does not stoop to such tricks.

The Love of Your Life.

For instance, the love of your life shows signs of admiration for a certain beautiful and popular lady. Do you say nice things about her? Not at all. You pass her over; you ignore her, but loudly you praise another lady—a good, a noble irl—but never a popular or a pretty one, because you are not afraid of her.

Then the love of your life says: "Darling, you are so sweet to other women. I would much rather have you than that good and noble, but not pretty girl," and you accept the candidacy.

No Time for Coyness.

After all, they say, no one but Hughes is going to run. But why not be sure of the fact? The time has passed for coyness. The Republican party has nominated a just judge, with a beard, it is true, but the first political utterance from behind the beard has been a fine one, and there is no flaw in this candidate's armor. With diligent searching, his enemies might find one. This has been done before to other politicians, with the aid of the secret service, but no one would be "delighted." Anyhow, it makes one believe more and more in some people's sincerity to know that they have been unselfish and patriotic enough not to head another party.

You Never Can Tell.

I'm not sure that if the Progressives had succeeded in forcing their choice on their reluctant candidate the Democrats several terms from now might not have unanimously nominated him for theirs. The admirable virtue of gratitude is not dead yet.

When I left Oyster Bay the local painter and carpenter said they knew whom they were going to vote for—some one hat had been the best advertisement the town had ever had—and the man that keeps the drug store told me he had done twice the soda water business reviving panting Progressives since Sagamore Hill became their Mecca and echoed with their new campaign song, "Will you, won't you, will you run for president?"

It is a shame that every one cannot be president at least twice, but some people want to be it three times.

CLEAR SAILING FOR WILSON AT ST. LOUIS

GERMAN OFFICER TELLS OF BATTLE OF GREAT FLEETS

Insists Warspite Was Sunk and Describes Loss of Other British Vessels.

SOME WERE SHOT TO BITS.

BERLIN, June 10.—[From an Associated Press staff correspondent by wireless via Sayville, N. Y.]—A graphic story of the naval battle off the Jutland coast, replete with tributes to the bravery of England's sailors and to the coolness and devotion of the German bluejackets in the memorable engagement, has been given to the Associated Press correspondent by a high sea officer of the German admiralty staff.

This officer had access to all the reports and has returned to Berlin after two days spent among the officers of the high sea fleet. His tactical description of the engagement, given at considerable length, has already been covered to some extent by the official German and British accounts.

His description is most interesting, however, where it touches upon the points on which the German and British recitals differ sharply—as regards the respective losses of the two fleets and the British contention of a "German flight" from the field.

Says Warspite Was Sunk.

To the correspondent's first question: "What are the facts about the Warspite?" [the big British battleship whose loss the Germans affirm and the British deny], the officer replied:

"The Warspite certainly was lost. We have on this point not only the known observations but, what is more important, the testimony of British sailors. The first confirmation came when a destroyer of our third flotilla fished out of the water a sailor from the British destroyer Turbulent, who said he himself had observed the sinking of the Warspite. Later two other sailors gave the same account, although none of the three was together after the rescue and each was questioned separately. This should be conclusive."

The correspondent asked how the individual ships were destroyed.

Tells of Ship's Sinking.

"It is difficult to give definite details in all cases," the officer responded, "owing to the ranges, the thick weather, and the fact that few officers on board a ship in action have the time or the opportunity to observe such details. Here, however, is the story of the destruction of one of the British battle cruisers, probably the Queen Mary or the Indefatigable, as told to me by an officer who saw it:

"It was during an early stage of the action of the battle cruisers that my friend saw the warship struck squarely by three full salyos of heavy shells. The gray silhouette, low on the water line, quivered from the shock as the first two salvos hit. At the third the cruiser seemed literally to crumble up and bend amidships. The bow and the stern rose and then the whole ship was lifted bodily out of the water. A terrific explosion had blotted it out and it sank, leaving no trace behind.

"The destruction of several other cruisers occurred similarly. A shell would apparently reach the magazine; then would come a mighty puff of smoke and flame, and the brief death agony of the warcraft would be over almost before one began to notice it.

Cruiser Blown to Pieces.

"One of the most thrilling episodes was the destruction of a big four funneled armored cruiser, which ran squarely under the guns of our battleships during the night, and was annihilated within four minutes by our dreadnaughts steaming in column. In pitchy darkness, with lights out, the cruiser approached at right angles under full speed, evidently utterly unaware of the presence of the squadron.

"It was sighted at a distance of 1,500 yards, and received a full broadside from the leading German ship, the Westfalen. It ran on another 500 yards and then turned like a wounded hare, but instead of making away, steered a course parallel to the column 1,000 yards distant, receiving the broadsides of three successive ships. The cruiser, literally covered with shells and unable to fire a single shot in reply, blew up opposite the fourth ship.

Says Germans Were Victors.

"A British admiralty representative declared that the British were successful because they broke up our undertaking. What undertaking? is a question I would like to ask. Do they imagine that we went out with our entire available force of battleships, battle cruisers, etc., to shoot sparrows, or that, if we were planning a new cruiser raid upon the English coast we went clear up to the Norwegian coast as a starting point? No; we went north to find the enemy which we knew was there. We found him; met the bulk of the British grand fleet in a square stand up fight, inflicted the heavy loss of one of his most modern superdreadnaughts, three battle cruisers, a small navy of armored cruisers, scouts and destroyers, and paid a comparatively low price for our victory."

Only Once in Quadrennial.

Nomination day only comes once every four years, but it's worse than a general offensive while it lasts. And the aftermath is worse than a haig and haig headache.

SAYS MIRACLE SAVED WARSPITE

Captain Tells How His Ship Escaped After Trapped Between Lines.

LONDON, June 10.—In proof of the statement of the British admiralty that the dreadnaught Warspite arrived safely in port after the North sea battle, the commander of the warship received an Associated Press correspondent today and described his vessel's escape from the concentrated German fire.

This officer, Capt. E. M. Phillpotts, minimized his own part in the battle.

"I am not surprised that there have been reports that the Warspite was sunk," he said, "as from our position between our fleet and the German battleships our escape from such a fate was simply miraculous. Even some of our own officers on other ships believed the battleship had sunk. As we left the fighting line we disappeared in a complete veil of spray.

Caught Between the Lines.

"The division of battleships of which the Warspite was one was with the battle cruisers. We were practically engaged as soon as they were, but the Warspite did not fire until a few minutes after the others had been in action, as I was not satisfied with the range. We soon knew we were up against the whole German battle fleet.

"You ask me what results I saw that our fire had on the Germans, but it is impossible to give a definite reply, as the captain of one of a row of battleships about 500 yards apart steaming in battle line must keep an eye on the ship to make possible to give a definte reply, as the we registered hit after hit, enough to convince me that the Germans got a hiding which will keep them in port for many months to come.

"After two hours of action, in much of which our division of battleships engaged the whole German battle fleet, the Warspite's steering gear went wrong and it ran amuck among the enemy. It must have annoyed the German gun pointers exceedingly to attempt to gauge our erratic movements. Soon we were almost in the midst of the German battleships and well between them and our own battle line. I know of six German battleships which concentrated their fire on the Warspite and there may have been others.

Protect Warrior by Accident.

"Under a worse pounding than the Lion received in the Dogger bank fight, we remained in action without a single vital injury, our chief difficulty being from the mishap to the steering gear. During our difficulties we received considerable credit for protecting the cruiser Warrior, which was practically helpless, but I must admit that sheer good fortune rather than intention was responsible for this, for the Warspite came across its bow while drifting and almost helpless.

"As I said before, the fact that we got out was an absolute miracle. Once repairs were quickly made, we wanted to return, but found we were not popular. Sufficient battleships were present to fill the line, and the possibility of our running amuck among our own friends was not welcomed. We steamed home.

"The Warspite will be sailing the seas months before the German fleet comes out again."

GERMANS DRIVE NEARER VERDUN

Take Guns and Prisoners as They Advance Beyond Vaux.

BERLIN, June 10.—The French have been driven out of several positions northeast of Verdun in the course of stubborn fighting, the war office announced today. South of Fort Vaux a French field work was stormed and more than 500 prisoners and 22 machine guns were taken. The official statement follows:

On the west bank of the Meuse we continued effectively to shell enemy batteries and trenches.

East of the river we are continuing the attack. In stubborn fighting the enemy was driven out of several positions on a high ridge southwest of Fort Douaumont in Chapitre wood, and on Fumin ridge.

West of Fort Vaux Bavarian chasseurs and East Prussian infantry stormed a strong enemy field work which fell into our hands with more than 500 men and 22 machine guns.

The total number of prisoners taken since June 8 is 28 officers and more than 1,500 men.

French Official Report.

PARIS, June 10.—Violent artillery fighting was in progress on the Verdun front last night in the vicinity of Avocourt, Thiaumont, and the Chapitre and Fumin woods. The statement follows:

In the Champagne district west of Mont Tetu a strong German attack has been dispersed with hand grenades.

On the left bank of the River Meuse the bombardment has continued in the Avocourt wood. On the right bank of the river there has been violent artillery action, both sides taking part, in the vicinity of the Thiaumont position and the Chapitre and Fumin woods. There has been fairly spirited bombardments in the sectors of Souville and Tavannes. There has been no infantry fighting. The night passed in quiet on the remainder of the front.

Tells of Later Fighting.

The later official communication issued by the war office tonight reads:

In Belgium the destructive shelling by our artillery of the German organizations in the sector of the Dunes caused two fires, followed by explosions.

North of Verdun the artillery action was maintained actively on both sides of the Meuse, but there was no infantry action during the day. Our batteries took under their fire enemy columns north of the village of Douaumont.

British Official Report.

LONDON, June 11, 1:22 a. m.—The British official statement issued at midnight says:

The chief center of activity has been about Ypres, where there has been a heavy artillery bombardment. Our trenches north of the Ypres-Comines railway were heavily shelled from 1 to 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon and hostile artillery has been active throughout the day against our positions west of Hooge. There have been no infantry actions in this region.

Our artillery bombarded enemy positions about La Boisselle, Arras and Loose. There has been some mining activity on both sides at the Hohenzollern redoubt and the quarries.

Austrian Lines Crumble Before Russian Rushes

Slavs Smash Strongest Defenses — Prisoners Increased to 72,000.

FOES LOSE 200,000?

PETROGRAD, June 10.—The Russians are continuing to follow up their victories and have pushed their lines still farther into Austrian territory in two important sections, that of Lutsk, in Volhynia, and that between Buczacz, which was occupied today, and Potok Zlota, both in Galicia.

Many German prisoners are among those taken in the last two days' fighting. From these it was learned that the Germans had sent several divisions from farther north.

The central powers' losses are estimated here at from 150,000 to 200,000, probably a record for a week's fighting on any front during the entire war.

The war office announced today that the Russians have captured ninety-seven officers and 5,500 men, in addition to the total previously announced. Eleven more cannon have been taken.

Russian Official Statement.

The text of the statement is as follows:

Troops under Gen. Brussiloff continued the offensive and their pursuit of the enemy. Fighting with enemy rear guards, our troops have crossed the River Styr, above and below Lutsk. The forces which crossed the river are pursuing the enemy, who is endeavoring to hold his position in the rear.

In Galicia, northeast of Tarnopol, in the regions of Gliadki and Tseboff, heavy fighting is proceeding for the possession of heights, which have changed hands several times.

Belgian armored motor cars are lending most useful assistance to our troops.

The piercing of the enemy front in the region of the Stripa has resulted in our occupation of a fortified position on the east bank of the river.

Prisoners Increase to 72,000.

At dawn today our troops entered Buczacz, and, developing the offensive along the Dniester river, carried the village of Scianka. In the village of Potok Zlota we seized a large artillery park and large quantities of shells. The offensive continues.

During yesterday's fighting we captured ninety-seven officers, 5,500 men, and eleven guns, making the total up to the present 1,240 officers, about 71,000 men, 94 guns, 167 machine guns, 53 bomb mortars, and a large quantity of other war material.

At many points on the Dvina front there were artillery duels. During the night of June 8 German bomb throwing artillery was very active against different sectors of the Dvinsk positions. In the region of Krevo, south of Smorgon, the enemy attempted several times to approach our trenches. He was driven back each time by our troops.

Russians Sweeping Westward.

Sweeping westward, Gen. Brusiloff's great fighting machine has broken the Austrian front at three places and threatens the capture or annihilation of several Austrian divisions. Petrograd places the Austrian casualties thus far conservatively at 150,000.

The Austrian line has been broken at Olyka, near the northern wing of Brusiloff's armies. The Slavs advanced twenty-two miles in two days in this region, one of the most remarkable feats of any attacking army since trench warfare became a factor.

The Austrian front has again been broken in front of Stanislau, where the Russians drove forward fourteen miles. Near Czernowitz another Slav force ruptured the enemy line, capturing positions along the railroad.

The Austrian retreat in many places is becoming demoralized, as the Slavs press westward toward the Gnitz Lipa river. This is evidenced by the number of prisoners taken daily and by the immense amount of booty found strewn along the path of the retreating forces.

Smash Complicated Defenses.

More than 200 miles of the most complicated Austrian defenses have been smashed, not counting the miles of enemy works wrecked at points where the lines were broken. Many of these positions had been constructed by ten months of hard work, prisoners reported. They went down under overwhelming fire from the Russian guns.

Along the whole front Gen. Russiloff is using the younger men of his forces. They are eager to the task, charging Cossacklike in the face of the fiercest Austrian fire.

In the entire aggressive not a single one of the major Russian charges has been turned. In all the charges the support from the Russian artillery is perfect. As the infantry whirls through, the engineers follow, building corduroy roads to facilitate the advance of the artillery.

The offensive is directed almost entirely against the Austrians—it being estimated that about 700,000 of them are defending the line the Russians are attacking. A few German divisions have been encountered on the north tip of the offensive. The Russian success in the Kovel region, however, has threatened the Germans from the rear of their positions near Pinsk.

Vienna Admits Retreat.

VIENNA, June 10.—Admission that heavy Russian attacks have driven the Austrians across the lower Strypa was contained in tonight's war office statement.

CYANIDE POWDER SUICIDE AGENT, ORPET'S DEFENSE

Chemistry Instructor Says Girl Was Just Starting on Study of the Deadly Poison.

FOUND HER IN LABORATORY.

BY WALTER NOBLE BURNS.

Proof that the poison that caused Marion Lambert's death was cyanide of potassium in powdered form will be introduced by the defense at the trial of Will Orpet for the girl's murder before Judge Charles H. Donnelly in Waukegan.

This announcement was made yesterday on the heels of the verification of the story told by Jack Vercoe of Highland Park that on the day before the girl went to her death in Helm's woods he had found her alone in the laboratory of the Deerfield High school, in which liquid and powdered cyanide were kept.

Vercoe, the son of Arthur W. Vercoe, president of the North Shore Trust company, will be subpœnaed as one of the most important witnesses of the defense. His testimony, Orpet's lawyers are confident, will go far toward convincing the jury that Marion Lambert killed herself.

Marion Violated Rules.

E. J. Craego, professor of chemistry in the high school, said regarding the laboratory incident: "It is against the rules for any pupil to go into the laboratory without permission or unless one of the teachers is in the room. Marion violated the rules. When I entered and found her there with young Vercoe, she was agitated. I attributed it to my catching her there with the youth. When I learned of her death I thought otherwise.

"I do not know that she took any cyanide from the bottles on the shelf. But she could have done so. There was a bottle one-third full of liquid cyanide and another half full of powdered cyanide in the laboratory. A small portion abstracted from either bottle would not have been missed."

A fact regarded by James H. Wilkerson, Ralph Potter, and Leslie P. Hanna, Orpet's attorneys, as especially significant is that Marion knew on the day she was found in the laboratory that she was to meet Orpet the next day. He already had arranged the tryst by a letter to her mailed to Josephine Davis.

Began Cyanide Study.

Another significant fact is that it was in the school "period" immediately following Marion's chemistry class that she went into the laboratory. Prof. Craego had announced that the next chemistry lesson would be that section of the text book devoted to cyanide of potassium. At the time he gave a short dissertation on the deadly effects of the poison. It was with Prof. Craego's words in her ears that the girl went on her secret mission to the room in which the poison was kept.

The state's theory is that Marion Lambert came to her death from cyanide in liquid form. This was announced by State's Attorney David R. Joslyn of McHenry county, State's Attorney Dady's associate, in his opening statement to the jury. In proof, Mr. Joslyn said the girl's waist would be introduced showing the spots left by three drops of liquid and incrusted with a precipitate of cyanide.

Four Grains in Stomach.

He declared the three grains of cyanide found in her right hand would be shown "to have come from her mouth." Mr. Joslyn mentioned that four grains of the poison were found in her stomach, which also might seem to support the theory that the cyanide was liquid.

If Marion had taken powdered cyanide, the prosecutor pointed out, it would have pained her and caused a convulsive reaction which probably would have showed in some sign of death throes in the snow and in disarranged clothing. The girl, when found at the foot of the Three Oaks, lay as if asleep with her two school books still undisturbed in the hollow of her left arm. This, according to Mr. Joslyn, indicated that her death had been the instantaneous result of liquid cyanide.

If the theory of the state is true, the liquid poison was taken into Helm's woods by Will Orpet in a bottle. No bottle ever has been found.

If the theory of the defense is true, the poison may have been taken to the woods by Marion Lambert wrapped in a bit of paper, loose in her pocket or knotted in her handkerchief.

Blow to State's Theory.

A comment made during the day by Prof. Craego might be construed as a severe blow to the state's theory that the poison was liquid.

"Liquid cyanide," said the chemistry instructor, "kills instantly as soon as it touches the tongue. If Marion Lambert had drunk liquid cyanide from a bottle she would have been dead before her hand had fallen a foot from her mouth."

Marion's right hand was ungloved. It is probable she removed it either to take the poison administered to her by Orpet in the guise of medicine or with suicidal intent. Her left hand had nothing to do with the tragedy. It was gloved and continued after death to hug her school books to her breast. If she lifted a bottle to her mouth with her right hand and death came before her hand had fallen again to her side, she would have had no time to throw the bottle away and clutch at her mouth. So State's Attorney Joslyn's theory that the poison crystals in her hand "came from her mouth" would seem to be proved impossible.

IN MUSIC ROMANCE

Soprano Who "Goes Back to Farm" to Wed Baritone After Concert Romance.

Matzene Chicago
Mrs. Albert Lindquist

Miss Leonora Allen, who has won laurels as a soloist with the Chicago and Minneapolis symphony orchestras, went back to the farm near Decatur, Ill., yesterday to be married. With her went Albert Lindquist, the Chicago baritone, and when it was over the soprano was Mrs. Lindquist.

The romance began during a concert tour and culminated the other night in Decatur, when Mr. Lindquist, appearing with the Minneapolis orchestra, sang, "If Anyone Here Sees My Sweetheart, Tell Her for Me That I Love Her." Miss Allen responded with "Little Gray Blue Dove." After the concert the engagement was announced.

WALL CRASHES, KILLING 2 MEN

New Ontario Warehouse Chief Blames Fault in Construction.

The crash of a portion of a seven story brick wall killed two men and wounded a third yesterday at the new Ontario warehouse, 411 West Ontario street. Damage amounting to $25,000 was caused.

J. H. Lyons of 2330 Diversey avenue, a foreman in the warehouse, and George Kolinsky, an employé, Nineteenth and Paulina streets, were killed. Wladislaw Woldt of 1524 Emma street, another employé, was seriously hurt. He was removed to the Passavant hospital.

G. A. Brecker, vice president and treasurer of the warehouse, blamed a fault in construction for the collapse of the wall.

At first there was consternation when the wreckage brought hundreds to the scene and firemen began a search for bodies. It was believed that many had lost their lives.

"We were allowed 250 pounds to the square foot," said Mr. Becker, "and we were not utilizing that weight. There was some tea and coffee on the seventh floor, and some men were up there checking it up. It must have been caused by a defect in construction."

Coroner Hoffman immediately prepared for an investigation of the accident. There were a great many employés in the place, among them about forty girls on the first floor. There was a panic when the crash came, and the office employés rushed into the street.

BANK MESSENGER GONE; HAD PAY ROLL OF $4,100.

$500 Offered for Arrest of John Rose, Employe of Calumet Baking Powder Company.

Maybe John Rose, 20 years old, a bank messenger employed by the Calumet Baking Powder company, has realized his golden opportunity. But it isn't the one he came from Russia to America to seek, and it may land him in the penitentiary.

He disappeared last Friday afternoon after calling at the Corn Exchange National bank for the company's weekly pay roll, amounting to $4,100. Detectives working on the case under William J. Sutherland of the Mooney & Boland agency say Rose may have been waylaid and robbed.

A reward of $500 is offered for his arrest and the recovery of the pay roll.

GIRL KIDNAPED? NO, ARRESTED

It Seems She's Held for Bail Bond, Not Ransom, as Father Feared.

Fifteen year old Mamie Friedman left her home at 3600 Douglas boulevard early last evening to visit friends at 1546 Clifton Park avenue, near by. Just as the party was beginning to have a good time two men called and asked for Mamie.

"You're under arrest," they said when she came to the door. "You'll have to go along with us. We're detectives."

Sobbing and bewildered, the girl went. Her friends went over to her home and told her father, Jacob Friedman, a wealthy retired merchant. He was horror stricken.

Waits for Phone Call.

"Wait," he urged. "We'll get a telephone message or something."

But the message didn't come. Late in the evening two or three of the young people went down to the detective bureau to ask what Mamie was arrested for.

"We haven't made any arrest," they were told. The Fillmore street police station was called, and there, too, it was said no such arrest had been made.

Detectives were detailed at once to look for the girl and her captors.

Police Up a Tree.

"It's a kidnaping case all right," said one of the sergeants. "But we can't make head or tail of it. The family can't help us and the girl's friends can't help us. It may have been some man that wants to marry the girl or it may be that she is being held for ransom.

"The last seems more probable. Of course it may be a practical joke, or something that Miss Friedman herself knows more about than the others, but it doesn't look that way now."

City Ed.—Jawn Kelley says kill the story about Mamie Friedman's being kidnaped. She was pinched for obtaining goods under false pretenses and is at the Juvenile home. SHEP.

ENDS LIFE IN BRIDEWELL.

Daniel Miller of 625 West Madison street committed suicide by jumping two floors from a balcony in the bridewell hospital yesterday. His skull was crushed. According to John L. Whitman, superintendent of the bridewell, Miller had been drinking. He left his bed while supposedly delirious, rushed up a stairway to an operating room, and leaped down over a railing.

INSIDE TRACK FOR PRESIDENT AT CONVENTION

Real Interest Centers in Framing of New Democratic Platform.

RENAME MARSHALL?

President Wilson will be unanimously renominated by the Democratic national convention which will assemble in St. Louis next Wednesday.

Vice President Marshall is slated for renomination and his friends now believe he will meet no serious opposition, although William J. Bryan is said to be engineering a revolt against the administration with the avowed object of supplanting Marshall with former Gov. Folk of Missouri, who now is counsel for the interstate commerce commission.

Bryan will not be a member of the convention, however, and will have small opportunity to interfere, even if so disposed. The Nebraskan will be present, but in the press section working as a newspaper correspondent, exactly as he did twenty years ago in the Republican convention in St. Louis on the eve of the assembling of the Democratic convention in Chicago, in which he soon appeared as the boy orator of the Platte and carried off his first nomination for president.

ONLY A FORMALITY.

The Democratic convention will be only a formality. The president will be the sole candidate for the nomination. The platform will be acceptable to the candidate, for he is writing it himself. The convention will celebrate the glories of the Wilson administration with rare unanimity.

For the first time in recent political history the character of the platform that will be adopted overshadows the nomination of the ticket in popular interest. Although it is taken for granted that the president will "point with pride" to the record of his administration, and "view with alarm" the record of the Republicans and Progressives, there is much speculation on the extent to which the St. Louis platform will square with that adopted at Baltimore four years ago.

The Baltimore platform was unacceptable to President Wilson in many respects. He repudiated its plank pledging him to a single presidential term. Whether the St. Louis convention will reiterate this declaration is a question of much interest.

DEFIED 1912 PLATFORM.

The president also caused the repeal of the Panama canal toll exemption, in defiance of the Baltimore platform. He created the trade commission, although the Baltimore platform was silent on the question because the party disapproved the principle as advocated by the Republican and Progressive parties. Likewise the president has come out for a tariff commission, despite the opposition of his party at the time the Baltimore platform was written.

The platform pledges to reduce the tariff, enact anti-trust legislation, and create a new currency system were redeemed by the party in the first congress under the Wilson administration. The promises made in many of the other planks of the Baltimore declaration, however, have been ignored by the Wilson administration and by the Democratic majority in congress. In many instances not a single bill has been introduced by a Democratic member to fulfill platform pledges. In others bills have been introduced, but no action taken thereon.

LIVING COST HIGHER.

Following is the record of failure to redeem these platform pledges:

The tariff was reduced, but no reduction in the cost of living has been noticed. Nor has such reduction been noticed as result of breaking up of trusts and commercial conspiracies mentioned in the platform.

The department of justice conducted at various times investigations into the rising prices of many commodities, but they are not known to have resulted in reducing the cost of living. There were indictments of several merchants in Washington, D. C., for alleged agreement to raise the price of food articles, but the men concerned got off with light fines.

Meanwhile the cost of living has been increasing, according to official reports of the government department of labor.

TERM OF PRESIDENT.

Bills, or resolutions for constitutional amendments, to provide for a single term for the president of the United States were introduced by Senator Cummins, Republican; Representatives Rucker and Beakes, Democrats, and Kent, independent.

The proposed legislation was killed by President Wilson writing a letter to Representative Palmer of Pennsylvania declaring opposition to the idea of limiting a president to one term. The bills were pigeonholed. The president appears to have converted the congressional leaders on this point. For instance, Judge Rucker says the president is right about the matter.

Presidential Primaries

Representative Mapes of Michigan, Republican, introduced a bill for a presidential primary under national law, but nothing has been done about it. No Democratic bill of this character has been noted.

Democratic leaders take the position that a national presidential preference primary cannot be had under the present federal constitution, despite the platform pledge.

Senator Chamberlain has introduced a bill providing for a council of national defense, but nothing has been done about it in the military affairs committee. Similar Republican bills have been pigeonholed. Recently the Democratic majority of the house naval committee and later of the house defeated Representative Britten's bill or amendment to the naval appropriation bill to provide for a council of national defense.

"Republican Extravagance."

Speaker Clark for a time stood for simplicity and economy in refusing a government automobile, but ultimately congress authorized an auto for him and for Vice President Marshall, as the Republican congress had done for Speaker Cannon and Vice President Sherman.

Secretary of Labor Wilson bought an auto without any authority in law, which later turned out a bad investment entailing large bills for repairs.

Representative Sherley of Kentucky introduced a bill providing for a budget committee, with a view to securing economy, but it did not pass, the budget plan having been smothered in the Democratic caucus. No other specific attempt to secure economy on an adequate scale has been noted.

Representative Rayburn of Texas introduced a bill, which passed the house in the last congress but failed in the senate and which is favorably reported from the house committee today, providing for federal control over the issuance of railroad securities.

A comprehensive plan for developing waterways has not been agreed upon or carried out. On the contrary, a $43,000,000 pork barrel river and harbor bill recently passed the senate and house.

Rights of Labor.

The last pledge in this rights of labor plank has not been carried out. Senator Sutherland, Republican, last year introduced a bill providing for employés' compensation in case of injury, with reference to interstate common carriers, and also applying in the District of Columbia and territories. His bill would have made it compulsory for employés to accept the rate of compensation specified, or do without any.

Senator Overman, N. C., Democrat, proposed to amend it by permitting employés to sue for damages in larger amount if they wished. The bill was referred to a subcommittee of the senate judiciary committee, which has done nothing. There is no Democratic sponsor, apparently, for such a bill.

Conservation measures have not made much progress. In the last congress several conservation bills passed the house, but died in the senate.

Civil Service.

Bills have been introduced by Senators Pomerene and Hughes, Democrats, for civil service retirement systems, which might lead to reorganization of the civil service. Hearings have been had on such bills, but none has been reported.

The civil service law has not been enforced. Reorganization of the civil service with reclassification of officials and employés and readjustment of salaries have not been undertaken as promised by the platform.

KEALING OF INDIANAPOLIS MAY BE NATIONAL CHAIRMAN

Strong Movement Started for Him for Republican Pilot at Meeting of New Committee.

Joseph B. Kealing of Indianapolis may be the new Republican national chairman. A strong movement was started for him within the new national committee, which met for the first time at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

The only formal action taken was to name a subcommittee of eight that will confer with Mr. Hughes and Mr. Fairbanks and seek their views as to the organization of the committee and the plan of the campaign.

The subcommittee consists of W. Murray Crane of Massachusetts, Ralph E. Williams of Oregon, Alvah H. Martin of Virginia, Charles B. Warren of Michigan, John T. Adams of Iowa, Reed Smoot of Utah, Boies Penrose of Pennsylvania, and James A. Hemenway of Indiana.

This committee will meet with the presidential and vice presidential nominees at a date to be determined later and will then name the executive committee of the national committee, to consist of twelve members, as provided by a rule adopted by the convention. This executive committee will select a chairman, secretary, treasurer, and sergeant at arms.

Charles D. Hilles, the retiring chairman, was mentioned as a candidate to succeed himself in several quarters and undoubtedly he will figure largely in the final decision.

ELECTED TO MONON BOARD.

Robert Hall McCormick Jr. Made Director Succeeding Late E. C. Field.

Robert Hall McCormick Jr. was elected a director of the Chicago, Indianapolis and Louisville (Monon) railway yesterday, taking the place left vacant by the death of Judge E. C. Field, who died last April. The directors also voted to pay the 3¼ per cent dividend on the common stock declared last January and the 2 per cent semi-annual dividend on the preferred issue. Both dividends are payable June 30 to stock of record June 20.

"In electing Mr. McCormick," President Kurrie said after the meeting, "the directors are following out the policy of keeping prominent Chicago business men on the board."

Chairman of G. O. P. State Central Committee Succumbs in Ozark.

NEED ROW TO PUT PEP INTO PARTY, DEMOCRATS SAY

Will Ask Bryan to Start War at St. Louis—100 Sullivan Rooters Arrive on Scene.

BY ELISHA HANSON.

St. Louis, Mo., June 10.—[Special.]—With the arrival of the advance guard of the Illinois delegation of rooters, boosters, and delegates, some pep was injected into the city of Sr. Louis tonight.

The delegation, more than 100 strong, came to boost Roger Sullivan for the vice presidency. If they fail to put Roger over, they are going to raise some—well, some time anyway.

Thirty judges of the Circuit, Superior, and Municipal courts of Chicago and Cook county were among those who arrived. They wore large silk lapel flags and declared themselves "100 per cent for Roger Sullivan for vice president."

Another train brought the suffrage squad, headed by Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt. The delegation, Mrs. Catt said, will ask the Democratic convention to include a suffrage plank in its platform without an amendment regarding state's rights, such as was contained in the suffrage plank adopted by the Republican convention.

Want Bryan to Start Fight.

The Democratic national committeemen now here, including Boeschenstein of Illinois, Moore of Ohio, Huffman of Indiana, Cummings of Connecticut, March of Iowa, and Mack of New York, are so afraid that St. Louis next week is to be a repetition of the Coliseum in Chicago this week they are going to call on Bryan when he arrives and urge him to get into the muss and start a fight.

According to all of the information, Bryan is willing to accept the verdict of the voters of Nebraska and keep his hands out of things here. If he doesn't butt in, there is no one else to do so, and the leaders fear the party will go before the country without any vitality.

"What we need here is a rip snorting knockdown and drag out fight," National Committeeman Marsh of Iowa said today. "Well, if you try to euchre Tom Marshall off the ticket," Tom Taggart said, "you'll get just the kind of a fight you are looking for."

No Word from Wilson.

Inasmuch as Bryan has never been known to turn down an invitation to battle, the anti-Bryan committeemen are expecting a favorable reply to their invitation that he start something.

Not a thing has been heard from Washington concerning either the chairman of the national committee or the platform. Wilson is expected to dictate the selection of a chairman and also to send on a platform of his own writing.

The national committeemen are not of a mind to wait much longer to hear who is to lead them into the fray this year. They are about ready to name Fred Lynch of Minnesota, Homer Cummings of Connecticut, or Willard Saulsbury of Delaware.

If Lynch wants the job he can have it, even though Wilson doesn't want him. 'That might be a good place to start the row we need to brace us up," one of the committeemen said, "if Bryan doesn't come through with a battle. Lynch could be elected chairman over Wilson's objections."

House to Pick Chairman?

The president is expected to name a chairman who will be able to get funds. According to one report current here, he will select a man on the recommendation of Col. E. M. House, his chief backer. According to Democratic wise ones, House was the best "toucher" the party ever had and he is expected to repeat this year.

The platform is expected to be brief, with declarations for Americanism, preparedness, peace, a tariff commission, and protection against dumping and unfair foreign competition, as well as protection for American firms entering foreign trade fields. The present unprecedented wave of prosperity will be credited to Mr. Wilson.

The president's foreign policy will be praised in general terms, but, according to all of the information here, little will be said about Mexico.

Will Boost Currency Act.

Immigration may be dodged by the platform committee, but the banking and currency act, which was ignored by the Republicans, will get a tremendous boost by the Democrats.

In fact, the president's domestic legislative program, put through before the war started, will receive consideration equal to his foreign policy. The Underwood tariff act will be upheld and the income tax feature especially commended. Suffrage may get in on the same conditions imposed at the Coliseum in Chicago.

But for the arrival of Charles Boeschenstein, Democratic national committeeman from Illinois, several days ago, it is probable the convention next week would have to be held in the street. The St. Louis committee on arrangements had not even started work on the convention hall. As a result of their delay it will be necessary to work three shifts a day between now and Wednesday.

INDIANAPOLIS MAN, GUEST OF JOHN C. SHAFFER, HURT.

William H. Coleman, a retired manufacturer of 1106 North Meridian street, Indianapolis, who is attending the national conventions as the guest of John C. Shaffer, owner of the Chicago Evening Post, was caught between two street cars at Clark and Adams streets yesterday morning and severely injured. Mr. Coleman was taken to St. Luke's hospital.

ITALIAN CABINET NEARING BREAK; UP TO EMMANUEL

Resignations Will Not Take Place Until King Makes New Choices.

ROME, via London, June 10.—The resignation of the Italian cabinet is momentarily expected. The ministry, however, will remain in power until the king has taken his decision regarding the formation of a new cabinet.

The government failed to obtain a majority on a vote last night in the chamber of deputies on the budget of the minister of the interior. The vote was 190 against the budget to 120 for it.

The parliamentary session was suspended to permit the government to prepare an exposition of its policy.

Premier Salandra is acting as minister of the interior.

Italian War Report.

The official statement, covering operations against the Austrians, issued by the war office tonight, says:

After the grave defeat and enormous losses suffered June 8, the enemy yesterday confined his activity to a violent cannonading.

Our troops replied at several points, causing the disappearance of masses of the enemy, who were caught by the fire of our batteries.

We made some progress in the upper Arsa valley in the sector of Mount Novegno, also at the bottom of the Astico valley and on the western slopes of Monte Cengio.

Keep Up Advance, Rome Says.

In the upper Boite and Ansei valleys our troops continue their methodical advance.

Along the rest of the front to the sea there were the customary artillery duels and minor raids by parties of our troops.

Enemy aeroplanes dropped bombs on various places on the Venetian plain. Several persons were wounded and slight damage was done.

One of our aeroplane squadrillas bombed enemy camps and defenses in the Arsa and Astico valley. Our machines returned unharmed.

MAY TELL GERARD TO QUIT PUBLIC COMMENTS ON WAR.

U. S. State Department Embarrassed by Interview of Ambassador Printed in Munich Paper.

Washington, D. C., June 10.—[Special.]—Ambassador Gerard at Berlin will probably be directed by the state department to refrain hereafter from commenting for publication on world peace and other matters pertaining to the European war.

The state department learned today that a recent interview with the ambassador which appeared in a Munich newspaper was authorized and authentic. The interview has tended to embarrass this government. State department officials said at the time the interview appeared that they did not for a moment believe that Mr. Gerard had authorized it.

Mr. Gerard cabled today, in response to inquiry from the state department, that the last purported interview on the subject of world peace which appeared in the National Zeitung was not authorized.

To avoid further embarrassing situations and likewise to protect the ambassador from unwittingly becoming the coworker in German peace schemes, the state department will probably within the next few hours ask that no further comment be made from the American embassy in Berlin. Meanwhile the present misunderstanding over the recent interview will be smoothed over.

ITALIAN TRANSPORT SUNK; MANY SOLDIERS ARE LOST.

Principe Umberto Destroyed by Torpedo in Lower Adriatic with Heavy Casualty List.

ROME, June 9, via Paris, June 10.—The Italian transport Principe Umberto has been torpedoed and sunk in the lower Adriatic with a loss of a large number of soldiers, according to an official statement issued by the admiralty today.

The steamer, accompanied by two other transports conveying troops and war materials and escorted by destroyers, was attacked by two Austrian submarines.

The Principe Umberto sank a few moments after being struck, and although prompt help was rendered by the other ships, it is believed half the troops on board have perished. The exact loss has not yet been established.

"BLACK HANDERS" MURDER MAN AS HE EATS DINNER.

Enrico Naso, 24 years old, a barber, was shot and fatally wounded last night as he sat at a table in a poolroom and café at 945 Polk street eating his dinner. He died a few minutes later.

Four men involved in the shooting, all of them carrying revolvers, fled, leaving the dying man on the floor.

The Maxwell street police are investigating the murder along two lines—that it may be a Black Hand affair and that it may be the outcome of a fight several nights ago in another poolroom in the same block.

WEEKLY REVIEW OF THE WAR

BY CAPT. HENRY J. REILLY.

GENERAL.

During the week Lord Kitchener and his entire staff were lost by the blowing up of the cruiser on which they were going to Russia. The explosion is supposed to have been caused by a mine or submarine. There is good reason to believe that the real cause of the attack on the Hampshire was a desire to destroy Kitchener, who was traveling on it.

NORTH SEA BATTLE.

The claims made by both sides as to the North sea naval battle are still conflicting. Certain facts stand out, however. The engagement was not limited to a fight between battle cruiser squadrons but was one in which the two main fleets engaged each other. The British loss was greater than that of the Germans, though the total British force was superior to that of the Germans. If the British contention is true, as it appears to be, that the Germans were ultimately forced to retire the German strategy and tactics were superior in that they engaged a superior force, inflicted heavier loss than they suffered, and got away. The battle was in no way decisive, as conditions remain practically as they were prior to its happening; the German fleet is still in existence and the British preponderance in naval strength has not been relatively decreased. The battle undoubtedly has lessened the British morale and increased that of the Germans.

RUSSIAN.

The Russians have started a general offensive along the southern part of their European line. They have successfully advanced over most of this front and so far have succeeded in capturing 72,000 prisoners, 94 guns, 167 machine guns, and 53 trench mortars.

FRENCH FRONT.

The Germans, by steadily attacking, have succeeded in working up the ravines to each side of Fort Vaux, and finally in capturing it. Throughout these operations the French made repeated counter attacks, but were unable to stop the Germans. Along the British part of the French front a number of counter attacks made by them for the purpose of recovering lost ground failed. The Germans made several successful local attacks along this part of the front. The most successful of these gave them the village of Hooge.

ITALIAN FRONT.

The Austro-Hungarians have continued to advance, taking prisoners and guns, in the Astico-Brenta section. There are indications that their offensive has somewhat slowed down since the beginning of the Russian offensive south of the Pripet marshes and in Galicia.

THE BALKANS.

The Austro-Hungarians have been successfully attacking the Italian positions in front of the port of Avlona on the Adriatic. There have been no further developments reported in the Bulgarian invasion of Greek territory near Saloniki.

ARMENIA.

The Turks report having driven back the Russian center over a front of twenty-five miles.

MESOPOTAMIA AND PERSIA.

There has been no news of importance from these theaters of war the past week.

SUMMARY.

The most important event of the week has been the resumption of the general offensive by the Russians. If sufficiently pushed and sufficiently successful, this offensive may compel the stopping of the successful Austro-Hungarian offensive in Italy in the same manner that the successful Russian offensive of November, 1914, compelled the cessation of the German attacks along the Yser, in front of Ypres and Bettume, commonly called the drive on Calais. If extended to include the German lines in north Russia it may stop the steady German advance in the Verdun region. The Austro-Hungarian advance into Italy and the German one at Verdun are very serious matters for the allies at the present time.

ASKS DAMAGE OF $250,000 FROM A. G. SPALDING HEIRS.

Mrs. Tingley, Head of Universal Brotherhood, Denies Conspiracy to Influence Late Chicagoan.

San Diego, Cal., June 10.—Damages in the amount of $250,000 are asked by Mrs. Katherine Tingley, head of the Universal Brotherhood and Theosophical society, in a suit filed here today against Keith Spalding and his wife, J. Walter Spalding and Henry B. Spalding, heirs or beneficiaries under the will of Albert G. Spalding, late sporting goods maker.

Through a contest of the will of A. G. Spalding, it is alleged by Mrs. Tingley that Keith Spalding, a son of the deceased, and the other defendants conspired to injure Mrs. Tingley and destroy the educational and religious work in which for the last ten years she has been engaged at Point Loma, near here.

Mrs. Tingley denies as false the charges brought by Keith Spalding, that she was at any time in conspiracy with Elizabeth C. Spalding, widow of the deceased, to influence Mr. Spalding so that he would so dispose of his fortune that it finally would divert to the Point Loma institutions.

ALL FINANCE COMMITTEE TO GET HATS ON GEIGER.

And the Councilmen Won't Be Pikers in Picking Costly Lids—Chairman Loses on T. R.

Spectators who chance to be in the council finance committee's rooms at the next meeting mustn't get suspicious about what becomes of the funds of the poor taxpayers when they see the committee march in wearing new straw hats that "look like a million dollars."

Just pity Ald. Geiger because he lost on T. R. The bet originally was straw "Kellys" with Ald. Capitain, Fisher, Sitts, and Littler, but the first named said last night that "he understood the entire finance committee of fourteen members was included."

"I saw a nice $100 Panama in a show window and had it all picked out," said Ald. Capitain, "but yesterday it was sold, and I'll have to content myself with a less expensive one, say about $75."

And they have all picked expensive lids.

Ald. Geiger could not be reached last night, but he was reported to be staying at home, singing "The Hat That Blew Away."

She came to live in Chicago the same year. During the Spanish-American war she accompanied the Second Illinois regiment, of which her husband was colonel, to Jacksonville, Fla., and later to Cuba, where she earned the title of "mother of the regiment" by her hospital work and her looking after the welfare of the soldiers. She was prominently identified with the milk commission of a few years ago and was one of the founders of the Children's hospital. Her husband was the first major general of the Illinois National guard. She is survived by her husband and two children, a daughter, Mrs. Richard S. Folsom, and a son, Arthur G. Moulton.

EDWARD NILES HILL died yesterday at his residence, 482 Deming place, after a lingering illness. He was born in Great Barrington, Mass., June 30, 1845, and served in the One Hundred and Thirty-sixth Illinois infantry. He was general cashier of the American Express company and had been in its service fifty-two years when he retired, in October, 1915. His widow survives him.

MAX VOGRICH, a Hungarian composer and pianist, died last night at Post-Graduate hospital in New York, following an operation. His best known operas were "Buddha," "King Arthur," and "Wanda." He wrote a symphony which was recently played by Misha Elman and the Chicago Symphony orchestra in Chicago.

JAMES H. WILSON, 82 years old, chief reporter here for R. G. Dun & Co. since 1883 and known to nearly every business man in the loop, died yesterday at 1448 East Sixty-seventh place. He is survived by a widow, two sons, and one daughter.

EDWIN S. WELLS died yesterday at his home in Lake Forest. Mr. Wells was born in Salisbury, Conn., in 1829, and came to Chicago in 1850. He was a partner in Wells & Faulkner, wholesale grocers, until 1900, when he retired from active business life.

SIMON LOUIS, a retired merchant, died yesterday at the age of 59 at 5416 Prairie avenue. He was born in California, coming to Chicago thirty years ago. Mr. Louis is survived by a widow and three sons, Irving, Harold, and Morrie Louis.

WOMAN PUT ON PROBATION.

Mrs. Lulu Munger, 4040 Clarendon avenue, a real estate operator in the Tacoma building, was placed on probation for one year yesterday when arraigned before Judge Fry. Charles Ensler, owner of the Charles Ensler Auto service, alleged she had given him four worthless checks in payment of taxicab bills.

Big steps are hard to climb—but if you halve the rise, you more than halve the effort—and climb faster

And down the long flight you lessen the jar as you lessen the fall at each step.

By dividing the big task into smaller tasks, you make an easy matter of an otherwise difficult undertaking.

By dividing the Packard's six cylinders into twelve smaller ones, we have not only minimized vibration—but we have added power, speed, smoothness, quietness.

We have multiplied the units—and thereby we have simplified the problem of safe, comfortable, speedy locomotion.

Just as the stair-maker has learned not to build his steps too high—or too low—so experience led us to the Twin Six as the most efficient division of the motor's power.

All twins—two sets of powerful little cylinders rooted in a V—imparting continuous power—and giving new sensation and satisfaction to motor travel.

Established! The sweeping success of the Twin Six has been the marked automobile development of the year.

There is more pleasure and safety in the Packard now than ever before—your pleasure, your safety. Prices, $2750—$3150, upward—f. o. b. Detroit. Packard Motor Car Company of Chicago, 2357 Michigan Avenue.

—Stephen Decatur.

THE NOMINATIONS.

The nomination of Justice Hughes as the Republican candidate for president was a sound one. Justice Hughes' declaration in acceptance makes it a brilliant one. The letter is a splendid call to arms. It will send a thrill through the nation. It rings with passionate sincerity and radiates the power of aroused Americanism.

In his case the convention could select but could not make the candidate. What Justice Hughes says determines the character and foreshadows the outcome of the campaign.

It seems to us that no candidate for president in fifty years has had such opportunity. No time in fifty years has the nation had such need.

If it was feared that Justice Hughes' campaign would begin with less enthusiasm and confidence than one under the leadership of Col. Roosevelt, his acceptance will do much to remove that fear. It seems probable now that an inspiring campaign under a formidable leader is before us. He begins, too, with the advantage that if there was less intensity of conviction for him, there was less intensity against him. Where persuasion must be used to demonstrate how dangerous a continuation of the present government would be to the country there will be less stubborn resistance to persuasion because of prejudice. The voter who was bound to be disheartened or disgusted by any other nomination than that of Roosevelt can be won. The cause is good; the candidate is not only worthy, he gives promise of inspiring leadership.

The Progressives nominated Roosevelt. It was for him and them to consider what the effect of this nomination would be upon the country.

If Roosevelt ran he might have defeated Hughes. He then would have given us Wilson, and it would have been a poisoned gift straight from his hands to the nation.

Wilson is everything Roosevelt has described him to be. He means every damaging thing to the country Roosevelt says he does. He is the exact national danger that Roosevelt condemns.

If the Republican convention had made an unfit nomination the Progressives would have had excuse to reject it. There surely can be no person so perverse as to maintain that the nomination of Hughes is unworthy of the Republican party. There may be intense conviction that the party ignored its best opportunity and slighted its greatest man, but that does not condemn the character of the man selected.

The nomination of Roosevelt by the Republican convention, constituted as it was, plainly was impossible, much as citizens might hope for the impossible to happen.

The only way it could have been made possible was by a campaign for control of the convention when the people were selecting the delegates. That campaign was not made. It could not be made unless Col. Roosevelt made it and he did not.

Roosevelt proved instantly that he had considered all these things, and his reply to the Progressive convention opened the way for a reconciliation founded upon the candidacy of Hughes and intended for the good of the nation.

The greatest act of patriotism the Progressives had within their power was to prevent Woodrow Wilson from having another term and the United States from having another term of Woodrow Wilson.

That fact now challenges the patriotism of their nominee. Justice Hughes' letter of acceptance should make it easy for all Progressives to rally to his support.

SPORTS AND REAL EXERCISE.

Although the impression prevails that people of Anglo-Saxon traditions are people of out of door life and sports, the fact grows that we sit in the galleries more often than we labor in the arena. Americans are becoming visual sportsmen. They do not play baseball. They look at the playing of baseball. They do not spar. They pay to see sparring when an indulgent state government will permit them.

The most exercise many of them get is watching Charlie Chaplin kick some one in the shins. They do not walk. There is the street car for 5 cents. They do not climb. There is the elevator. They play more penny ante than quoits. They do not row; they do not ride. They throw more bluffs than baseballs. Twenty-two thousand will watch twenty-two men play football. The twenty-two thousand, who never had a football in their hands, think they are an out of door people because they are watching twenty-two young men take violent exercise.

The Scandinavians and the Germans have had no illusions concerning their out of door exercises. Both Scandinavians and Germans are great walkers, but they had no organized games and, not having any, they were not deceived as to the effect games might have upon national life.

Therefore for the physical good of their peoples they developed setting up exercises and regimented calesthenics. They got and are getting results. Americans, with the tradition that every citizen of this republic was born an athlete and a good shot, pooh at the idea of organized exercise in anything but games. And the American lets professionals play his games while he looks on.

It is time to throw illusions away and accept facts. Americans have the same need for regimented calisthenics as have the Scandinavians and Germans. The place where regimentation and organization in this particular can be applied is in the schools. We cannot drag a lot of bleacher sitters and penny ante players away from their favorite outdoor games, but we can take the young folk while they are under authority and give them good stiff setting up exercises which will build their muscle and doubtless their character.

False individualism is dying in this section of the western hemisphere. The quicker we recognize it the safer real individualism will be. Safe individualism will be erected upon competent collectivism. It is a matter of state concern that the individual have a sound body, good muscles, and good courage. The wise state will not leave these to the individual to provide at his wish and leisure. It will see that he has them.

THE CONVENTIONS.

The Republican convention of 1916 was, to put it mildly, not a dramatic affair. Inevitably at such a time there are moments of tension, and there were even moments of enthusiasm. But these were few and brief. There was anxiety and doubt in some degree. But there was a groundwork of definite purpose and unwavering determination which, while they did not surge up in great waves of feeling, produced quietly and promptly the essential result sought, namely, the choice of the candidate believed on the whole to be the strongest.

Harmony and victory were the objects of the convention of 1916, and these objects were loyally pursued to a gratifying conclusion. Selfish ambition and wounding recriminations were suppressed and the campaign therefore should begin under encouraging conditions.

For this not only the spirit of the rank and file of the delegates but also and chiefly the spirit of the rival candidates was responsible. The case of our own favorite son, Senator Sherman, was a conspicuous example. It was clear from the beginning of the convention that, however available he was and however well founded his hopes and claims were, he and his supporters loyally placed duty to the party and the nation above his private cause and stood ready at the first clear opportunity to waive his own personal interest and throw his strength for the candidate who seemed after fair deliberation the best choice. It was Senator Sherman and his supporters who first among the rival candidates determined upon Justice Hughes, and with this news the nomination became virtually assured.

The other candidacies were advanced in much the same spirit of devotion to the common purpose to select the best and strongest man, and the promise is for a campaign of harmony and confidence.

The Progressive convention was surcharged with feeling and was more seriously divided. One wing, led by the irreconcilables or radicals, was, however, kept in check by the cooler and more farsighted leaders, and an attempt to bring about a common nomination and essential reunion was carried through two days. Unfortunately at the end the more impatient element prevailed and the convention nominated Roosevelt when the certainty of Hughes' choice by the Republicans became known.

The Progressive nomination, however, has not been perfected by the acceptance of Col. Roosevelt, and only the extremists can refuse support to a candidate of Justice Hughes' mental and moral caliber and distinguished record as one of the first and most formidable leaders of progressivism.

THE OLD GUARD DIED.

Members of the Old Guard were much in evidence at the Republican convention. They were cartooned and interviewed. They had good seats on the platform. But it is obvious that in the deliberations of the party they had little influence. In the committee rooms they were not conspicuous. They still retained their epaulets, but they were clearly on the retired list. They were treated politely, but no one paid them much attention.

Penrose, for example, could not even control his own delegation. They would not be delivered. Murray Crane was there in the flesh, but his spirit and his influence seemed to have oozed away since 1912. Chauncey Depew and Uncle Joe Cannon were used as stop gaps to entertain the crowd during a lull.

New heads are controlling the Republican party. They are mostly younger men and more progressive men. None of them has yet been acknowledged as the national head of the party. On Saturday they completed the first work they have undertaken on their own account, unbossed by the Old Guard.

It will be their task to build up an effective party organized on progressive lines and capable of dealing in clear headed fashion with the two main problems facing the United States—industrialism and the position of the United States in the family of nations. A part of the most effective liberals left the party with Roosevelt in 1912. Their return will be welcomed with enthusiasm. Their places at the council board await them.

This revived Republican party needs the Progressives. The problem of today is to reunite the Republicans.

SUMMER MUSIC.

It may be said with some assurance that summer parks like Ravinia, like the last season of the Midway Gardens and concerts given each year by the Chicago band, do more for the popularity of music in America than anything but the phonograph.

In summer time listening to music is stripped of its pose. If an audience does not go for entertainment it does not go for any other reason. And an advance for music in this country does not require a greater knowledge about music but a greater capacity for enjoying it.

That is where the earnest and self-sacrificing propagandists for an American music make their mistake, or most of them do. Their enterprises are marked with the mark of culture and uplift and the plain man resents them. When he is looking for entertainment he will not be dragged into an atmosphere which shouts at him that it is for his own good.

Listening to music in summer has none of this. No one is expected to read program notes. He is not even expected to listen if he happens to be bored. He is not expected to learn anything about the anatomy of a symphony. He is not supposed to be offended at the "Blue Danube" and no cultured person scorns his admiration of a flashy piece of Berlioz. His social standing is in no way dependent upon making intelligent remarks about the music. In the summer no one cares.

In the winter the musician works—and so does the audience. In summer the musician plays and the audience does likewise. It will be the discovery by Americans that music is pleasant to listen to, and not the study of music, which will make America a musical nation.

INSULTING LETTERS.

[From the Sycamore Post-Standard.]

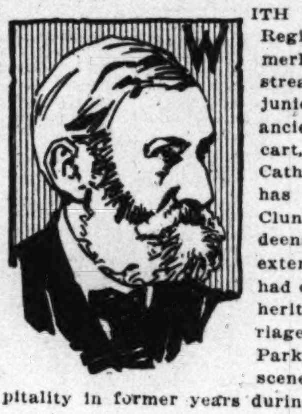
In these days of stenographers and dictophones many modern concerns do not find time for common courtesy.

"I am, sir, your most obedient and respectful servant," is no longer with us. Instead we have the brief, "yours truly." This would not be so bad, were it not for the accompanying inscription sometimes found at the left of the sheet, preferably rubber stamped, with some such announcement as "Dictated but not read by So-and-So."

A letter should be as courteous as a conversation.

LA MARQUISE DE FONTENOY

[Copyright: 1916: By the Brentwood Company.]



WITH the death of Sir Reginald Cathcart, formerly of the Coldstream guards, the junior branch of the ancient house of Cathcart, of which Lord Cathcart was the chief, has become extinct. Cluny castle, in Aberdeenshire, and all the extensive estate which had come to him by inheritance and by marriage, including Titness Park, at Ascot, the scene of so much hospitality in former years during the Ascot week, remains in the possession of his wife. She was Miss Emily Pringle before she married John Gordon, Scottish territorial magnate, who left her an income of $250,000 a year.

The Cathcarts have always been soldiers since that Sir Alan Cathcart who figured so prominently in the battle of Loudoun hill, in 1307, and is thus recorded by Barbour in "The Bruce":

"A knight that then was in his rout,
Worthy and withy, stalwart and stout,
Courteous and fair, and of good fame,
Sir Alan Cathcart was his name."

His great-great-grandson was the first Lord Cathcart and warden of the West Marches. The second Lord Cathcart and his two brothers fell beside their king at the battle of Flodden field. The third Lord Cathcart was killed at the battle of Pinkie.

The eighth Lord Cathcart was one of the most distinguished generals of the campaigns of the first duke of Marlborough and died in 1740 on his way to America to take up the command in chief of all the British forces on this side of the Atlantic and was buried on the beach of Prince Rupert's bay, in the Island of Dominique. The ninth Lord Cathcart was dangerously wounded at the battle of Fontenoy, in which one of his brothers was killed.

The tenth Lord Cathcart was for many years ambassador to the court of Russia, attending Alexander I. throughout the Napoleonic campaign. Married to a daughter of Andrew Elliot, one of the last British governors of New York, he lives in history as having conceived the idea of setting on fire the city of Moscow and as having induced Alexander I. to put it into execution rather than to allow Moscow to become a winter shelter for Napoleon's army in 1812.

He was the general in command of the expedition to Copenhagen, and as such divided nearly $2,000,000 in prize money with the admiral associated with him in the affair, Lord Gambier.

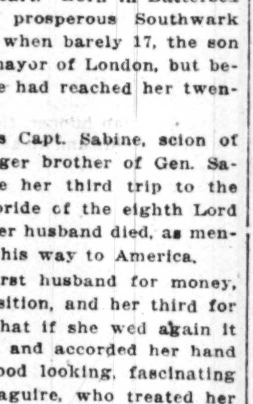
He was raised to an earldom, and while his eldest son, who took part in the battle of Waterloo as aid de camp to the duke of Wellington, was at one time governor general and commander in chief in British North America, his second son, Sir George Cathcart, also with Wellington at Waterloo, commanded the fourth division of the British army in the Crimea and fell in the battle of Inkerman.

◆

One of the most extraordinary stories in the annals of this ancient house is that of the wife of the eighth Lord Cathcart. Born in Battersea as the daughter of a prosperous Southwark tradesman, she married, when barely 17, the son of Sir John Fleet, lord mayor of London, but became a widow before she had reached her twentieth birthday.

Her next husband was Capt. Sabine, scion of an old family and younger brother of Gen. Sabine. In 1739 she made her third trip to the altar, this time as the bride of the eighth Lord Cathcart. A year later her husband died, as mentioned above, at sea, on his way to America.

Having married her first husband for money, her second for social position, and her third for a title, she determined that if she wed again it would be for love alone, and accorded her hand and her fortune to a good looking, fascinating Irishman, named Col. Maguire, who treated her abominably, because unable to secure control of her fortune.



Alice, Lady Lovat, mother of that gallant general Lord Lovat who is chief of the great Scottish clan of Fraser, has followed the example of her youngest daughter, the Hon. Muriel Fraser, and has taken the veil, becoming a nun of the Visitation order. Miss Muriel Fraser took the vows three years ago, entering the Mill Hill convent, near London.

The dowager Lady Lovat is a daughter of the late Thomas Weld Blundell of Lulworth castle, in Dorsetshire, the Blundells being one of the oldest Roman Catholic families in the United Kingdom, tracing their descent to Sir Robert Blundell, who in the reign of Edward I. had the right of "shipwreck" on all the Lancashire coast.

The Weld family, which has been merged into that of Blundell by marriage, has even still more ancent lineage, tracing their descent from Edric "the Wild," a cousin of the Anglo-Saxon king Harold, who fell at the battle of Hastings.

Sir Humphrey Weld was lord mayor of London in the early years of the reign of James I., and his grandson bought the Lulworth castle estate in 1641. It was held for King Charles I. against the parliamentarians, and one of its subsequent owners, Edward Weld, was married in 1775 to the lady who became after his death, first of all, Mrs. Fitzherbert, and then the secret wife of King George IV.

Perhaps the most notable member of the Weld family was that Thomas Weld of Lulworth castle who on the death of his wife resigned the Lulworth castle estate to his brother, entered the orders of the Roman Catholic church at Paris, and acted as a parish priest in London until 1826, when he was consecrated bishop of Amycla "in partibus infidelium" and coadjutor with the right of succession to the episcopal see of Kingston, in upper Canada.

Negotiations with the British government carried on in behalf of the papacy delayed his departure from England for Canada and rendered necessary a visit to Rome, accompanied by his daughter, who afterward became the wife of Lord Clifford.

At Rome he won the marked favor of Pius VIII., who retained him in the Eternal city, raising him to the sacred college in 1830. Having been until then coadjutor bishop of Kingston with right of succession, he may be considered to have been in reality the first Canadian cardinal.

He never left Rome again, and died there in 1837, being laid to rest in the church of St. Maria in Aquilo, where his tomb is an object of interest and of admiration to all visitors.

WEATHER AND CLIMATE.

MR. F. A. CARPENTER, writing on the physician and the weather bureau in the Journal of the American Medical Association, quotes from "Airs, Water and Places," written by Hippocrates 600 years before Christ.

Whoever wishes to investigate medicine properly should proceed thus: In the first place, consider the seasons of the year and what effect each of them produces (for they are not all alike, but differ much from themselves in regard to their changes). Then the winds, the hot and the cold, especially such as are common to both countries and then such as are peculiar to each locality.

We must also consider the qualities of the water, for as they differ from one another in taste and weight so also do they differ much in their qualities. In the same manner, when one comes into a city to which he is a stranger, he ought to consider its situation, how it lies as to the winds and rising of the sun; for its influence is not the same whether it lies to the north or to the south, to the rising or to the setting sun.

By weather we mean the daily variations in certain qualities of the atmospheric air—the temperature, humidity, wind velocity and direction, the precipitation, the amount and character of cloud and fog and the degree of light and the quality of the sunshine. Variations in these at different hours during the day and night and on one day as compared with the next is what constitutes weather. All of these variations and qualities, rolled together, make what is called climate.

Hann's definition is, "Climate is the sum total of the weather as usually experienced during a longer or shorter period of time at any given season."

Physicians have always attributed great curative powers to good climate on the one hand and great power of harm to bad climate on the other. It cannot be said that these opinions have always been founded on established facts, and in the light of more accurate information some of our facts are liable to be discovered to be even less than near facts.

For instance, hot climates have borne a bad reputation. The heat itself was held to be enervating and even productive of disease. Much of this reputation is not deserved. We know now that the malaria of the tropics is not due to miasma which arise from the swamps and which cannot be lessened, but is due to infected mosquitoes which can be controlled absolutely. Yellow fever also is not a matter of climate, but of mosquitoes.

There are other conditions of the body which in olden times were ascribed to climate, which are now known to be due to controllable causes not directly chargeable to clomate. On the other hand, the curative effects of climate have been exaggerated in some instances.

A generation ago persons with consumption were sent to Mobile and New Orleans. The theory was that a soft climate was helpful in this disease. Then came the proposal to send them to the arctics. The theory was that a hard climate was helpful in this disease. Out of this uncertainty there is about to arise a good deal of dependable information.

The weather bureau of the federal government gathers daily observations on the weather at nearly 5,000 points in the United States. Two hundred of these are regular stations, fully equipped with all necessary apparatus and manned by experienced observers. These are supplemented by over 4,000 special stations, each having some equipment and manned by an observer of some experience. In the state of California there are nine regular stations and 315 special stations. Texas has twelve regular and 206 special stations. New York has seven regular and 111 special stations.

Every part of the country is well covered by observers from the weather bureau. The information gathered by these stations is made up into weather maps and distributed throughout the country. From the data thus obtained the climate of different sections of the country is determined. The weather bureau is prepared to furnish information about any climate in the Unitetd States, or in the world, for that matter.

Bulletins of climatology of the United States give valuable information as to every part of the United States. The bureau has issued seventy bulletins relating to different phases of weather and climate. The climatological service publishes a monthly and an annual summary, giving a large amount of climatological data for each month and year.

Publications on weather and climate by men connected with the weather bureau, but whose books are published by outside parties are available. Among such are Cox's "Weather and Climate of Chicago" and its predecessor, Hazen's "Climate of Chicago." The Maryland weather service has issued a somewhat similar study of the weather of Baltimore. Then there are such books as Solly's "Climatology of the United States" and Hinsdale's "Air."

To supplement the work of the weather bureau by studying climate in relation to disease and the physical welfare of people there is a national organization—the American Climatological association. This organization, composed of the leading authorities, meets once a year to discuss such questions as the relative advantages of different climates for different diseases, the qualities of different climates, and the effect of climate on the body. Their discussions are printed in Yearly Transactions.

There is, therefore, plenty of literature about climates, although some of it is not scientific. If a man thinks of changing climate on account of some disease he need not jump in the dark. He can get all the information he needs by writing to the weather bureau or by reading some one of the books on the subject.

◆

CONSUMPTION.—It is held that climate is worth about 15 per cent in the cure of consumption. This means that the average consumptive, who succeeds in finding a climate which fits him and his case, and who can have the same rest, out of doors living, good food, and freedom from homesickness and worry, will improve his chances of recovery 15 per cent. Some of them improve their chances much more than that.

On the other hand, more of them lose what little chance they had by changing climate. Climate will not cure if the patient is short of money, must worry about finances, cannot get good food or rest or life in the open or competent medical care and nursing. Solis Cohen says that a man must have $1,000 for himself and his family provided for in order that he shall change climate with advantage.

The question as to which is the best climate must be answered for each case. Speaking generally, the best climate is that with the least rainfall, the lowest humidity, the greatest number of days of sunshine, the brightest light, the least dust, and the mildest winds. Again, speaking generally, the higher altitudes and the colder climates are the best.

Speaking generally again, the best sections are the eastern and southwestern slopes of the Rocky mountains from Montana on the north to Arizona on the south and west. Good, though less good, are the mountain ranges east of the Mississippi river, and especially the Blue Ridge mountains in western North Carolina and the Adirondacks and Catskills.

Elliott says there is no one best climate. Cases that are somewhat advanced or persons who are weak from other diseases do best in the warmer, dryer air of southern Arizona, southern New Mexico, and southwestern Texas. In these districts the altitudes are not high. More vigorous patients do better at higher altitudes and in colder sections.

◆

BONE AND GLAND TUBERCULOSIS.—These cases do well at high altitudes and by the seashore. Much of the good effect is due to the purity of the sun's rays. Where the sun's rays are least intercepted by dirt and impalpable dust there is the maximum amount of ultra violet rays. It is the ultra violet end of the ray which is most capable of killing bacteria. The pure water washed air of the seashore contains much ultra violet. The sun's rays on the tops of high mountains contain even more. The seashore sanitaria are especially valuable for the following diseases: Tuberculosis of the bones, glands, and skin scrofula, anemia.

CHRONIC BRIGHT'S DISEASE.—Persons with chronic Bright's disease will do well to spend their winters at least in a moist, warm, even climate. A moist climate is better than one in which the air is dry. Florida, Georgia, Alabama, and Mississippi, especially the gulf coast region of these states, are about the best. Southern California is good, but the great difference between the night and day temperatures is somewhat against the southern California climate.

The desert climates of California, Nevada, Arizona, and New Mexico are good for some cases of chronic Bright's disease, though for most they are not. They cause too great a loss of water from the skin and too much concentration of the urine.

CHRONIC BRONCHITIS AND ASTHMA.—Generally speaking, sufferers from this condition do best at low altitudes near the sea and in semi-tropical climates. Redlands, Cal., was settled by an asthmatic, who had wandered from Dakota all over the west looking for relief. He camped one night where Redlands now is, got a good night's sleep, and decided to drive his stake right there. Redlands is about sixty miles inland, at a considerable elevation and surrounded by mountains. It is dryer, warmer in summer, and slightly colder in winter than Los Angeles. Speaking generally, asthmatics should do better toward Los Angeles.

No part of the country is free from hay fever, but certain parts are much freer than others. Since the disease is due to the effects of certain pollens on people who have been made keenly sensitive to pollens, the ideal plan to avoid the disease is to go to the sea when the hay fever season approaches and to remain at sea until it has passed.

About the next best plan is to pass the hay fever season on some small island in the gulf, lakes, or ocean, or on some high mountain above the timber line. The United States Hay Fever association issues an annual bulletin, from which it appears that there is a small area near the south shore of Lake Superior and another in the mountain region of New England, where there is not much hay fever. There is less than the average amount in Florida and along the gulf coast generally.

DISEASED ARTERIES.

F. J. D. writes: "I am a man 62 years old. A year ago I had a stroke of apoplexy. My blood pressure was 210. About two weeks later I began to improve. Now I can walk well. During the last eight months I have had a numb feeling in my thumb and front finger, in my lips, and on the left side of my face. My face is a little drawn. My thumb feels like it had been hit with a hammer. My feet get cold. My blood pressure ranges between 160 and 210. I drink little. I do not drink soda fountain drinks. I drink only one cup of coffee a day, eat bran bread, soft boiled eggs, vegetables, and a little meat. What else can I do to keep blood pressure down? Did high blood pressure cause my paralysis?"

REPLY.

You have diseased arteries. This accounts for your apoplexy, numbness, tingling sensations, cold feet, and high blood pressure. The disease of the blood vessel wall called atheroma results from lead poisoning, syphilis, nicotine poisoning, and possible attacks of various kinds of contagion. Whenever the blood pressure of a man with atheroma shoots up he is in special danger of apoplexy. You should go to a great deal of trouble to hold your pressure down. Never allow your bowels to become constipated. Whenever your pressure goes up or whenever you feel bilious take a purgative. Become a vegetarian. Live on fruits, vegetables, milk, bread, and soups.

BUTTERMILK AND FAT.

L. C. C. writes: "I am a young married woman on a diet to reduce. Some persons say buttermilk is fattening, others say it helps to reduce. Which is correct?"

REPLY.

Both are right. Both are wrong. If one eats abundantly of other food and then drinks abundantly of buttermilk he will get fat. If he lives on buttermilk alone or eats sparingly of all foods, including buttermilk, he will get thin. It is the quantitity that counts. There are buttermilk cures for overweight. There are buttermilk cures for underweight.

WANTS INQUIRER'S ADDRESS.

Mr. W. H. Osborn, Coldwater, Mich., would like very much to communicate with the mother of the child with muscular atrophy, "Mrs. W. F." His boy had the same trouble and died after being looked after by the best men in the country. He and his wife just want to write and tell the mother, who is poor, that even if she had plenty of money nothing more can be done than is being done.

BREAKFAST IN A FRONT TRENCH.

Tommy—The bloomin' dugout's flooded out, the biscuit's wet, the tea's cold, and there ain't nothin' to warm it with.

Sergeant—O, chuck it! I dunno what some of you blighters would do if you 'ad to rough it!

NOTIFIED TO GRADE LOT.

Chicago, June 6.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Will you kindly inform me if there is any way that I can prevent my neighbor from draining his premises through my basement? My neighbor, living at 3659 Cortland street, has lately raised his rear half of lot one foot or more above sidewalk level and left his front part of lot low and in such shape that it drains towards my house and into my basement. He keeps chickens, which, by the way, he houses under his house.

EMIL SCHULTZ.

As a result of an investigation made by one of our inspectors a notice was served on the owner of the premises to properly grade the east side of the lot so that water from same will not flow on adjoining premises. The inspector found no evidence of a nuisance from the chickens, but ordered the owner to remove the accumulation of manure from the yard.

JOHN DILL ROBERTSON,
Commissioner of Health.

WILL MAKE NECESSARY REPAIRS.

Chicago, June 6.—[To the Friend of the People.]—The grating of the wagon tires over the seven manhole covers at the crossing of Nineteenth and Paulina streets from the early morning hours has been bad enough, but now there are ruts worn where one pavement meets the other. The traffic being constant and of the heavy kind, each truck as it jumps the holes makes a thundering noise and its load is thrown and settles with a clatter.

F. D. DLOUHY,
1701 West Nineteenth street.

Our inspector has investigated conditions at this intersection, and we have ordered the necessary repairs to be made at an early date.

WM. G. GREGORI,
Assistant Superintendent of Streets.

PAVING THOMAS STREET.

Chicago, June 6.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Please say whether or not Thomas street, between Sacramento boulevard and California avenue, will be paved within the near future, also Francisco avenue, between Chicago avenue and Division street.

NICHOLAS WOLLNER,
105 North Richmond street.

These two streets are in a system of streets on which public hearing was held on April 4 1916, and they will probably be paved late in the fall.

M. J. FAHERTY,
President Board of Local Improvements.

PAVE RIDGE AVENUE THIS YEAR.

Chicago, June 5.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Please advise me if Ridge avenue, between Clark street and Broadway, will be paved this year.

P. BOURKE, 5812 Ridge avenue.

Bids have been opened, but the contract has not yet been awarded. This street will be paved this year.

M. J. FAHERTY,

DEPENDS UPON CHARTER OF CORPORATION.

Chicago, June 8.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I own a three flat building on which I have a first mortgage of $2,000, which I borrowed from a building and loan association on which they charge me 6 per cent per annum, and I in turn have to pay for twenty shares at 25 cents each, or $5 per week for six and a half years, when a release with all papers will be given me. A distant relative wanted to buy a mortgage for about the above amount from the same man who is treasurer of the above building and loan association, but also runs a real estate and loan office, and he offered to sell this relative of mine the mortgage he holds against my property, explaining the mortgage calls for 6 per cent but he (the real estate man) was to retain ¾ per cent per annum as collection fee. Has a building and loan association the right to resell mortgages that were taken out as above described, and who is supposed to get the ¾ per cent as collection fee? Should that not go to the stockholders as profit, proportioned according to the number of shares they hold? Where can I get a bylaw book on building and loan associations?

J. S.

The answer depends, of course, upon the charter and bylaws of the corporation. You are entitled to examine these. Go to the company office and do so.

BUILDING OF CONNECTING FENCE.

Chicago, June 7.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—1. We own an apartment building on Greenwood avenue facing west. There is no fence on the north side of the lot. The owner of the property adjoining ours on that side does not care to have a fence built, but it seems to us advisable in order to protect our garden and shrubs from cats and children. Please let me know if there is any ordinance providing for the building of a fence under a condition of this sort. 2. Will it be necessary for us to bear the entire expense?

A. I. M.

1. No ordinance.
2. Yes, unless you can adjust it by an agreement.

COURT WILL FIX ADMINISTRATOR'S FEE.

Chicago, June 8.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—As an administrator of an estate, what per cent of the estate is the administrator entitled to when the estate is sold?

J. E.

He is entitled to an amount which the court thinks a proper payment for his work, but not exceeding 6 per cent of the assets.

RESENTS ASPERSIONS ON GERMAN-AMERICANS.

Chicago, June 6.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—The writer is not a member of the Germanamerican alliance, however, I wish to state Mr. Roosevelt is the biggest fourflusher the world has ever known. These fish stories about "attempted assassination" as were pulled off at Kansas City don't go very far with people who know every available scheme is carried out to force the American people to give Roosevelt his third cup of coffee and thereby Wall street with all its greed will be substantially benefited.

The insult that has been cast upon the American citizens by this man Roosevelt can never be forgotten. If the Republicans want to be defeated, nominate Roosevelt; the handwriting is on the wall.

Roosevelt seems to have the idea whatever he does and says is authentic and constitutional, and whenever anybody else fights for things that our great presidents like Washington and Lincoln fought for they are "moral traitors." In the name of all that is American, bury this man Roosevelt; he is so foul with race hatred Europe is no comparison. Only a few short years ago he was so proud of all the "hyphens" in his blood when he gave a big campaign speech on Twelfth street to arouse the hyphenated voters that he had to make a big blow about it, and now he says shoot the hyphen in the back. What a difference a few years make!

Mr. Roosevelt must be elected to help the poor beggars like J. P. Morgan get rich on the poor taxpayers of this country.

I am for preparedness, but only to such an extent no one will become rich through it. A man who voted for Roosevelt twice.

M. F. DALIES.

DOESN'T TAKE ORDERS FROM BERLIN.

Chicago, June 6.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Having read of some German editors stating that the Germans will line up solid against Theodore Roosevelt if he is nominated for president, permit me to ask by what authority they make such statement?

Of course, Germans taking orders from Berlin, no doubt, will put up a solid front against every genuine, loyal, and patriotic American, but there are hundreds of thousands of American citizens of German extraction, loyal to their adopted country, who will absolutely refuse to take orders from Berlin and its agents in this country, and who will as solidly cast their vote for Roosevelt in the coming election as they would for any other acceptable candidate, and I am one of them.

H. F. SCHULTZ.

COMPULSORY SERVICE THE ONLY THING.

Davenport, Ia., June 5.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—The army bill as passed by the house is utterly useless. If any one has any doubts that the above assertion is correct, let him read the frantic effort made by the recruiting officers to increase the fast dwindling regular army after the raid at Columbus. "Catch Villa," the slogan used, failed to enthuse the young men, and the result was the enlistments barely filled up the gap caused by deaths and expiration of service.

The call for the national guard from the three states and the answer show the broken reed the government is leaning on when the powers that be depend on that force.

If the people will read the history of this government they will find that the militia has been utterly useless in every emergency that has arisen.

What else is left? Compulsory service is the only alternative. Will it work? There are 3,250,000 in the federation of labor and over 2,000,000 Socialists and peace cranks against the increase of the army or navy in any form.

We have no army to enforce compulsion. What is in the future for America? That is the paramount question. We are facing a crisis that has no parallel in the history of this people. How will it end?

H. F. ERRETT.

VOLUNTEER SYSTEM WON'T DO.

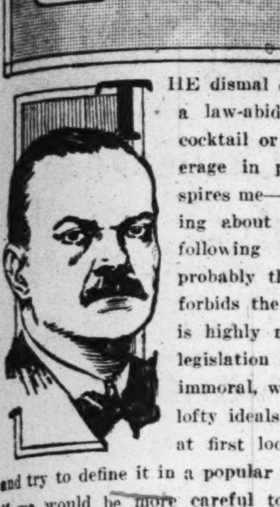
Remus, Mich., Route 4, June 5.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I am a subscriber to your paper and I endeavor to read all of the editorials printed in it. I have just finished reading one entitled, "Soldiers Who Won't Fight." I have been interested, as well, in others which have had to deal with universal military service. I wish to place myself on record, as a farmer, a citizen of these United States, and as a graduate of the University of Illinois. In case of need I would gladly go to war, if we have universal service, but under the volunteer system I never will go, even in the direst need.

The system is not just, and I for one do not propose to foster in any way a system that means trouble for our country if adhered to. I have had military training at the University of Illinois, and I think it is a great thing. I am glad I had it. But I am not philanthropic enough to offer to do some one else's duty, when that duty is everybody's duty. We all have to pay taxes; therefore, why not all help to defend our country?

DOUGLAS TIBBITS.

JUSTE MILIEU

By Edward Goldbeck



THE dismal experience that on Sunday a law-abiding citizen cannot get a cocktail or any other pernicious beverage in puritan Thompsonville inspires me—if there is anything inspiring about so dry a fact—with the following heresies. The reformers probably think that a statute which forbids the sale of liquor on Sunday is highly moral. To me prohibitive legislation of this kind seems naïvely immoral, while I fully appreciate the lofty ideals of its advocates. Let us at first look at the word "moral" and try to define it in a popular and practical way, because if we would be more careful to define we would be less liable to quarrel.

A man is moral when he chooses the good and scorns the bad of his own free will. Let us eliminate the philosophical problem whether the will is free or not, let us assume that it is; let us neglect the other philosophical question what the terms "good" and "bad" mean, and let us suppose that to drink alcohol on Sunday is bad. I deny it most emphatically, but I will concede it for argument's sake.

Then, according to our definition, a man who avoids drinking wine or beer on Sunday is moral, but only if he does it spontaneously, by a resolution of his own, because he is convinced that drinking alcohol on Sunday is sin. If such is the case, he proves his moral sense, and a legislation which gives him the choice between virtue and sin, between innocent water and Satanic beer, is moral. Legislation which deprives him of his free decision, of his initiative, of his responsibility, is immoral; it is against the intention of the Creator, who wanted his creature to be tempted, to wrestle with sin, to succumb, to repent and do penance, to fight anew, and to vanquish. This and nothing else is "Pilgrim's Progress."

Imagine for a moment that it would be possible to extend this kind of legislation over the whole domain of human appetite and lust: then no sin could be committed, gradually the very notion of sin would vanish from man's intellect and vocabulary and we would be "nonmoral," without moral; we would have reached Nietzsche's ideal condition of being "beyond good and evil," by means of a vehemently anti-Nietzschean detour. If the man whom legislation prevents from sinning is the moral man par excellence, then the prisoner would be our highest type. The reformer may claim that a preventive legislation produces satisfying social results, but these results are transient and superficial.

Preventive legislation is not educational; it does not reach the soul, it does not enhance the moral strength of the individual, and that ought to be our aim. A man who does not drink because it is physically impossible to get a drink, a soldier, for instance, who marches through the desert, may be a latent drunkard and may become an avowed drunkard as soon as circumstances permit such a development. A man who does not drink because he thinks that for certain reasons he ought not to, is acting morally. A moral action is impossible if you are not "master of your fate."

I AM in the agreeable situation to have some weighty authorities on my side, in case you care for dead people's opinions. St. Paul says: "All things are lawful unto me, but all things are not expedient: all things are lawful for me, but I will not be brought under the power of any." I do not know whether this is the orthodox standpoint of the Christian, but I think that it is the attitude of a normal man. In total abstinence there is hidden the element of fear, the consciousness of being weak; the autonomous human being, strong enough to enjoy and to end enjoying, will prefer self-imposed temperance. The average man who is not intimidated and misled by overzealous reformers will always say: "I shall have a drink whenever I want it and do not see any necessity of being treated like a child which does not know what is beneficent and what is harmful; I am sure that I will not be brought under the power of alcohol."

After the wisdom of the apostle, let us listen to the other immortal power of civilization. What did the Greeks think about this matter? They had a saying, "Give a pledge and evil is nigh at hand!" with which our mayor will heartily agree; and on the columns of the Temple of Delphi there were these two inscriptions to be read: "Know thyself," and "Nothing too much!" The latter command dominated the entire life of the Greeks and they went so far as to say: "Be not righteous overmuch, neither make thyself overwise."

Moved by this feeling, a friend wrote to Polycrates, Fortune's famous minion: "It is sweet to learn the good luck of a friend united to us by ties of hospitality; yet I am not content with thy great prosperity, knowing the envy of the divine nature; and I may say I wish, both for myself and my connections, to speed here and to fail there in my doings, with chequered fortune. Be therefore persuaded of me and do as I bid in respect of thy prosperity. Consider what thou mayst find of highest value to thee, and what if lost would bring greatest regret to thy heart, and this cast away from thee, so as it shall never again be seen among men."

The Christian will reject this advice as heathenish superstition, but it is not so very different from St. Paul's firm resolution: "I will not be brought under the power of anything." The Greeks had a deep insight into the limitations of human nature and shunned nothing so much as "Hybris," overbearingness, while the apostle boldly challenged the world with all its perishable allurements, backed as he felt himself to be by a supernatural power. But the Greek wisdom, "Nothing too much," leaves man not less independent in his decisions; it leaves him a moral being, unfettered and apt to select between good and evil.

PASCAL, the deepest religious thinker France ever produced, has warned: Qui veut faire l'ange, fait la bête. (Who wants to make an angel, makes a beast.) By forbidding relatively harmless things we lead the way to less innocent pleasures. Mankind, and particularly modern mankind, needs stimulants, and there are more dangerous ones than a glass of beer or a cocktail. There is nothing that could not be misused, and we ought to forbid cigars, cigarets, coffee, and tea just as well. All the women reformers had better commit suicide to take temptation out of our way. The world would be a delicious place after such a cleaning up.

It probably will be wiser to acknowledge that human beings were not made to be "phantoms of delight." We need an allotment of so-called bad qualities, our share of human errors and weaknesses. Paternalistic legislation aims at a type of anæmic correctness, the man who at his best will be innocuous, but hardly ever will do anything admirable. The strong men of all times were robust and sensuous, and most of them would have said with Schiller's Wallenstein:

Mich schuf aus groeber'm Stoffe die Natur
Und zu der Erde zieht mich die Begierde.

(I was made of rougher clay and my appetite is earthly.) Chatham drank too much port, Fox was an unregenerate gambler, Victor Emmanuel an unscrupulous woman hunter, and the mightiest creator of poetry was the slave of a dark and degrading passion. Their virtues and their deficiencies are inseparable. Do you think that a flawless Shakespeare could have conceived those eruptions, thunderstorms, earthquakes which we primly call his dramas?

* *

THE battle cry, "Alcohol is poison!" is a ridiculous exaggeration. William I., the old German emperor, was a wise and good man and grew to be 90 years old. Prince Hohenlohe-Ingelfingen relates in his "Memoirs" that on a trip through Germany at all the stations where the train stopped the municipal dignitaries offered the king a drink in a costly vessel, den Ehrentrunk. The monarch emptied it almost every time and the adjutant was at first a little worried about the outcome, but the king's complexion showed not the slightest change when they arrived at Vienna. Bismarck, as a man of 80, very often drank two or three pints of champagne at luncheon. The greatest German actor of the nineteenth century, Albert Niemann, was famous for his unquenchable thirst, and he is 85 today and as hale and hearty as a man of 60. Wine and beer have caused very much unhappiness, but they have provided innumerable hours of relief and of harmless joy. The only question is not "to be brought under their power."

Juste milieu! The right medium has been praised by St. Paul and Plato, by old Horace, the graceful poet, and by modern Guizot, the stiff historian. We must not be too absolute in our judgments, too sweeping in our measures. We must not believe in panaceas, and must remember that "force is no remedy." The tyrannous although well meaning legislation of an intolerant majority (which is a minority) will not improve the moral standard of the citizen.

Juste milieu! Wherever we look, we find the motto confirmed by history and experience. In bygone centuries heretics were burned and faith was the stern demand of the day. Undoubtedly faith has done wonders, but where would the world be without skepticism? Too much faith petrifies, too much skepticism dissolves.

* *

THE mind is more important than the body, but if we spiritualize ourselves too unsparingly the mind will suffer and the body will resemble a ruin haunted by ghosts.

The ideal of purity is fascinating, but those who tried to live in sexless asceticism became only too often victims of their mistreated instincts. We ought to strive for truth, but we cannot exist without sweet illusion, and Schiller and Ibsen proclaim that truth kills. We believe that justice ought to be done, but summum ius, summa injuria.

In a certain period of her history a nation must exclusively think of her actual needs; in another period she must try to resurrect her past and emphasize her tradition.

A government may follow conservative principles today and liberal principles ten years later.

This is the natural tide and flow of human life. If we advance at all, we do so slowly and through action and reaction. There is no paradise on earth, and if there were the path of the fanatic would not lead to it. The philosopher will state that and take his cocktail on Monday until a wave of revolt has swept away austere Bill and his relentless rule.

ASIA AWAKES

By Jesse F. Steiner

Herewith is presented the final chapter of a book on Japan, by Jesse F. Steiner, now completing graduate work at the University of Chicago. Mr. Steiner taught Japanese boys in Japan for seven years, speaks and reads Japanese, and understands the Japanese people. His book has not yet been published.

"What Japan has now to do is to keep perfectly quiet, to lull the suspicions that have arisen against her, and to wait, meanwhile strengthening the foundations of her national power, watching and waiting for the opportunity which must one day surely come in the orient. When that day arrives she will be able to follow her own course; not only able to put meddling powers in their places but even, as necessity arises, to meddle with the affairs of other powers. Then truly she will be able to reap advantage for herself."—Count Hayashi.

THAT Asia is awake and is becoming increasingly conscious of its strength is a fact that can no longer be ignored. For many years the west has found it convenient and quite to its own interest to regard the orient as a sleeping giant which, like Jack Horner's Christmas pie, could be exploited or insulted as the occasion seemed to demand. It has been assumed that the white man, because of his superior intelligence and culture, has the first right to all the desirable places in the world; that men of color should do the bidding of the white man and contribute to his prosperity; that our self-imposed task of uplifting these backward races should atone for any seeming wrong and injustice that we may cause them to suffer.

Such assumptions have proved so advantageous to the west that we have been loath to believe that the revolutionary changes in the east have any serious significance for us. While Japan's rapid growth in military power, her victory over a western nation, and her imperialistic ambitions have provoked much comment in Europe and America, there has been too little effort made to see the bearing of it all upon the future relations of the east and the west.

In many quarters it has been the tendency to regard the awakening in Asia as confined largely to Japan alone. Western writers usually describe the Japanese as a peculiarly adaptable people who possess far more than other orientals the gift of profiting by contact with foreign civilization. When our attention is called to a possible yellow peril, we comfort ourselves with the thought that ambitious Japan is only a small island empire and that the vast mass of the orient is still asleep. But the whole trend of recent events in the far east makes it clear that the awakening of Asia cannot be limited to any one nation.

The past failure of the Chinese to profit by western intercourse must be attributed not to any racial inability, but to their strong prepossession in favor of their own civilization. Under the stress of the necessity of protecting their national existence, they are showing a remarkable facility in learning the lessons that the west has to teach. It is now plainly evident that the Chinese millions are abandoning their complacent, self-sufficient attitude and are gathering their strength in a more determined and effective manner than has ever characterized them in the past.

That the general awakening in eastern Asia will eventually mean a military struggle between the east and the west is a possibility about which it is useless to speculate. We may be sure, however, that these changes now going on in the east will involve radical readjustments in our international relations with oriental powers. The west has already learned the necessity of dealing with Japan as an equal. When China has gained sufficient prestige to demand similar treatment our old attitude of superiority and condescension toward the yellow races can only be maintained at our peril. Foreign aggression in the orient will then be no longer tolerated. The right of oriental nations to govern their own territories will be recognized as the natural thing. The sorry spectacle of the great Chinese nation split up into a number of foreign principalities will only be a matter of historical interest.

It is conceivable that the revolutionary readjustment of western relations with the orient may take place without force of arms. Eastern peoples have too great a recognition of the value of trade to wish to drive the west out of the east. They will insist on their right to rule themselves, but economic necessity will insure a ready welcome for foreign capital and will make the presence of foreign business men a necessary factor in their business and industrial life.

The world significance of waking Asia must be found not so much in the military yellow peril that will close the open door in the east, but rather in the increased stimulus that will be given to emigration from the orient to the west. Up to the present time western opposition to oriental immigration has kept back the stream of Asiatics that has threatened to pour into the more sparsely settled regions of the western world. Whenever the orientals have tried to better their lot by sharing in the opportunities to be found in the countries dominated by white men, they have met with a stern rebuff. Their exclusion thus far has not caused serious trouble. With the balance of power in our hands, they did not dare to question the justice of our decision.

But with Asia thoroughly awake the problem may not be so easily solved. It is not merely a question of the oriental nation gaining sufficient military power to compel us to adopt a different policy. The point of even more vital significance is the fact that an awakened orient will have new desires that their country cannot satisfy and which will make almost resistless the tendency to emigrate to lands that offer better opportunities. When 500,000,000 of Asiatics become filled with the restless spirit that results from contact with a higher standard of living, existing treaties will prove to be ineffectual barriers to oriental hordes.

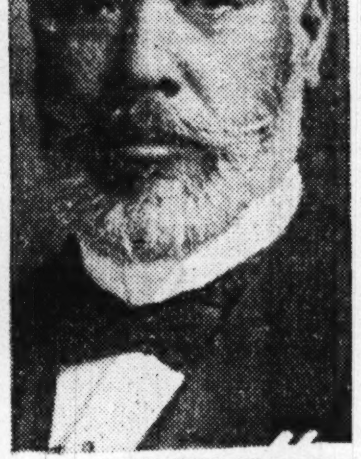
It is this aspect of the oriental problem that vitally concerns the western world. On the one hand we have the sparsely settled countries of the west, with their wonderful opportunities for exploitation and development; on the other the constant push of economic forces literally driving the people of the crowded east out into the more favored lands where the conditions of life are not so hard. It is at once evident that here exists a situation with which it will be difficult to deal. It involves more than the question of an armed orient ready to fight for its honor and for the things it may choose to demand.



Count Hayashi

The motive power back of the movement is stronger than national honor. It is nothing less than hunger, the desire for food to sustain life and make possible the rearing of their children.

A glance at present conditions in the far east will at once make clear how actively these economic forces are at work. Japan is now in a stage of industrial transition. The old handicraft system is giving way to factories, thus throwing out of employment thousands of skilled artisans. The rapid development of industry has caused a movement of population to cities with all of its attending evils of congestion, improper sanitation, hard working conditions, and low wages. These workmen are forbidden by law to try to better their condition by organization. They are ground under the heel of an industrial despotism that has served to increase their wants without giving them an adequate chance to satisfy them.

The new régime has meant a great increase in prices without a corresponding increase in rates of wages. Modern science has greatly lowered the death rate while the birth rate has not been checked. With an annual increase of about 700,000 people competition is becoming so keen that many are forced to the wall. The government, instead of coming to the rescue of its people, makes excessive demands both in military service and in direct taxation. The Japanese are in fact the most heavily taxed people in the world.

All this has brought in an era of discontent that at times threatens the stability of the government. So hard is the struggle for existence of the mass of the people that thousands look eagerly for a chance to go abroad where they can make a new start in life. The government in its attempt to guide this movement has sought outlets for its people in Corea and Manchuria. Thus far this solution of their problem has resulted in failure. The difficulty is that they are countries where already live plenty of laborers who have even a lower standard of living than the Japanese. The only immigrants who can succeed there are those with capital to invest in business enterprises. Penniless and unskilled laborers find themselves up against worse conditions than they had to face in Japan.

Consequently the stream of emigration tends to go to America where even the most poverty stricken workman has a fair chance to succeed. Only those who have lived in Japan and have come in sympathetic touch with the common people can realize how prevalent is this desire to go to America. As is sometimes said, America is the land of their dreams, a goal far more attractive to them than even the enchanting paradise pictured by popular Buddhism.

This strong desire to go to America has been kept in check only by the strict regulations of the government. If the bars were let suddenly down the emigration to America would not be by thousands but by tens of thousasds. The pressure brought to bear upon the government to make this possible can hardly be overestimated. In their statement of their case to America they usually assert that the motive back of this movement is the vindication of their national honor, the determination to share in the rights granted to other nations. In reality the motive force behind it all is economic, the elemental desire for a better chance in life, a force that may soon be beyond the power of their government to control unless impassable barriers are erected abroad.

When we turn to China we see a situation as yet less acute but fraught with still greater consequences because of its vast population and the extent of its territory. The Chinese people, who outnumber us five to one, are facing all the evils of overpopulation. Abject need has taught them how to exist on the lowest possible scale of living.

In their efforts to wring a living for themselves out of the soil, the arable portions of China are tilled like a garden. Intensive agriculture is seen there at its best. Every natural resource, no matter how trifling, is made to serve its purpose. Weeds and leaves of trees are carefully gathered for fuel. Almost all kinds of flesh are used for food. Silkworms are eaten after they have produced their silk. Domestic animals that have died a natural death find their way to the larder. Rats and cats and dogs are on sale in the meat markets. Even entrails are not disdained as an article of diet. In order to keep themselves from starving the cooly classes must work far beyond their strength. The chair bearers, ricksha men and treadmill coolies wear themselves out in a few years. Their children while yet too young must take their places and aid in the struggle for food.

The death rate in China is estimated at about fifty-five per thousand. In modernized Japan, where the benefits of medical science are now put within reach of nearly all the people, they have lowered the death rate to twenty per thousand. It is reasonable to suppose that similar results will be attained in China as soon as the government enforces laws of sanitation and makes possible the training of native physicians in sufficient numbers to fight successfully against disease. Lack of railways and poor wagon roads limit lines of travel largely to navigable rivers. Moving from place to place in China is a serious matter, involving much time and inconvenience as well as expense. The millions in interior China know little of the west and possess no facilities to leave their country if they so desired.

All this will be changed when public schools wil make possible the wide circulation of newspapers and when railways will connect the large cities throughout the different provinces. The people then will not only have a wider vision of the world, but will find it easily possible to go abroad. The masses will feel stirring within them a growing discontent with their lot in life. Contact with higher standards of living will arouse within them desires beyond their power to satisfy.

It is out of situations like this that great migrations arise. Conditions in the far east indicate that China will soon be ripe for such a movement. When it begins western civilization will be put to a severe test either in stemming the tide or in assimilating the hordes from the orient.

◆

It is thus evident that this marvelous westernization of the orient in which we take much pride is putting into motion forces which may soon be beyond our power to control. Some have foreseen more or less clearly the trend of affairs in the far east, and have urged that, while yet there is time our Pacific coast be made a racial frontier where a determined stand shall be taken against the oriental immigrant invasion. To many such an attitude seems born in a spirit of provincialism and is unworthy of a hospitable nation like ours. Unfortunately such questions as the assimilability of the orientals, their ability to adapt themselves to our economic life, and their probable value as American citizens are not questions of assimilating thousands, but millions.

The problem, moreover, is one that will not respond readily to diplomatic agreements. The Japanese government, with the best intentions in the world toward America, cannot ignore the fundamental conditions in their country which determine the trend of their national policies. For at least another generation, until the period of the industrial transition in Japan is safely past, the relentless pressure of economic forces must play a predominant part in Japan's international relations. The fact that their imperialistic policy of expansion rests on what seems to be stern necessity, and not entirely on their oft mentioned determination to secure equal rights abroad, should give us sufficient assurance of their intention to carry it out in the face of all obstacles.

Where we as well as they make a mistake is in supposing that the open door policy on our part would be an important step in relieving their situation. This at its best would only give temporary relief and would not touch the root of their trouble. The ultimate welfare of the orient depends not on its right to send emigrants abroad. It must come through the removal of conditions that cause emigration. This of course cannot be done at once. It will mean a slow and painful process of industrial development. Wisely directed efforts must be made along the line of birth control. The standard of living must be raised until the mass of the people can live in reasonable comfort. When all this is attained, the immigration problem will no longer be an important issue.

We must bear in mind that the orient will not always come to us in the attitude of a suppliant. The orientals feel deeply that their cause is righteous, and their hands are strengthened by the consciousness of growing power. The west has a thousand times over in its aggressions and insults given the east good and sufficient cause for war. Whether or not the orient will make war depends upon our skill in handling the situation and in the prestige that our country possesses because of its fighting strength. No matter how much we may wish to escape it, the issue is thrust upon us. America is the frontier where must meet the east and the west, and upon the result of this meeting hinge vast consequences for the whole world.

MARCHING

By Robert Herrick

THE air this spring is full of marching. Not having a real war on our hands at present like the rest of the world, we are marching in preparation—unprepared. New York led off with twelve hours of it, and Boston has just come on with a hundred thousand marching citizens. It is the American way of expressing community sentiment—to tramp in some sort of order over the cobble stones through city streets between lines of gaping spectators. Instead of getting out in a public square, an unorganized mob, and howling tempestuously our emotions with impulsive rushes hither and thither, as they do in Italy, to demonstrate our beliefs before the eyes of apathetic authority, we march, men and women, carrying banners and placards with our sentiments inscribed thereon. We march more than we vote, more than we talk, almost. We march for suffrage and against suffrage. We march for clean streets and good government, for temperance, for our dead soldiers, for St. Patrick. It seems the readiest way to display the massed will of negligible atoms that we all are individually from the political point of view. What more impressive way is there to demonstrate that we believe in marching with guns if necessary for the defense of our country than to march without guns in citizens' costume through crowded streets? I am for marching.

I HAVE often pondered this matter of group expression. Especially when I was in Italy just before that nation joined the allies, while the real will of the people was an uncertain, unknown factor, I had occasion to reflect on the necessity and the manner of giving expression to the collective will of a mass of human beings. For mankind has far from solved this primary problem of how best to express itself. Voting, the panacea of democracies, is a woefully inadequate method, as we all know. No matter how conscientiously we may haunt the voting booth and make our crosses against long lists of names or measures submitted in referendum at the polls, we have a depressing consciousness of the chancy outcome of our vote.

What will the representatives for whom we have so carefully voted do when they get into office? How will they approach the unexpected problems of government that must present themselves? In delegating to John Jones my right of action, my will, my intelligence, in Chicago in the fall of 1913, let us say, did either of us contemplate that this John Jones would be called on in a few months to consider the manifold and thorny perplexities of national conduct during a European war? Of course not.

If any of us had dreamed that said Jones would be submitted to such a test, so obviously beyond his powers, we should have taken pains to fill his chair in congress with some one of more vitality, more intelligence, at any rate some one whose views more nearly coincided with what our own have come to be. But there he is, invested with the power to promote the national welfare or dishonor the national reputation by his pusilanimity, and nothing but death can rid me of him as my representative for two years—and by that time the harm may be done irreparably. He has helped to commit the country to a despicable and cowardly policy from which it will require painful years to extricate ourselves. Or—as is more often the case—he has not had the courage to do anything decisive—has contented himself with "playing safe" on all the big questions presented to him in the hope of somehow convincing his constituents that to do nothing is the supreme evidence of wisdom.

OBVIOUSLY John Jones, being limited and fallible like myself and the rest of his constituents, must be made acquainted by some means with what we are thinking and willing and hoping about all these fresh perplexities that are turning up. And he must be made to defend his decisions good and bad, must be made aware of the fate that awaits him at the end of his term of delegated authority if he has failed to live up to the will of the majority that seated him where he is.

Of course, there are the newspapers. They tell him something new every day in the week. But there are many of them, and they rarely tell him the same thing. Moreover he knows by experience that what the newspapers tell him he should think and do frequently does not properly indicate the views of his constituents, the inexpressive multitude that marked the ballots in the polling booth. So he is encouraged to brave the disapprobation of the newspapers, remembering the many aspirants for public office who have succeeded against the active opposition of these agencies of publicity.

An inconsiderable number of his constituents may take the trouble to let him know what they think on public questions by interviews, letters, telegrams, but unless these more solicitous citizens happen to be personally interested in legislation, one might say selfishly interested, they are not likely to trouble him with advice. Moreover he knows that the letter and telegram method of influencing legislators is just one part of advertising, a "publicity campaign," managed and paid for often by a very small minority of the people in his constituency. Witness the German propaganda in Washington recently! No, it is safer to disregard the personal appeal in whatever form it may present itself.

THERE are magazine articles and books appearing constantly full of wisdom, no doubt, on questions of the day, but always a somewhat belated wisdom, and our John Jones is not especially a reading man; he knows his constituents are not great readers. The printed word, then, is only indirectly and feebly helpful to the perplexed and strictly conscientious John Jones.

There are massmeetings of citizens with inflammatory oratory, and resolutions—let us not forget the resolutions! "Whereas and whereas," etc., "therefore now be it resolved," etc., etc. The wise legislator knows what they are worth, something less than "monster petitions"; any good publicity man can deliver a fiery massmeeting and ringing resolutions for or against anything under the sun for a not exorbitant expenditure of time and money. No, the dubious John had better not put his faith in petitions or massmeetings, any more than in newspapers or magazines.

* *

IDEALLY, of course, Mr. Jones should put his faith first of all in himself, rely upon his own integrity and his close sympathy with the majority of his fellow citizens to give an adequate expression to their beliefs and wills. There are numerous indirect methods of acquainting himself with what these are besides those enumerated above. If Mr. Jones were always both intelligent and conscientious he would not have any great difficulty in expressing the desires of the majority behind him. But as we have witnessed in the course of the present congress, the Joneses are neither intelligent nor especially conscientious. They have not grown with the country under the stress of the world war; they are still provincial and short in their views, so short they have done practically nothing towards preparing for defense either with an adequate army or navy.

What they need is some great light, some rumble of an earthquake beneath their timorous politicians' feet. Many of them are hoping for another lease of office this fall and other Mr. Joneses are nursing legislative ambitions. They must be made to feel what the country wills.

And that is why the preparedness parades are effective. The somewhat blunted perceptions of the Joneses can comprehend the significance of marching hosts if the hosts are large enough and march often enough in all the large centers. It is a compelling sort of demonstration orderly, not an effusion of mob spirit, concretely spectacular, especially when all sorts and conditions of citizens, men and women, march in the ranks. It is not easily ignored as can be monster petitions and resounding resolutions. It speaks openly to the eye. It is more definite than the Latin demonstration in the public square composed of a noisy mob inarticulately vocal, at which the soberer sort of citizen looks on with lukewarm sympathies. Congressmen and senators at Washington cannot fail to hear the tramp of the marching thousands, and with thoughts of the November election in their minds may give heed. Pity that the parades did not begin last autumn—a year of reality might have been gained in our politics!

FOR the people taking part in them the good of marching is even more apparent. Action of any sort is a great tonic: it affords expression to vague emotions. All the love of country, the belief in action, the hatred of armed wrong, find their focus in uniting with others in a great procession. The man or woman who marches through a city's streets has definitely enrolled himself as a believer in patriotism, as one willing to do what he can to support the institutions of his country, as an active patriot.

If Germans have any time in their troubles to observe the movement of a far off nation, our Plattsburg camps, federalized militia, and preparedness parades must seem infantile as military measures of self-protection. In themselves they are not much. But they are the preliminary work of arousing the spirit, formulating the will of democracy. It may not be the most efficient way to prepare for national defense, but it is our way.

Let us march!

Verdun and the Allied Offensive

By Frank H. Simonds.

THE German attack upon the Verdun sector of the French front has already lasted longer than the whole period of the second Napoleonic episode, from the departure from Elba to the final abdication after Waterloo. Notwithstanding this fact, it must be said that from the military point of view the purpose of the German attack remains hidden.

It has not been possible at any time since the first phase of the attack ended with the checking of the Germans on the Douaumont plateau and before Le Mort Homme and Hill 304 to find any satisfactory military reason for its continuation.

Conceivably, probably, the German losses have been less than the reports have made them out to be, the reports from Paris and London; probably the French losses have been greater than the same reports have conceded, but it is a practical certainty that the German losses have much exceeded the French, and that the proportion has been not less than 3 to 2; that is, if the Germans have lost 300,000 men in their attacks, and this is a moderate estimate, the French loss is not less than 200,000.

But for the 300,000 men the Germans have next to nothing to show, and there is nothing in the positions that they are now attacking which explains their persistence. If the Germans were able to sweep the French back across the Meuse, if they were able to occupy all the hills of the Meuse east of the river, they would still have made no real progress toward Paris, and they would be confronted by a task even more difficult than that which has held them for more than three months and cost them great and unprofitable losses.

We are then forced to believe, and to this belief practically every writer on military affairs in France, in Britain, and in the United States has come, that the Germans are either endeavoring to achieve through their attack upon the Verdun sector a military object which lies outside the present field of operations, or else that they are operating for reasons that affect the political situation either in Germany or in France.

It cannot too frequently be said that Verdun itself is an illusion. The Germans may get Verdun a month hence, and at their present rate of progress a year would be a fairer measure, and unless they destroy the French troops before them and break through the lines behind Verdun before any reserves can be brought up, they will have achieved nothing of military value, save only as they may have killed more French soldiers than they have lost themselves, and so far it is a perfectly conservative estimate that they have lost 100,000 more than the French.

More than a year ago the French, after a brief success, were driven south of the Aisne east of Soissons, but there never was the smallest chance that the Germans could push their success further, and at this point they were eighty miles nearer Paris than they will be in Verdun, and there were fewer obstacles in their way.

You cannot find any military reason to support the German strategy in the Vurden campaign, after the first attack, which is not, in fact, political. You may take the simple explanation that the Germans believe the French are almost exhausted, running short of man and of courage, and will presently abandon the war, if they continue to lose without regaining French territory.

You may take the less simple, but not less appealing, explanation, that the Germans have tried at Verdun to exert so much pressure as to provoke the allies into a premature offensive, thus destroying the chance of a combined attack later; there may be some other political consideration that no one knows, a desire to give the German people a victory or a fear to abandon the attack, having sacrificed so many lives in making it; but the military advantage of a success that takes the Germans to the Meuse at Verdun, takes them into the city itself, is just nil.

To believe that the Germans are wasting their men on an idle and foolish military venture is absurd. It is the fact that no profit worth the price has been disclosed in the Verdun operation itself that has puzzled not merely ordinary observers, but soldiers and military critics alike. Verdun has come to have a value in the minds of the world that no fortress has had for a generation; but this is a mere illusion, for Verdun is no longer a fortress and has no value itself.

Very frequently one hears in German quarters that the allied spring drive has been prevented by the Verdun attack. There never was any intention on the part of the allies to attack in the spring, for the simple reason that Russia could not be munitioned.

A year ago Germany attacked Russia in the spring, and Russian lack of munitions partly contributed to the great Russian defeat. Nowhere in Europe did I hear a suggestion that the allied attack would come before July, and it was often postponed, even to next year.

We have lately seen the Serbian army, now reorganized, moved to Saloniki. There have been signs of activity along this front, and the forecast of an allied attack here has led the Germans and Bulgarians to seize Greek forts, with the alleged purpose of forestalling an attack. There has been a slight resumption of activity at points on the Russian front, but nothing of any real moment.

As for the British, they have been practically quiescent during the whole winter and spring. Only in recent days have there been printed rather crude hints that the British are ready to attack when Joffre gives the word.

But it is well to remember that the British have been willing, if not wholly ready, to attack at any moment they were asked by the French to attack ever since the Verdun attack began. They have supplied a new army to occupy the Arras sector, there are many hints afloat that they will presently take over the Roye sector and thus hold the line from the Oise to the Yser.

All talk about British unwillingness to share in the conflict or bear their share of the losses is moonshine. Much of it is malicious gossip intended to influence French opinion and thus help the German game, which is to provoke a premature offensive.

It is entirely likely that there will be no attack until August; it is more than conceivable that the attack will not be made until September, although this would shorten very materially the period in which a successful offensive could be pushed home, but it is also plain that within a month now the allies will be able to move as they planned, unless in this time the Germans finally break the French nerve or drive the French politicians into demanding British action in advance of the agreed time.

Unless there is some explanation so far successfully hidden from all observers, this German attack upon France must now be reckoned as a failure wholly analogous to that at the Yser and Ypres. It has gained no ground of any value or any considerable extent, it has not inflicted losses on the French at all equal to those borne by the Germans, and it has neither broken French nerve nor provoked a premature allied attack.

Its sole result to date has been the purchase of a few square miles of French territory, the capture of some French prisoners, perhaps 40,000 wounded and unwounded, and a number of guns. The total French loss may be 200,000—it is not more—and the German is not less than 300,000. On this basis France can afford to sell the Germans more square miles of French territory for another month or two, until the great attack comes.

When this attack does come, if it comes, the British will have to bear a share of the cost based upon the French sacrifices now. They will have to do more than was originally planned before the Verdun operation; less will be asked of the French. But British reserves in men are far greater than French, and while France has seen her reserves reduced with the German, there has been no reduction in British and Russian reserves, and the balance is against the Germans.

The only explanation I can find for the persistence of the Germans in the Verdun affair is their conviction that the French are about done; that the allies are still far from ready for a general attack, and that they can still precipitate one under conditions most favorable to themselves.

I do not believe even the fear of the effect at home of a failure would lead the German high command to continue its terrible sacrifices. The German high command has made mistakes, but it has never made such a blunder as this would be, and it has frequently shown a skill and quickness to change its strategy when it had been checked.

WOMEN TO MAKE 'SILENT APPEAL' TO DEMOCRATS

Thousands Will Line Route from Headquarters to Convention Hall in St. Louis.

BY KATHERINE SYNON.

St. Louis, Mo., June 10.—[Special.]—Women of the old south and the new south, the past and the present, belles and brigadiers, are facing each other on the eve of the national Democratic convention at St. Louis.

With all the traditions of ante-bellum southern womanhood on one side and all the visioning of modern radical feminism on the other, St. Louis, itself more southern than northern, stands today the battlefield of woman's warfare.

Awakened to the intensity of the woman suffrage situation by the officers of the National American Woman's Suffrage association, who are preparing for the greatest feminine demonstration Wednesday this city has ever witnessed, 10,000 St. Louis women have taken up the suffrage banners and signed the pledge to appear in the "golden lane of silence" on the opening day of the convention.

Will Line Whole Route.

"The golden lane," an avenue of women arrayed in white gowns, yellow hats and yellow sashes and bearing yellow sunshades, will line the way on Wednesday morning down Locust street from the Jefferson hotel, the headquarters of the Democratic national committee, to the coliseum, where the convention will be held.

In absolute silence, unbroken even by the blare of bands, the 10,000 suffragists will stand while the delegates, headed by the twenty-three women representatives to the convention and their women alternates, pass through the lines.

Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, Mrs. Pattie Ruffner Jacobs, Mrs. Henry Wade Rogers, Mrs. James Norrison of Chicago, Miss Hanna T. Patterson, Mrs. Walter McNabb Miller, Mrs. Frank N. Roessing, and Miss Margaret Foley, who have already arrived in St. Louis for conference with the platform committee of the Democratic party on the woman suffrage plank that the women hope will be adopted, will stand in the lane.

Expects Big Demonstration.

Mrs. Allen Updegraff of New York, who has been here for a fortnight directing the preparations for the demonstration, declares that nearly every prominent family in the city will be represented in the lineup.

"The change that has come over the women of St. Louis in the last year is the most remarkable event in the history of woman suffrage," she declares. "A year ago there were only a few women backing Miss Charlotte Rumbold's long fight for votes for women in Missouri; now the tide has turned."

The turning of the tide is notably apparent in the character of the women who will be in the "golden lane" of Wednesday morning and in the yellow lantern demonstration on Locust street that night. The old French families, even more conservative than the later German and English residents, are joining the latter in participation in the event, whose shadow is amazing the women from less progressive communities, who are arriving for the ocnvention in the wake of the colonels and the majors.

Suffrage States Honored.

The suffrage leaders in St. Louis, led by Mrs. William Fordyce, Mrs. George Gellhorn, and Mrs. Charles Passmore, are heartened by the representation the suffrage states are sending to the convention.

Eight of the eleven states which have granted full suffrage to women are sending women to the convention. The lists of delegates from Oregon, Nevada, and Montana, equal suffrage states, do not contain names of women delegates. The suffrage states sending women delegates are California, Colorado, Utah, Idaho, Washington, Arizona, and Kansas.

'LIAR' RINGS OUT IN LANDIS' COURT

Lawyer and Witness Pass Short and Ugly Till Judge Stops Them.

ALL OVER A PHONE TALK

The wrangling that has accompanied all the hearings of the last month in the attempts of the trustees of the estate of Louis Shapiro to discover hiding places of Louis and his brother, Jacob, of Chicago, and some $75,000 worth of silks alleged to have been taken from the assets and concealed, aroused Judge Landis' ire yesterday when attorneys began to bandy the word "liar" about.

The hearing ended, as have others, in a failure to obtain any information as to the whereabouts of either of the men or the missing silks.

The altercations occurred when Bernard J. Brown, who for a few days was attorney for the Shapiros, was called to the witness stand. Deputy United States Marshal Thomas E. Cikanek had just told of a telephone conversation he overheard at the Shapiro home the night before in which a man who said his name was Brown had called up and asked for Mrs. Shapiro to meet him at his office at 7 o'clock. Cikanek said he could hear part of what Brown was saying from the other end of the wire.

Asserts Brown Called.

Milton Shapiro, who answered the telephone, corroborated the marshal's testimony and said that the man who called was Brown, the lawyer.

The latter was not in court when this testimony was given, and he denied when he took the stand that he had telephoned to anyone about the case the night before or that he had been connected with it since May 10.

"Then turn around and see the person who says you called him up last night," said Attorney David D. Stansbury, pointing to Milton Shapiro.

"If that boy said that, he lied," Brown angrily replied.

Calls Brown a "Liar."

"The boy hasn't lied; you lie," Stansbury said.

"Here here," Judge Landis interrupted, "you gentltmen can't talk that way in this court. I won't have it."

"But it's a lie. I never made such a telephone call," Brown said.

"I don't care, you can't talk that way in this court."

"Well, your honor, I wish I were somewhere where I could."

Both attorneys apologized for their language, and Brown left insisting that if such a telephone call had been made some one impersonated him with the intention of discrediting him.

STUDENT DIES OF DRINK.

Coroner's Jury Returns Verdict of Acute Alcoholism in College Death.

A coroner's jury yesterday found that Lee Harrison of Columbus, Miss., a student at the Chicago College of Medicine and Surgery, who resided at the Phi Delta fraternity house at 1440 West Jackson boulevard, died of acute alcoholism.

The young man was found dead in an areaway at the front of an apartment building at 2222 Campbell park.

He was a son of James K. Harrison, a former lieutenant governor of Mississippi, and a cousin of Blewett Lee, general solicitor for the Illinois Central railroad company.

Detective Sergt. O'Keefe said he learned that the young man had been visiting cabarets and keeping late hours for two weeks.

POLICE INVESTIGATE DEATH.

Frank Schessler's End Has Suspicious Features, Think Authorities.

Two men are being held at the Kensington police station pending further investigation into the death yesterday of Frank Schessler, 12318 Parnell avenue. Attendants said he had suffered cuts and bruises and other injuries, and this gave rise to a suspicion that he may have been hurt in a fight.

WOMEN SOUND HUGHES ON HIS SUFFRAGE VIEWS

First Effort of National Association to Get an Opinion Is Unsuccessful.

The suffragists are guessing again. Justice Hughes has been as silent (recently) on the subject of suffrage as on so many other questions. The women intend to learn at once where he stands.

Efforts already have been made by some of the workers of the National American Woman Suffrage association to get a statement from him. It has not been successful. The effort will be renewed immediately, according to members of the national board, and now that he has the Republican nomination, the women feel they will have no difficulty in getting him to state his position.

The Congressional union also will make an effort to get Justice Hughes to make his views on suffrage known. Some of the union leaders expect him to come forth with a statement at once, without being pressed for it by the women.

They'll Go After Him.

"We shall have to wait to see what Justice Hughes says about suffrage," said Miss Mabel Vernon of the union. "It seems to me that we are in much the same position as the Progressives. We haven't an idea as to what his position is. Of course, we shall go after him and get a statement at once."

Mrs. Sara Bard Field of the union regretted that the Republicans and Progressives did not unite on Roosevelt.

"We naturally feel favorable toward Roosevelt," she said, "because he is the one candidate who has come out for suffarge unqualifiedly. The nomination of Hughes is by no means a setback, as the party is on record as favoring suffrage, and he can do no more than go along with the party."

Believes He'll Be Fair.

"I believe that Justice Hughes will be with us," said Miss Kate O'Connor of the Illinois Equal Suffrage association. "He has such a fine judicial mind that he cannot but be fair to all groups and classes of people, both men and women."

Some of the other Chicago women were inclined to turn to Wilson when they heard of the nomination of Hughes.

Illegal Operation Case Dropped.

Dr. David B. Eaton of 3147 Indiana avenue, charged with performing an illegal operation on Mrs. Rose Goldie Brough of 751 East Seventy-fifth street, was dismissed for want of prosecution by Judge Flanagan yesterday. Joseph R. Burres, counsel for Mrs. Brough, who has recovered, refused to let his client testify

POWDER IN SHOES AS WELL AS GUNS

Foot=Ease to Be Added to Equipment of Hospital Corps at Fort Wayne.

Under the above heading the Detroit Free Press, among other things says: "The theory is that soldiers whose feet are in good condition can walk further and faster than soldiers who have corns and bunions incased in rawhide.

The Government's foot powder order is regarded as the last word in the scientific outfitting of the defenders of the flag."

The English, French and Allied Troops constantly make use of Allen's Foot=Ease. It takes the friction from the shoe and rests the feet. Foot Powder, shaken into the shoes of soldiers, has long been in use in the German army, and Uncle Sam's adoption of this form of treating and easing the feet, emphasizes the testimony of the millions of people the world over, who are shaking Allen's Foot=Ease, the antiseptic powder, into their shoes, and using it in the foot bath, as the only practical and lasting treatment to ease and prevent sore feet. HIGHLAND PARK HOSPITAL GAINS $56,000 ON FIRST DAY

Three Days Yet to Go to Gather Rest of $100,000 for New Building in North Shore Suburb.

With $56,000 in cash and subscriptions for the first night's report Highland Park's four day campaign for $100,000 for its new hospital is well under way.

Through the energy of an initial committee made up of S. M. Hastings, C. T. Boynton, Everett L. Millard, E. V. Price, J. P. Smith, Dr. Lloyd M. Bergen, Richmond Dean, R. S. Kirchberger, Mrs. J. McGregor Adams, Mrs. A. R. Carqueville, all of Chicago and Highland Park, and Mrs. Francis D. Everett, initial subscriptions of over $43,000 were reported, the amount including among other handsome gifts $10,000 from Walter C. Hately, $5,000 from Frederick A. Watkins and Miss Lydia T. Watkins for the Elias M. Watkins memorial, and $2,000 for the William Poturn Morgan memorial from Capt. and Mrs. O. H. Morgan and family.

Highland Park is very gay this week with flags, pennants, street banners, and attractive window cards. North shore society is conspicuous in the campaign committees and the hospital project has aroused widespread interest.

Mayor Hastings is general chairman and Miss Anne Bancroft Cousnane is director of the campaign.

CITIZENS TO VIEW FILM OF UNCLE SAM'S BABIES.

Woman's City Club Issues Invitations to Movie of Children Taken from Coast to Coast.

The Woman's City club has issued invitations to a selected list of ministers, doctors, philanthropists, and prominent persons interested in child welfare work, to attend a private view, on Monday afternoon, of "Uncle Sam's Babies." This is the big surprise which has been planned to entertain Chicago during baby week, June 19 to 26.

"Uncle Sam's Babies" is a "movie" in every sense of the word. It moves the spectator from coast to coast and from the lakes to the gulf, in a series of pictures which show thousands of children in almost every phase of child welfare work, as conducted in different cities, and in connection with various activities.

Movielike, it presents an amazing liberal education in this growing subject, transmitting, through the eye, in two short hours, what it has required six months to register on the film. Only the "elect" may see on Monday, but this film story will be presented to the public under the auspices of the Woman's City club during all of baby week at the Strand theater.

FRENCH CHEF ANGERED BY CIVIL SERVICE TEST.

He Lived on "Shecawgo Avu" and Wanted to Take Papers Home to His Wife.

"Sacre!" yowled René Speyer as he gesticulated with hands and head, then tore his test papers and rushed out of the room in the Robert Waller High school, where examinations for the position of chief cook in state institutions were being held.

On his preliminary papers Chef Speyer wrote his address, "Shecawgo avu." Among the bits of knowledge he was ready to display was that "beef collar is red when fresh" and "dark red meat is kynd of effected."

Across the bottom of his paper he scribbled, "I am not a mechanic yama cook." Then when the young lady in charge of the room refused to permit him to carry the papers home to let his wife fill them out, he bolted. For why have we wives?

FIGHT FOR RIGA WAGED IN REGION FAMOUS IN WAR

Russo-German Campaign Is Fought Over Ground of Napoleon's Retreat.

Herewith is presented the first of a series of eleven articles by James O'Donnell Bennett, war correspondent of "The Tribune," describing and analyzing the March-April offensive in the region southeast of the Gulf of Riga.

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.

[War Correspondent of The Chicago Tribune.]

[Copyright: 1916: By The Tribune Company.]

OFFIZIERSHEIM, Goduzischki, Russia, end of April—Take one of the simpler maps of Russia and note the point where the empire juts farthest into the Baltic. If the river West Düna to the north and the rivers Niemen and Wilija to the south are drawn in bold black you instantly will get the picture of a wide parallelogram of hills, farms, forests, swamps, and squalid villages which stretches soggily for more than 200 miles in from the Baltic coast between the Düna and the Wilija.

The extent and the boundaries of this parallelogram, which comprises the governments of Courland and Kowno and part of the ancient principality of Lithuania, will, for the purposes of this series of letters, be given only roughly.

The important thing is the general picture of the region. Also for present purposes we will cut off the parallelogram on the east with the railroad which runs up north by east from Wilna on the Wilija to Dünaberg (or Dwinsk) on the West Düna.

SPONGY WITH SWAMPS.

Between these two points the parallelogram is about 100 miles wide, but the railroad is longer than that for it winds in and out among the swamps and lakes with which this end of the region is absolutely spongy.

Striking west by north from Dünaburg (pop. 111,000, trade in flax, grain, and timber), along the irregular line of the river Düna, we follow the northern boundary of the parallelogram and pass the important towns of Jacobstadt (pop. 60,000) and Friedrichstadt (pop. 7,000), finally reaching the great Russian commercial capital of Riga (pop. over half a million), which is still in Russian hands.

Nine miles farther on the Düna empties into the gulf of Riga. The western boundary is the curving line of the Baltic. The southern is the River Niemen, which empties into the Baltic on German territory and the River Wilija, which joins the Niemen at Kowno (pop. 90,000), which lies two-thirds of the way inland on the southern border of our parallelogram.

BIG WAR OPERATIONS.

Pushing some fifty miles farther east by south, we reach again our starting point at Wilna (population nearly 200,000), where the railroad strikes north by east up to Dünaburg and forms the eastern boundary of the parallelogram.

As the northern line approaches Jacobstadt and Friedrichstadt and the southern line approaches Kowno they begin to spread apart. By the time the lines have reached Jacobstadt on the north and Kowno on the south they are more than 130 miles apart. By the time they reach the Baltic they are nearly 175 miles apart.

This region in our time and in ancient times has been the scene of some of the most momentous operations in the annals of war. All of it is Russian territory except the little strip of East Prussia on the southwest. In this strip lies the town of Tilsit, where on a raft anchored in the Memel, as the Niemen is called when it reaches Germany, Napoleon made that bitter peace of 1807, which deprived Prussia of half her dominions.

BEATEN BY GERMANS.

All this country, with the exception of the Prussian strip and the approaches to Riga, is conquered territory. As early as May, 1915, Hindenburg's armies began to roll into it. By the beginning of July they had advanced as far north as Libau. The beginning of August found them at Windau. In October they reached the Gulf of Riga, on the north.

On the south they were nearly fifty miles east of Wilna. Then came the long winter of position warfare, the shifting of the lines this way and that, the swift, methodical establishment of division headquarters behind the front, and the building of vast and intricate works of defense against the launching of an offensive by the Russians.

That offensive came in mid-March, spent its fury by the middle of April, and now reasserts itself in occasional gusts of fire or in fierce infantry attacks.

It is with the scene of and the actors in this offensive that these letters purpose to deal. They are based on observations made in twenty towns and villages either on or just behind the battle lines and at several division headquarters. These villages lie to the east of the broad gauge railroad running from Wilna north to Dünaburg, the east side of our parallelogram.

At the town of Nowo Swenzjany, which is nearly half way up the broad gauge from Wilna to Dünaburg, a narrow gauge railroad winds southeast via Lyntupy among the swamps in the direction of—but never reaching—Lake Narocz, which lies about thirty-five miles away as the crow flies.

Nowo Swenzjany is also connected by narrow gauge with Goduzischki, an important town twenty-four miles to the northeast. Thus, with Nowo Swenzjany as the pivotal point, with the eastern shore of Lake Narocz as the southeastern point, and with Goduzischki as the northeastern, there is a triangle comprising not only important German positions but also the scenes of heavy losses suffered by the Russians.

Russian Dead Cover Ground

A league east of the eastern line of the triangle I have seen the Russian dead covering acres of field.

From Goduzischki this narrow gauge railway used to push on eastward to what is now the extreme edge of the Russian offensive, and among the important points it touched was Postawy, which is still in Russian hands.

Now you have the lay of the land. First there is the great parallelogram rolling in from the Baltic, between the river Düna and the rivers Niemen and Wilija, which was the scene of the gigantic maneuvering of 1915 by which Hindenburg pushed the Russians east of Wilna. Jutting out from Nowo Swenzjany on the east side of the parallelogram is the triangle ending at Goduzischki on the north and on the eastern shore of Lake Narocz on the south.

Just inside of the eastern side of this triangle there was bitter fighting in December and the mushy ice of the western waters of Lake Mjadsiol lying north of Lake Narocz is still littered with the bodies of Russians who fell then.

Offensive Shaped Like Bow

The general line of the Russians' March-April offensive was a great bow, perhaps 200 miles long, with one tip resting south of Riga and the other at Lake Wiszniew, which lies eight or ten miles southwest of the much larger Lake Narocz.

This offensive began at nearly a dozen points almost simultaneously—south and southeast of Riga, in the neighborhood of Friedrichstadt, west and southwest of Jacobstadt, south of Dünaburg, north of Widsy, and between Lake Narocz and Lake Wiszniew. My observations have extended along one-eighth of the bow—in other words, from Lake Narocz to points considerably north of Goduzischki.

Having indicated some of the easily comprehended geographical features of this great Lithuanian region, I will give an outline of its absorbing historical significance in my next letter. For centuries it has been the scene of great fighting, and it saw the culmination of the greatest tragedy in military annals. For we are in the region of Napoleon's retreat from Moscow, and if the emperor did not pass within sight of Lake Narocz he must at least have been within a few hours' horseback ride from it.

SETTLES $30,000 ON GIRL TO STOP SUIT AGAINST SON.

Mrs. Juliana Armour Ferguson of New York, Kin of Chicago Armours, Creates Trust Fund.

New York, June 10.—Mrs. Juliana Armour Ferguson of 36 West Fifty-ninth street, daughter of Herman O. Armour, an uncle of J. Ogden Armour, the Chicago packer, today settled a trust fund of $30,000 on Miss Ida Parker of Huntington L. I., who in 1914 caused an indictment to be brought in Suffolk county against Mrs. Ferguson's son, Danforth B. Ferguson. The fund, registered at Riverhead, was arranged by Mrs. Ferguson after Miss Parker had consented to the withdrawal of the indictment.

It is said the young woman—she is but 18—was once offered $50,000 in cash to withdraw criminal proceedings, but she declined it, declaring she wanted Ferguson to keep his promise and marry her. He disappeared from Huntington, where his mother has a summer home, just before the indictment was returned. At present he is in the French aviation corps.

In asking the judge to dismiss the indictment, District Attorney Green said Ferguson is likely to be killed any time, and Miss Parker and her family decided it would be best to accept the settlement.

Miss Parker and her child are living with her aunt, Mrs. Raymond Selleck, who keeps the Edgewater hotel at Huntington.

JAMES PEASE IS BETTER.

Former Sheriff Anxious About His Alternate's Vote at Republican Convention.

James Pease, former sheriff, lay on his bed in St. Luke's hospital today and just wondered whether his alternate to the Republican convention was doing the right thing with his ballot—for Jim Pease was pledged to Sherman. The former sheriff was taken down a few weeks ago by an attack of chronic rheumatism and today his condition was reported to be favorable. However, doctors refused to say when he can leave the hospital. His alternate from the Tenth district is Edward Clifford. Pease at first contemplated attending the convention on a stretcher.

Miss Helen Hamilton Marries Arthur Woods, New York Commissioner—Many Guests at Reception

New York, June 10.—[Special.]—The wedding of Miss Helen Morgan Hamilton, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Pierson Hamilton and a granddaughter of the late J. Pierpont Morgan, to Arthur Woods, police commissioner of New York, was celebrated at noon today in St. Luke's Episcopal chapel at Ramapo Hills, near Sterlington, N. Y.

Less than 100 guests, including only the members of the immediate families, witnessed the ceremony, which was performed by Bishop Philip M. Rhineland, an uncle by marriage of the bride. At the reception, however, which followed immediately at Table Rock, the country home of the bride's parents, there were more than 3,000 guests.

Arrangements attending the wedding ceremony were of the most simple order. Miss Elizabeth Schuyler Hamilton was maid of honor and David M. Goodrich of Mount Kisco was Mr. Woods' best man.

The guests included Mayor and Mrs. Mitchel, other heads of the city administration, and some members of the police commissioner's office.

The Chandler Leads in Price and Style and Certainty of Service

NEVER before has the Chandler leadership been so obvious to so many people as it is now, at the height of the 1916 season.

At a time when so many cars are "marked up" a hundred dollars or more, the Chandler leads with the same low price established eighteen months ago.

In the midst of a horde of new types and styles of engines, "The Marvelous Motor" leads in certainty of service. Built in the Chandler factory ever since the first Chandler car was marketed this famous motor,—refined, more powerful, more flexible,—still leads most distinctly because free from any hint of experimentation or uncertain theory.

And Chandler leads quite as clearly in beauty of body design, refinement of finish in every detail and luxury of upholstering.

It is not surprising that many thousands of new owners have joined the Chandler ranks this year.

You will be delighted with your Chandler

CHIEF JUSTICE RICHARD BURKE DEAD IN HOME

Led Tickets at Recent Bench Election and Awaited His Certificate.

Judge Richard E. Burke.

Born June 11, 1873. Died June 10, 1916.

WALINGER Photo

Judge Richard E. Burke, chief justice of the Criminal court, who led the victorious Democratic ticket at the judicial elections last Monday, died at 7:30 yesterday morning at his home at 421 South Central Park avenue.

Judge Burke was the third person to die from the effects of partaking of the soup poisoned by Jean Crones, the anarchist chef, at the banquet tendered Archbishop Mundelein at the University club on Feb. 10. He had been ill for several months, never having recovered from the effects of the poison, which aggravated a complication of ailments from from he was suffering at the time.

The first person to die from the effects of the poisoned soup was Father John F. O'Hara, a priest in Brooklyn, N. Y.

The death of Andrew J. Graham, the banker, last month was said to be indirectly attributable to his illness following the banquet.

Led Recent Ticket.

Judge Burke was unable to take any part in the recent campaign, but the voters paid him the high compliment of giving him more votes than any other judge on the ticket. He was much gratified by this, and his friends hoped the news would give him courage and strength to recover sufficiently to serve his new term upon the Superior bench, but it became known Friday night that his condition had taken a turn for the worse, when a priest was summoned. He had not yet received his certificate of reelection, the prize he most desired.

He rallied early in the morning, but realized the end was near when a short time before his death he called the members of his family to his bedside and kissed and embraced them. His wife, his mother, Mrs. Margaret Burke; his children, Richard, Margaret, and Mary Louise, and three brothers, John, James, and Dr. Alexander Burke, were at his bedside when the end came quietly. He was conscious to the last.

Only 43 Years Old.

Judge Burke was still a young man. He was 42 years old. Today he would have been 43. He was graduated in 1894 from St. Ignatius college and from the Chicago College of Law in 1897. Lake Forest university conferred the degree of LL.B. on him a year later. He served in the legislature from 1903 to 1907, where he had a reputation as a fearless fighter.

At his own expense he conducted and won a campaign against the unconstitutional appropriation of $153,000 for the Illinois and Michigan canal, and led the attack which drove the speaker from the chair and stopped gag rule tactice when the general assembly attempted to kill the Mueller bill.

He was first elected to the Superior bench in November, 1910, and had heard many important criminal cases.

Ryan Carries Information.

News of his death was conveyed to Thomas Walsh, his personal bailiff, and transmitted to John Ryan, chief bailiff. Ryan carried the information immediately to the chambers of Acting Chief Justice Barrett, who ordered all the courts closed with the exception of Judge Scanlan's branch, where the work of selecting jurors in the labor conspiracy cases is still in progress. He then issued a statement praising Judge Burke's career.

Later orders were signed by Judge Foell and Chief Justice Smith of the Circuit court closing the courts and clerks' offices tomorrow in order that the judges and attachés may attend Judge Burke's funeral. Burial will be in Mount Carmel cemetery.

Judge Burke's successor will be nominated at the primaries on Sept. 13 and elected at the next general election on Nov. 7.

The luncheon of the Irish Fellowship club in the Hotel La Salle became a memorial meeting on the death of Judge Burke. Judge John P. McGoorty spoke in high praise of the deceased jurist, and the members unanimously passed resolutions of condolence.

Lawyers Send Committee.

The Chicago Bar association will have the following committee at the funeral services, which will be held in Our Lady of Sorrows church, Jackson boulevard and Albany avenue, tomorrow at 10 o'clock: Samuel Alschuler, G. Bernhard Anderson, Alfred S. Austrian, George F. Barrett, Francis X. Busch, John G. Campbell, James G. Condon, Wells M. Cook, John G. Drennan, Samuel A. Ettelson, Martin M. Gridley, Elbridge Hanecy, Maclay Hoyne, John S. Hummer, Martin J. Isaacs, Walter H. Jacobs, Daniel V. Gallery, Hugh J. Kearns, Francis M. Lowes, John P. McGoorty, James C. McShane, Roswell B. Mason, Edgar Lee Masters, Charles P. Molthrop, Fayette S. Munro, Joseph A. O'Donnell, Alexander F. Reichmann, Angus Roy Shannon, John J. Sonsteby, Charles C. Stillwell, Boetius H. Sullivan, Francis W. Walker, Joseph Weissenbach.

WIFE CHARGES NONSUPPORT.

Mrs. Beatrix Crantz alleges that Charles Henry Crantz has refused to contribute to her support since their marriage in July, 1913, in her bill for separate maintenance filed yesterday.

Crantz is a draftsman and has a substantial income, according to the bill.

"Mrs. Jarvis" is named by Mrs. Clara Kennedy Olsen in her bill for divorce filed in the Circuit court against Alex Olsen. Infidelity is charged.

ILLINOIS NEEDS 17,000 NEW MEN IN STATE GUARD

New Army Law Requires About 23,000 Soldiers—Strength Approximately 6,000.

BY CAPT. HENRY J. REILLY.

The Illinois National guard at the present time has a strength of about 6,000. The new law requires it to have about 23,000. In other words, 17,000 additional men must be raised. A large part of this increase can be taken up by raising existing organizations to war strength.

Should this be done and the number of new organizations needed to complete a division at war strength be brought into existence the quota required would be reached. As no instructions have as yet been received from the war department, it is not definitely known how the additional 17,000 are to be organized.

It is probable that the method outlined above will be the one followed, because the raising of a considerable number of new organizations all below war strength would not remedy the necessity of bringing organizations to their full strength in time of war by the addition of large numbers of green men.

Filling Old Companies Cheaper.

Raising the existing organizations to war strength will also be much cheaper, it will give the officers better instruction, because they will handle full strength units, and also will produce more quickly the number of reservists needed to replace casualties in time of war.

It is probable that the war strength will remain as prescribed in the present tables of organization, except in the case of the field artillery, which probably will be organized in accordance with the recommendations of the Treat board. These tables prescribe infantry regiments of about 1,800.

The eight regiments of Illinois infantry vary in strength from about 450 to 700. Thus each of them will have to have added from 1,100 to 1,750 men. The war strength of a cavalry regiment is about 1,200 men. The First Illinois cavalry has about 900 men, and therefore will have to raise 300 in addition.

Men Needed in All Departments.

The strength of a field battery will probably be 190 men. The present batteries vary from 100 to 140 men, so will have to be raised from 60 to 90 men each. Also an artillery regimental headquarters will have to be organized. The existing signal company needs only about fifteen men to bring it to war strength.

The existing engineer company needs approximately 100 men to bring it to war strength. The one field hospital is just about one-half its war strength of sixty-seven men.

The additional organizations needed and their strength is as follows:

One regiment of infantry	1,800 men
Two regiments field artillery	2,500 men
Five companies of engineers	800 men
One radio signal company	75 men
One aero squadron, strength not yet determined
Four ambulance companies	316 men
Two field hospitals	134 men
One medical reserve	8 men

Opportunities for Young Men.

The existing situation offers excellent opportunities for young men desirous of obtaining some military training without interfering too much with their business life or occupations. Doctors, medical students, and pharmacists should go in the medical corps. Telegraphers and men connected with the telephone business should go in the signal corps. Engineers should choose the engineer corps. Those in none of these professions or businesses should choose the infantry, cavalry, or field artillery, depending upon their personal preference.

As the existing state law limits the number of organizations in Illinois, the new organizations needed cannot be officially recognized until the state assembly meets next January. However, now is the time to form them, in order to convince the assembly of the seriousness of the men who wish to take advantage of this opportunity.

The new law provides pay for all and offers an opportunity for young men after one year's service to be appointed to the United States Military academy at West Point.

JUST ONE HORSE WANTED TO GIVE JOY TO HUNDREDS.

Algonquin Summer Hospital Needs a Dobbin for Those Children's Hayrick Parties.

The happiness of hundreds of poor children will be greatly increased this summer if some one will donate a horse. Libraries have been donated and fountains provided for various purposes, but this is one of the times, when just a reliable old steed that will stay away during the day time will be appreciated.

The animal is desired by Mrs. Laura J. Collar, superintendent of THE TRIBUNE Summer hospital for the convalescent poor at Algonquin, Ill.

One hundred and fifty convalescent women and their children will be taken to the camp on June 21. Later on more people will be taken there until the camp reaches its capacity. There are two horses in the camp now, but one of them has reached the pension age and is not capable of hauling the hayrick parties and otherwise adding to the pleasure of the camp outings.

Who will come across with a horse?

MOTOR PILOTS BATTLE TODAY AT SPEEDWAY

Twenty-three Cars of Four Nations to Start in 300 Mile Auto Derby.

BY J. C. BURTON.

Twenty-three cars, representing America, France, England, and Germany, will be sent away by Starter Wagner at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon on the Chicago speedway to battle for championship honors and $30,000 in prize money in the second annual 300 mile auto derby.

Twenty of these speed creations already have qualified for the classic by turning laps at an average of ninety miles an hour or better, eleven surviving the elimination trials held yesterday afternoon. The other three—A. E. Woods' Klein Special, Tommy Milton's Duesenberg, and Mel Stringer's Hoskin Special—will perform for the official timer this morning, as they were not ready to qualify yesterday. All three are certain to survive the test.

Louis Chevrolet Out.

One entry which was regarded as a sure starter was scratched yesterday when Louis Chevrolet informed the officials that it would be impossible for him to repair the motor of his Frontenac, which was rendered hors du combat in Friday's practice.

The six cars owned by the Indianapolis speedway—two Peugeots, two Maxwells, and two Premiers—will not be in the field, for the Hoosier race barons stood pat yesterday and refused to rescind their order of Friday night to scratch the entries if the local classic was run on Sunday.

One of the six drivers under contract to the Indianapolis speedway will be on the starting line. Eddie Rickenbacher, captain of the Maxwell team and winner of the Metropolitan trophy at Sheepshead Bay last month, closed a deal yesterday to take the wheel of the Peugeot that is being campaigned by Ralph Mulford this season but which he refuses to drive today because of religious scruples.

Brown Given Permission.

To obtain the Peugeot and be a contender rather than a spectator, Rickenbacher had to get in communication over the long distance telephone with Lutcher Brown, the owner of the car, who is a student at Princeton university, and secure his permission to the change in drivers.

The unexpected addition of Rickenbacher to the field adds much class to the race, for the Swiss star is one of the hardest and most dangerous drivers in the game and has the heaviest foot in the gasoline circuit. If his car stands up under the merciless treatment he is certain to give it he should be a contender every mile of the three centuries. Rickenbacher asks no quarter of car or competitor and gives none.

The splendid sportsmanship shown by Brown and Mulford is responsible for Rickenbacher's entry, which should make the competition keener than was expected after the Indianapolis speedway owners, because of alleged jealousy, withdrew their entries.

De Palma vs. Dario Resta.

The prediction is common that the race will be a battle royal between the German Mercedes of Ralph de Palma and the French Peugeot of Dario Resta, with the former ruling a slight favorite because of his triumph over the latter in the 1915 Indianapolis sweepstakes and the greater speed shown by his mount in practice.

There is no doubt but that the Mercedes is in the proverbial pink of condition for a grueling race. De Palma has been preparing his car for the event for the last two weeks, and although the motor and some of the other parts are new, they are not stiff, having been thoroughly worked out in practice.

Resta's Peugeot, on the other hand, is not as fast as it was last season when he won the 500 mile Chicago race at an average of 97.58 miles per hour. He himself admits it. The car was torn down after Resta qualified on Monday and several changes made in it. In its reappearance on the track yesterday the French mount showed more speed than it has previously this year, one lap being turned at a 111 mile per hour clip.

Will Cars Hold Up?

The only question open to debate is whether or not either car will cover the entire three centuries. If both have the requisite staying power the spectators will see one of the most sensational races ever staged on a speedway, for De Palma and Resta are master drivers whose cars respond to their touch as a piano responds to the fingers of Paderewski or a violin to the bowing of Kubelik. They are crafty. They will drive with their heads as well as their hands and feet. Strategy will be an important factor in deciding the Italia imbroglio.

The dopesters also predict that the average of the winner will be close to 100 miles per hour. In last year's 500 mile event, Resta, who led at the completion of three centuries, was credited with a speed of 98.2 miles per hour at that distance, and it is thought that the battle for the lead will be more bitterly fought than that of twelve months ago, when Jean Porporato was Resta's most dangerous challenger.

Duesenberg Car Liked.

Of the American cars, Eddie O'Donnell's Duesenberg, is best liked by the talent. Although not as fast as either the Mercedes or Peugeot, it has the virtue of stamina, and O'Donnell is a veteran driver who knows his car as well as the two favorites understand theirs.

Rickenbacher, however, is expected to do most of the crowding, and if he does not break up probably will give both Resta and De Palma a hard, determined fight for their laurels. O'Donnell will adopt different tactics in all probability, running in the ruck and waiting for the early pacemakers to come back to him.

Christiaens, the Belgian, has an exceptionally fast car in the English Sunbeam, but he was reluctant to let it out at New York and Indianapolis, and the experts believe that he will drive the same kind of a race here, attempting to finish inside the money instead of trying to be the first to cross the wire.

Time Made in Finals.

The times and averages of the eleven drivers who survived yesterday's qualification trials are as follows:

Car and driver—	Time.	Miles per hour.
Duluth Special [Rawlings]	1:14:75	96.00
Sunbeam [Christiaens]	1:09:21	104.00
Crawford [Johnson]	1:19:75	90.00
Ostewig Special [Halbe]	1:17:22	93.00
Peugeot [Mulford]	1:07:12	107.00
Hudson [McCarthy]	1:15:04	96.00
J. J. R. Special [Watson]	1:12:17	99.00
Christiaens [Galvin]	1:12:80	99.00
Olsen Special [Thompson]	1:09:40	104.00
Ogren [Henning]	1:15:40	96.00
Klein Special [Klein]	1:18:60	92.00

Gil Anderson and Howdy Wilcox also qualified their Premiers, although they will not start because of the anti-Sunday racing edict of the Indianapolis speedway owners. They took their trials to be eligible to compete should rain force the promoters to make another postponement. All the drivers of Indianapolis speedway cars are praying for rain, as they believe that their chances of annexing a rich slice of the $30,000 purse are excellent.

Record Speed by De Palma.

Ralph De Palma, favorite for the derby, crowded 93½ miles within an hour at the speedway yesterday and established a new American record in the drive against the minute hand of the clock.

De Palma's hour trial was the feature of the practice. He went after the record in order to limber up the motor of his Mercedes and try out a new oiling system.

The former hour record was seventy-six miles, made by Ray Harroun with a Marmon on the Los Angeles motordrome in 1910. De Palma's time for the intermediate distances follows:

Miles.	Time.	M. P. H.
20	12:39.00	95
40	26:14.69	91½
60	39:02.85	92
80	51:45.09	93

De Palma made one stop for a right rear tire change on his sixteenth lap, but lost only twenty-four seconds at the pits.

Barney Oldfield in an attempt to cover a lap in one minute flat drove the two miles in 1:05 1-5, an average of 111 miles per hour, at the wheel of the Christy.

Thrills for Crowd.

Jack Gable, driving the Burman special, sent a thrill through the crowd when he blew a rear tire in coming out of the first turn and turned around three times. He was cool in the crisis and tamed his tango dancing car, which suffered a bent steering arm in the gyrations.

The promoters of the local classic must have had some misgivings yesterday, as the day was ideal and the Derby could have been held as originally scheduled, and the postponement to Sunday and the resultant break with the Indianapolis speedway owners avoided.

PIRATES LOSE FIGHT FOR SISLER OF THE BROWNS.

Cincinnati, O., June 10.—The complaint of the Pittsburgh Nationals against a decision of the national commission declaring Player George Sisler of the St. Louis Americans a free agent previous to his signing with St. Louis, was dismissed by the national commission today. The commission further directed the removal of this player's name from the Pittsburgh reserved list.

The finding was lengthy, taking up nineteen typewritten pages, and stated that the decision was based on lack of evidence.

The finding cited authorities to show that the signing of Sisler by an umpire in 1911, his transfer to Akron, O., then to Columbus, O., and then to Pittsburgh, was null and void inasmuch as the player at the time of signing his contract was a minor, being only 17 years old, and that the contract had been repudiated by the player and the player's father before he became of age.

Forced Tally in Ninth Gives Sox Win Over Senators, 2-1

Weaver Hit by Pitcher with Bases Full in Last Round.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

That there are more ways of winning a ball game than by driving the runs home by base hits at opportune times was shown by Chicago's White Sox yesterday when they beat Washington, 2 to 1. The Sox got one of their runs because a Washington outfielder ran away over into foul ground and made a swell catch of a fly ball when a Sox runner was on third base with only one out. The other run was forced in when the Washington pitcher hit a Chicago batsman in the legs with a pitched ball when the bases were filled with two out.

Washington's athletes whacked in their lone tally by gallant stick work, but it wasn't worth anything when the final reckoning came. Chicago's two funny runs were enough to win and make a host of south side fans just as glad as if Comiskey's boys had gone out and knocked the fences down with line drives.

Wolfgang in Star Role.

It was quite a battle because there was good pitching on each side, at least there was good pitching until that Washington pitcher forced in the winning run in the last of the ninth. That pitcher had been in the game only a couple of minutes when the incident occurred. It was Harry Harper, the sturdy youth southpaw, who was on the slab the greater part of the time, and he was opposed by little Mel Wolfgang. Little Mel always breaks into print when we are playing Washington.

For four innings there wasn't a run tallied on either side, but in the fifth the Sox broke the ice even if it did take some bone playing by the opposition. Joe Jackson belted one down over first base for a two bagger. Felsch got hit on the pants by a wild pitch. Schalk then drew a base on balls filling the bases with no one out and it looked like a bushel of runs would be made.

Score After Foul Fly.

In this crisis Terry's best was a little fly ball to Milan in short center and Jackson dared not try to score from third. Wolfgang then punched a fly out over first base. Moeller, playing in right field, chased it and captured it after going more than twenty feet into foul ground. Why he caught it, no one knows, because he was a long distance from home plate and must have known it was a foul ball. Jackson immediately dashed home from third base, beating the throw so easily that he didn't even have to slide.

The Sox didn't do any more business in that round, and as the game progressed it looked as if they would make that one run win. In the eighth, such calculations were spoiled because Judge led off with a screaming drive to left center for three sacks. It looked bad for the Senators when Foster died on a ground ball without giving Judge a chance to get home and Milan fanned. In this pinch Jamieson poled a heavy base hit to right field and sent Judge in.

Tie Score in Ninth Round.

When the last of the ninth came the score was 1 to 1 and folks were preparing to watch the game go into extra innings. By this time Harper had been taken out. A pinch hitter had taken his place in the seventh and Shaw was on the slab.

Felsch, first up, hit the first pitched ball for a single to left field. Schalk bunted, but shot to McBride at second base, so high that the latter couldn't hold it and two men were on with no one out. Eddie Murphy appeared as pinch hitter for Terry and tried to push his mates along with a bunt, but fouled off two and wound up by drawing a base on balls, which filled the sacks.

Jack Fournier, who had been sitting on the bench all afternoon, was introduced. Manager Griffith switched pitchers, calling Young Dumont to replace Shaw. Fournier fought him until the call was three and two and then lifted a rather short fly ball to Moeller in right field. Felsch tried to score after the catch, but evidently Moeller didn't expect such daring. Anyway, Moeller chucked the ball to Judge, who whirled and lined it to Williams at the plate and Felsch was out by a couple of yards.

Hit Batsman Forces In Run.

With two out it looked as if the opening was spoiled, but J. Collins drew a base on balls, filling the bases again, and then came Weaver. The first ball pitched to Weaver was a low curve coming right at his legs, and Buck stood there and let it hit him. He hobbled to first base gleefully as Schalk trotted in with the run needed to win.

Notes

Washington will appear at the south side again today.

A cold lake breeze doubtlessly kept a lot of patrons from attending the game. Only about 8,000 were present. It is likely that twice that number would have been out because of the host of visitors in the city looking for pleasure.

Joe Jackson's double in the fifth might not have been a two bagger if Harper hadn't been reckless. When Joe slammed the ball down over first base Harper ran over there and interfered with Joe as the latter made his turn. Ump. Dinneen promptly waved Joe on to second base.

The ground still was wet and the game was late in starting because the squad of workmen hadn't finished massaging the diamond. Both teams took their batting practice out in center field while wheelbarrow loads of dry earth were being worked in with the mud on the infield.

One of the easiest outs ever made was turned by Schalk in the fifth. After two were out Washington got the bases full on one clean single and two flukey ones. Judge was next hitter and drove the ball into the earth just about one foot in front of the plate. The ball stayed there and Schalk simply picked it up and stepped on the plate, forcing the man who was on third.

Two Preps Score 37 Points in Games Against 600 of Best Young Stars of Country.

FIFTY-FIVE TEAMS LAND PLACES

BY WALTER H. ECKERSALL.

That sterling pair of athletes, Sherman Landers and Frank Loomis of Oregon High school, yesterday won the fifteenth annual interscholastic meet of the University of Chicago on Stagg field with a total of thirty-seven points. D. Allman, by scoring three first places, landed Urbana High second with fifteen points. Evan Pearson of North Central High school of Spokane, Wash., scored eleven points, enough to put his school in third place.

Although ably assisted by Loomis, Landers scored enough points to win the meet alone. He contributed twenty-six credits to the team total, while Loomis scored eleven. The performances of Landers are all the more noteworthy when the fact is taken into consideration that over 600 of the best prep athletes from coast to coast took part in the meet, which was one of the greatest interscholastics ever held in the central west, if not in the country.

Hang Up Two Records.

One record was broken and another established. W. Addems of Manteno High school cleared the bar in the running high jump at 6 feet 3-16 inch, breaking the former mark of 5 feet 11¼ inches, made by R. Honnold of Paris High school in 1912. The mark established was in the javelin throw. As it was the first time the event has been held in connection with the meet, the record of 159 feet 9 inches, made by M. Angier of Beardstown, will stand until bettered.

Landers started on his rampage by winning the 100 yard dash in decisive fashion. He defeated Pearson of Spokane, who is credited with running the century in :09 4-5 at a meet in the western city on May 20. Landers got away to a good start, gathered quickly and broke the tape a winner by a good two yards.

Outruns Pearson in 220.

Landers' next achievement was in the 220 yard dash, which he won after a great fight. As in the century he had to race Pearson all the way and won by having more reserve in the last twenty yards. The pair raced stride for stride for 200 yards. Then Landers forged ahead and won by a scant yard. This victory proved conclusively that the Oregon flier was the better sprinter.

As expected, Landers won the pole vault, showing an actual vault of 12 feet. He tried to establish a new world's interscholastic record, having the bar placed at 13 feet, and on his third trial he missed by the narrowest margin. He struck the bar with his elbow after having cleared it. The timber wavered for a few instants, then fell off the pegs.

Second Twice, Third Once.

Landers then finished second in the 120 yard high hurdles and ran second to Loomis in the 220 yard low hurdles, then finished by winning third place in the running broad jump. His feats undoubtedly give him the honor of scoring the greatest number of points ever accumulated by one athlete in a meet of such class. Although he failed to break any records, he showed beyond doubt that he is the greatest prep athlete in the country today.

Loomis gave his teammate the proper support, winning the 220 yard low barriers and finishing third in the hundred yard dash and 120 yard high hurdles. He ran his best race in the 220 yard hurdles, which he won after a hard battle with Landers. The pair raced hurdle for hurdle until the last barrier, when Loomis went into the lead and won by two yards.

Allman Also Proves Star.

Although the work of Landers and Loomis was the feature of the event, D. Allman of Urbana High cannot be overlooked. He won the shotput and hammer and discus throws, and his marks in all three events were praiseworthy.

There was plenty of sparkling competition. One of the best brushes of the day was in the second race of the half mile, which was won by Ryan of Freeport, who nipped Rees of East Aurora at the tape in a heartbreaking finish. Rees led until the home stretch, where Ryan began to pull up on him. Ryan gradually cut down the distance and broke the tape a winner by lunging for the string.

Another great race was in the second mile run, which went to Porter of Webster City, Ia. The Hawkeye trailed the field until the gun was fired for the last lap. He gradually overtook the leaders and beat McGinnis of West Aurora by a step in a great finish.

Fifty-Five Schools Score.

The caliber of the competition may be judged from the fact that fifty-five schools broke into the point column. This undoubtedly is a record in itself. Over 600 athletes competed, and their efforts were cheered by 3,000 athletic fans. The La Grange High school band vied with the University of Chicago musicians in furnishing extra entertainment.

Despite the heavy rains of the week the track and field were in good condition, but the weather was too cold for record breaking performances. A cold wind from the east hampered the work of the athletes on the turns. The athletes were given their prizes last night at a stag arranged by Maroon students at the Reynolds club. Midway athletes acted as officials and the meet was in direct charge of Director Stagg, who ran off the affair smoothly.

NOTES OF THE MEET

Stagg directed the meet from a tent pitched in the center of the field.

Jimmy Lightbody, former Maroon middle distance runner, acted as starter.

Most of the spectators sought the warm rays of the sun. The majority wore overcoats, something unusual at this time of the year.

After the last event had been decided the athletes repaired to the swimming pool in the gymnasium, where some interesting races were staged.

Jo Loomis, crack athlete of the C. A. A., and a brother of Frank Loomis, took a keen interest in the work of the Oregon pair.

The athletes were attired in suits of every color of the rainbow. Some wore swimming suits. Others competed in street clothes and wore tennis slippers.

A number of athletes, especially those who came long distances, took early trains for home in order to be on hand for studies tomorrow.

After a thorough investigation of his amateur status, Director Stagg allowed Frank Loomis to compete. Several protests were received, but Stagg asserted he had no positive evidence.

Jimmy Twohy, the veteran groundkeeper, was a busy person. When not spading up the pits he was either putting hurdles on the track or taking them off.

Landers is a protégé of Martin Delaney of the C. A. A., who took charge of the athlete when he was 15 years old. Under Delaney's coaching Landers has developed into one of the greatest all around athletes in prep history.

Lewis Omer, athletic director at Northwestern university, and Martin Delaney of the C. A. A. were interested spectators. Omer will hold his annual interscholastic for suburban high schools at Northwestern field next Saturday.

SIMONETTI HIGH AT TRAPS.

R. Simonetti won the 100 target distance handicap, the feature of the Saturday matinée at the Sportsmen's club traps in Lincoln park. His score of 96 beat Dr. Belknap by one point. C. C. Burmeister, L. R. Keller, and D. A. Raymond tied for third with 94 each. Simonetti, Dr. Belknap, Ward Burton, Keller, and Burmeister all turned in perfect scores in the twenty-five target event.

INACTION IRKS VARSITY CREWS AT POUGHKEEPSIE.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 10.—About fifty men of the twelve crews in training here for the intercollegiate regatta June 17 were suffering today from sore hands as a result of the continued wet weather. As a consequence the practice was very light. All the coaches and oarsmen are hoping for sunshine and warmer weather, as the men are gaining in weight from lack of hard work.

Virtually all the crews were given brief practice at starts this afternoon. The Pennsylvania crews worked up the river and Cornell, Syracuse, and Columbia rowed below the finish of the course. There were no changes in any of the shells.

Coach Courtney of Cornell, who announced his coming retirement this week, remained at the red and white quarters today and it is expected he will stay until after the races.

SECOND TRYOUTS FOR 'TRIB' TOURS CARDED TODAY

Judges to Watch 63 Amateurs in Games at Cub Park; Final Tests July 30.

BY OTTO A. ENGEL.

Sixty-three amateur players of Chicago and vicinity will engage in the second of a series of tryouts this morning at 9:30 o'clock at Weeghman's park. Trips with the White Sox and Cubs on their final invasions of the east will be the rewards to the fortunate youngsters.

Five players were excused from today's event for various reasons and will be given chances at some later test. Those who have been picked to appear this morning and fail to show up will be disqualified from further competition. This ruling was made by the board of judges because of the huge entry list of 580 contestants and the shortness of time permitted for the trials.

Saturday tryouts, probably two of them, will be necessary to give each youngster a chance to show his ability in the preliminaries. The semi-finals have been set for Sunday, July 30, but may be moved up a week if rain doesn't interfere with any of the coming tests. In that case the finals will be scheduled for July 30, and if it is impossible to hold them then they will be carried over to Aug. 6, just a few days before the Sox leave on their tour of Washington, Philadelphia, New York, Boston, and Detroit.

Hold Two Games Today.

Two contests of six innings or more, if time permits, will be staged this morning. The board of judges, consisting of Clarence Eldridge, Jimmy Ryan, and Charles Reading, requests every entrant to appear ready for his tryout at 9:30 o'clock. You are expected to be properly attired for the event, just as if you were engaging in a real game of ball. Bring your bat and glove, but THE TRIBUNE will furnish the balls.

After the entries closed last Wednesday at midnight six came through the mails during the week. These boys were refused a chance to appear because the committee believed sufficient notice had been given through these columns for all to get under the wire in time. There also were about twenty applicants who exceeded the age limit of 21 years, and as the conditions of the contest prohibit contestants over the voting age, they also were refused a chance to show their ability.

Watch for Selections.

Announcements will be made regarding your selections for the tryouts each Wednesday or Thursday morning. You are requested to watch the sporting pages for particulars. If you are unable to appear at the time picked for you, please notify the Amateur Baseball Editor at once in writing.

There's a pleasant surprise in store for you all. It's coming soon, but don't get too anxious.

Mid-Year Model
257 Cars in One

Mitchell SIX

$1325 f. o. b. Racine

Mr. Bate's 17th Model

With All His 700 Improvements—His 26 Extras His 73 New Touches

This Mid-Year Mitchell Shows all that John W. Bate has done, in 13 years, for the motor car itself. It is the final result of his genius for efficiency. And every man should see it.

John W. Bate is one of the ablest men who ever entered Motordom. He has for 30 years held the topmost place as an efficiency engineer in machinery.

He has devoted 13 years to the Mitchell. He created this ideal $5,000,000 plant. He has designed 17 Mitchell models. And he and his staff have worked out in this car more than 700 improvements.

Any motor enthusiast who fails to see the result is doing himself an injustice.

More Than Economy

Don't think of efficiency as mere factory economy. It means more than that in car building.

Mr. Bate has cut our factory costs in two. He has built and equipped here a 45-acre plant which stands as the model of Motordom.

You see the result in the matchless value offered in this Mitchell. You see it in the 26 costly extras which other cars omit. No other factory in America could give you such a car at our price.

But the car itself reveals Mr. Bate's genius in a far more appealing way.

A 3000-lb. Giant

Mr. Bate and his experts have developed a car here which weighs under 3000 pounds. Yet the car is a marvel in power and performance.

Its parts will average 50 per cent over the highest strength requirements.

And its records seem to prove it a lifetime car, as Mr. Bate says that it should be.

The chassis is simplicity itself. There is hardly a casting in it. Instead, there are 440 parts which are made of drop forgings, or stamped from toughened steel.

The margins of safety are extreme. The steering parts are oversize, and made of Chrome-Vanadium steel. Yet the ball bearings in it make this the easiest-driving car.

This car alone has Bate cantilever springs. Not one has ever broken. These 52-inch springs make rough roads seem like pavement.

Some 30-Year Records

One Bate-built Mitchell has already run 218,734 miles. Six of them have averaged 164,372 miles each—over 30 years of ordinary service.

That is what Mr. Bate's efficiency means to a man who buys a car to keep.

What it also means is shown by the fact that great engineers buy the Mitchell when they buy cars for themselves. Your Mitchell dealer has a list of them—men noted the country over. These experts find in the Mitchell car mechanical perfection.

And every one is something you want.

73 New Beauties

This Mid-Year Mitchell was completed after the New York Shows, where all this year's new models were shown. Our experts and designers examined there 257 new-style cars. And they have embodied in this Mid-Year Mitchell all the best ideas from all of them. So you will find here the most complete car on the market.

PERRITT BLANKS CUBS AS GIANTS GATHER ONE RUN

McConnell Intercepts a Throw from the Field and Lets In the Winning Tally.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

New York, June 10.—[Special.]—Inability to score a run off Pol Perritt proved the undoing of the Cubs today in the opening game of their campaign against the Giants, who were returned victors by a count of 1 to 0, because George McConnell got in the way of a throw home by Zwilling which would have cut off the only tally on either side.

McConnell was projected into the scrap as first aid to Jim Lavender, who started pitching against Perritt. Lavender got by for his usual six innings in spite of considerable wildness, but in the seventh gave unmistakable signs of weakening. He passed Rariden, first up in that fatal spasm. Perritt sacrificed his catcher to second and it was up to Burns to score that run which was bound to win the game.

Lavender Yanked After Pass.

Lavender foiled Burns by giving him a base on balls, but that did not satisfy Manager Tinker, who called McConnell to the rescue.

George began by striking out Robertston on what would have been three bad balls. Doyle soaked a single to right on which Rariden scored from second. Zwilling came up with the ball and pegged it home in time to head off the slow running Giant catcher, but McConnell butted in and stopped the ball, hoping to retire Doyle if he tried to go to second on the peg home.

Doyle didn't try, but the run counted and Burns raced around to third. Kauff soaked a liner toward right which would have increased the count, but McCarthy knocked it down by falling flat on the ground, then recovered in time to throw out the National league's Ty.

Cubs' Belated Rally Fails.

Too late the Cubs rallied in their ninth. Williams singled against the grandstand with only one out. Schulte whaled a fly to left. Zim combed a single to right, driving Williams to third, and Saier drew a pass, filling the bases. Here Tinker sent Fisher to bat in place of Archer, who had whiffed twice and hit into a double play the other time. Fischer whiffed, too.

Previous to that ninth inning spurt the Cubs made only three singles off Perritt and advanced one man as far as second base. Nobody reached third until the last round. Meantime the Giants found it difficult to hit Lavender, who held them to three hits until he was removed. But Jim gave four bases on balls and hit two batsmen, thereby keeping himself in trouble.

Attacks by Giants Halted.

In the second New York filled the bases with only one out on Kauff's double, a batsman hit, and a base on balls. Rariden's knock to Saier forced Kauff at the par and Perritt whiffed.

In the sixth a single, a pass, and a batsman hit again filled the bags, but there were two out and McKechnie skied.

BIKE GRIND OF 25 MILES AT VELODROME SATURDAY.

A twenty-five mile race will feature the opening at the Riverview velodrome Saturday night. Over fifty of Chicago's star riders are expected to compete.

The program is not yet completed, but five others races, including the roller skate special, will be staged by roller skaters who recently joined the ranks of the cyclists. Yesterday five applications were received from clubs anxious to promote races at the velodrome on July 4. They came from the Gaelic A. C., Melrose Business Men's association, Lexington A. C., Belgian-American A. C., and the Opal A. C.

BIG EASTERN SCHOOLS DRAW ELIGIBILITY CODE.

New Haven, Conn., June 10.—The text of the new eligibility rules governing Yale, Harvard, and Princeton athletics was made public today. Its preamble says the agreement is entered into with a view to keeping the spirit and associations of professionalism out of college sports without the unreasonable hampering of them by the mere letter of rules.

The agreement provides that no man "who has ever received any pecuniary reward or its equivalent by reason of his connection with athletics shall represent his university in any athletic team or crew."

BIKE RACE SET FOR JULY 4.

The best bicycle riders in this section will compete in the fifteen mile handicap road race of the Melrose A. C., to be held in connection with the business men's celebration in Melrose Park on July 4. According to present plans, the riders will be given as much as ten minutes' handicap. The event will be preceded by a military parade in which veterans of the civil war will take part. The bike race will start at 2 o'clock and the parade an hour earlier.

STREAK OF BROWNS BROKEN BY BOSTON IN TENTH ROUND, 4-2

St. Louis, Mo., June 10.—Boston broke St. Louis' winning streak by taking today's game, 4 to 2, in ten innings. In the tenth McNally singled, Walker was purposely passed, and when Scott, sent in to bat for Gardner, singled, Miller let the ball get by him and McNally and Walker scored. Score:

Notes.

New York, June 10.—[Special.]—Same teams here again on Monday.

Schulte hit two vicious fouls into the right field stand in the fourth inning, one of them only a few inches foul. Then he lined out to Kauff.

Archer picked a foul fly off the screen from Fletcher's bat in the second and Zim captured one from Robertson close to the stand in the sixth.

The St. Louis Carainals are quartered at the same hotel with the Tinx here, which rather congests things. The Cards are playing across the river in Brooklyn.

President Weeghman, who was press-agented to arrive today for the purpose of purchasing a star infielder or two, failed to show up and sent word he would be here on Monday.

The playing field was heavy from the rains which have fallen here for nearly a week, and a cold, cloudy day kept the crowd down to 18,000. It would have been 30,000 easily the way New York is rooting for the Giants if the weather had been decent.

Most of the Cub regulars left tonight to play an exhibition game in Syracuse tomorrow. They will have to make a sleeper jump both ways in order to get back in time for Monday's game here. Mordecai Brown went along as manager, Tinker remaining here.

BELMONT RACE TO FRIAR ROCK; DEFEATS SPUR

Shows Superiority of the 3 Year Olds, Winning by Three Lengths.

New York, June 10.—[Special.]—August Belmont's Friar Rock, established himself as the leader of the 3 year olds when he won the Belmont stakes at Belmont park today from a field which included James Butler's Spur, winner of the Withers stakes last Tuesday. The course of a mile and three furlongs was one well calculated to test the stamina of the quartet engaged especially as each was carrying stake weight of 126 pounds.

The result of one race can not truly be said to outline what might have happened in another, but the fact that Friar Rock easily galloped away from Spur in the race, in which there were no untoward happenings caused the impression to become general that Friar Rock might have won the Withers if he had not been banged into the fence by Spur.

Friar Rock Best In Race.

There was no question of the superiority of the son of Rock Sand under the conditions which prevailed in the Belmont. Haynes, who rode the Belmont candidate, carefully avoided trouble and was content to let Spur set the pace until he shot to the front when nearing the stretch and never left the issue in doubt afterwards. The Withers running was confirmed so far as the performances of Spur and Churchill went, the former, although beaten a good three lengths by Friar Rock, hanging on to second place by a margin of three lengths.

Harry Payne Whitney's Chicle again showed early speed only to land in last position, twenty lengths behind Churchill.

Crowd of 15,000 at Track.

That the public is greatly interested in turf events when the stars meet in classic races was proved by another big outpouring. Dull sky and threatened rain failed to keep the multitude away and there were at least 15,000 present when the horses were called to the post for the Belmont. It was by no means a gala occasion for the general public which swings along with the chosen favorites.

Odds on favorites were beaten in two of the events and Andrew Miller's Bac, which won the amateur cup, was the only first choice to catch the eye of the judges in the stand.

Manchester, Mass., June 10.—Women golfers from New York today clinched their hold on the Griscom cup by defeating the Boston team, 11 to 10. The victory gave the players a clean sweep, as on Thursday they defeated the Philadelphia representatives.

Boston took the lead in the morning round by winning the individual matches, 9 to 6. In the foursomes, however, the New York players overwhelmed their opponents, 5 to 1.

The feature of the play was the victory of Miss Harriot Curtis of the Boston team over Miss Marion Hollins of New York, 3 and 2. In the foursome Miss Hollins, paired with Miss Auchincloss, defeated Miss Curtis and Mrs. E. W. Allen, 2 and 1.

GIPSY GEORGE WINS SPECULATION RACE AT DOUGLAS TRACK

Louisville, Ky., June 10.—[Special.]—Overnight rains played havoc with today's racing at Douglas park, scratches being numerous and the sudden change in track conditions put the form players at sea. Three favorites and two second choices won during the afternoon.

The feature, the Speculation stakes, went to Gipsy George in handy fashion, with Checks second and Christie third. The winner was lightly weighted and fairly swam through the muddy going. He was advanced from $900, his entrance price, to $2,005, and retained. The race was worth $2,080 to the winner.

Ask Charges in Writing.

The breeders held another meeting this afternoon following their request for a change of the racing secretary. The usual amount of secretiveness shrouded the meeting. Secretary Pearce made a statement tonight asking that the turfment put their charges in writing. General Manager John Hachmeiser told the horsemen that they should come out in the open if there are any charges to make. He refused to ask for the resignation of Secretary Pearce and puts the issue up to the horsemen.

A massmeeting will be held in the paddock by the members of the Breeders' association at 1 o'clock Monday. Many of the horsemen, according to gossip tonight, are worrying over the fact that they went in to get Pearce's scalp without stopping to consider the possibilities of the case becoming a boomerang.

THE DIARY OF A SIREN.

JUNE 4.

DIARY I believe I have at last found a match for me in conversation and repartee and never did I believe a person could spend such a pleasant evening just doing nothing else only talking until last evening when Mr. Tanner came to call. At the close of the evening I realized that I had spent one of the most enjoyable evenings of my life and then suddenly I also realized that I was engaged to Lennie and was it fair to him that I should be able to enjoy myself so thoroughly talking to another man when the man to who I am betrothed is hundreds of miles away in the east. My conscience bothered me so that I could not sleep and finally I found refuge in the land of dreams by vowing that today I would write to Lennie and tell him all about my acquaintance with Mr. Tanner. So I will write to Lennie and tell him all before I go to bed tonight, but first I want to record down here such bits of my conversation with Mr. Tanner as I can recall to read and laugh over them in future years.

He came about eight o'clock and as my brother and sister-in-law was out to the nickle show I thought we could have a better time staying at home quietly and chatting so I did not make any proposal about going out some where.

"You are looking very cute tonight, Clara," said Mr. Tanner when I had asked him to take a chair.

"My name is Miss Meyers to strangers," I replied.

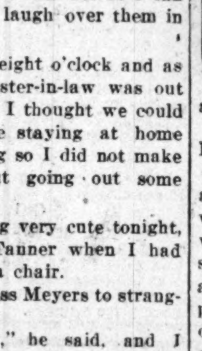
"I should worry," he said, and I could not help from laughing at his boldness.

"It would not be fair," I said, "if you was to call me Clara when I feel that I can only call you Mr. Tanner."

"I don't care what you call me as long as you don't call me down," he said, and we laughed as gayly as though we had known each other all our life.

"Where do you learn all that funny stuff?" I asked banteringly.

"I read the comical papers," he replied, and really it was all I could do to keep from shrieking.



"They say it makes a person fat to laugh," I said. "I don't want to get fat and if you come here often I am afraid I will get fat."

"You could take on a few more ounces without any danger of them taking you to the stockyards," he said.

"Why, Mr. Tanner, or Lou," said I. "You talk like I was an animal of some kind."

"We are all animals," he replied.

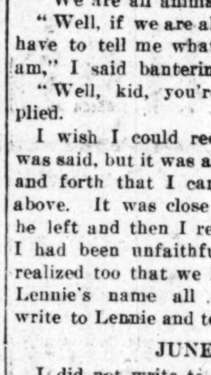
"Well, if we are all animals, you will have to tell me what kind of animal I am," I said banteringly.

"Well, kid, you're a bear," he replied.

I wish I could recall more of what was said, but it was all said so fast back and forth that I can only recall the above. It was close to midnight when he left and then I realized that maybe I had been unfaithful to Lennie and I realized too that we had not mentioned Lennie's name all evening. I must write to Lennie and tell him all about it.

JUNE 6.

I did not write to Lennie Sunday as I planned, but wrote to him yesterday instead. I was going to write Sunday evening, but Lou called up just as I was sitting down to my desk and asked if he could come and call again. I said no, but he would not take no for an answer. He came aad I laughed till I was ashamed of myself. I wish diary that he and I had met long ago, but that is a secret between you and I.



Here is what I wrote to Lennie:

Dearest Lennie:—

It seems like weeks since you went away and I miss you very much and wish you could come home before two weeks more, but I suppose you have to stay with the horrid old Cubs nine. I am lonesome and have no heart for any pleasures and have been reading a great deal and sewing some, mending up my clothes so I can look nice for you when you come back. I have staid home every evening and gone to bed early. I hope you are enjoying the trip and that you are thinking of me. Why don't you write as you promised?

It seems a long time since you went away and I miss you very much. I must close now as I have to writeing to do for Mr. Weeghman.

Your own little Girlie.

I would of written a longer letter to him if I thought he deserved it, but he has been neglecting me shamefully.

Diary since I wrote those last lines Lou called up and wants me to go out to one of the parks with him tonight. I refused, but he would not stand for it. What ever shall I do with such a persistent man?

OUTSIDERS DEFEATED IN PREP TENNIS PLAY BY COOK COUNTYITES

The feature of the opening rounds of the University of Chicago interscholastic tennis tournament was the defeat of Webber and Vories, University High stars, at the hands of Eximer and Goldberg of Wendell Phillips. All matches in the preliminary rounds of the doubles and singles of the schedule were completed by keeping the 125 entries in continuous play on twenty courts. Exime was beaten in the first semi-final frame in singles by Fox of Lane Tech.

Every man left in the tourney is a Cook county player, and the elimination will continue on Monday morning. A large number of the out of town men returned to their homes because of the continued rain of the week, and all of those who remained were defeated. Summaries:

MRS. RAYMOND PLAYS MISS BJURSTED FOR NATIONAL NET TITLE

Philadelphia, Pa., June 10.—Mrs. Edward Raymond of New York, by defeating Miss Eleanora Sears of Boston in the final round of singles of the women's national lawn tennis tournament on the courts of the Philadelphia Cricket club today, won the right to meet Miss Molla Bjursted, the national title holder, in the challenge round for the championship on Monday. The scores were 6—3, 6—4.

Mrs. Raymond played like a well oiled machine, and her superior steadiness, accurate placing, and fine generalship were too much for the Boston contender.

Semi-finals in Straight Sets.

In the semi-final round played earlier in the day Mrs. Raymond outclassed Miss Evelyn Sears, national singles champion in 1905, winning the match in straight sets, 6—2, 6—1. Miss Eleanora Sears won the other semi-final match from Miss Susanne White of Baltimore, 6—2, 6—3.

The greatest upset of the tournament came in a semi-final mixed doubles match late in the day, when Miss Bjursted and Charles M. Bull Jr. of New York were eliminated by Miss Florence Ballin, New York, and W. T. Tilden II., Philadelphia, in straight sets. The score was 6—2, 6—4. Most of the experts had picked Miss Bjursted and Mr. Bull to win the event, but Tilden's individual brilliance, backed by Miss Ballin's steady and consistent playing, gave them an easy victory.

Final Match Tomorrow.

On Monday Mrs. Raymond will meet Miss Bjurstedt, the 1915 champion, to decide who is the national singles champion.

Semi-final, singles—Mrs. Edward Raymond, New York, defeated Miss Evelyn Sears, Boston, 6—2, 6—1. Miss Eleanor Sears, Boston, defeated Miss Susanne White, Baltimore, 6—2, 6—3.

Final—Mrs. Raymond defeated Miss Eleanora Sears, 6—3, 6—4.

CRITICS DIFFER OVER DECISION FOR WHITE GO

Undeserved Draw Given to Mitchell by Some, Leaving Mixup.

When Charley White of Chicago was accorded the popular verdict over Richie Mitchell, the idol of Milwaukee fans, in the Brewery City a short time ago there were, as usually happens, a number of newspaper critics who didn't see the contest as did the majority.

This was true particularly of the Chicago scribes. While the majority of the boys who write for the morning papers gave the verdict to White, there was one who called it a draw. The majority of afternoon publications also favored the Chicago scrapper, but a few called it an even scrap. As was to be expected, Milwaukee practically went solid on the draw decision, for even a biased critic couldn't by the widest stretch of imagination have given Mitchell better than an even break.

Some Almost Demand Kayo.

In these days of ten round contests in no decisions some of the critics seem inclined to call the bouts a draw if both men are on their feet at the end of the ten sessions. Of course, if a boxer has been so badly pommeled and damaged that he is lucky to stay the limit he must be placed in the defeated class, but if he is simply outpointed he often is given an even break. This is especially true if he is the under dog in the wagering or is a popular idol, as Richie Mitchell is in Milwaukee.

In this bout between White and Mitchell it undoubtedly was prejudice that was responsible for some of the critics giving the Brewery City boy a draw, for nothing but prejudice could have made a person blind to the fact that White certainly earned the verdict on clean and hard punching. No one who saw the contest will deny that Mitchell did a lot of hitting. Perhaps if all the blows that had landed could have been counted the count would show that the Milwaukeean landed the greater number of blows.

Hard Punches Really Count.

But at the same time no one who knows anything about boxing would be willing to admit that two punches of the soft variety, the kind that do no damage, or do not even slow up an opponent, are equal to one hard smash that not only hurts but has the effect of taking the steam out of the boxer on whom it lands.

Before the fight White was favorite, for many believed his famous left hook would find Mitchell's jaw and upset him for the count. The knowledge that White carried the punch of a caliber to score a knockout made everybody figure Richie would be forced to fight a defensive battle. And that was just what he did, for not once in the full ten rounds did he dare take his right glove away from his jaw. He fought every round with his left, for that was the only fist with which he could take a chance, and to his credit it can be said he put up a better one handed scrap than has been seen in this section of the country in many a day.

Drops Brewer in Third.

There was one round, the third, in which it looked as if White might score a knockout. In this session White tore in furiously, letting both right and left hand go for the head. In the mixup White's left landed on the side of Mitchell's head, and it was a hard enough wallop to upset Ritchie. The punch was too high, however, to be of the knockout variety, and Mitchell quickly jumped to his feet to resume hostilities.

This story is not meant as a jolt for the critics, who couldn't see the result without giving conflicting verdicts. It would be hard to get a number of critics to agree on the decisions, and as a result the fans are still awaiting the time when there will be legal boxing in which the verdicts can be announced by the referee from the ring.

Laga Criticizes Critics.

A bunch of Chicago fight folks gathered in Chicago a couple of days after the White-Mitchell scrap and discussed the decisions in that bout. One of them was Kid Howard, manager of Ever Hammer, while another was Bob Laga, manager of Joe Rivers, the California lightweight. Laga told of several bouts in which Rivers has been a contestant which resulted in draw verdicts simply because Rivers' opponent came fast and made a winning showing in the final round.

"That has happened to Rivers several times," said Laga. "I remember one case not long ago when Rivers outpointed his opponent as far as from New York to Chicago for nine rounds, then slowed up in the tenth because he had grown a bit tired from his earlier efforts, and was outpointed himself in the final session. Then the critics came out with stories of a draw bout."

A Decision by George Siler.

An incident of the old days when George Siler was a referee is recalled. Two boys were scrapping over the six round route and one of them hammered the other fiercely for five rounds, having so much the better of the mill that many of the ringsiders were yelling to the referee to stop the uneven contest. But in the sixth and final round something happened. The boy who had been taking the beating suddenly let go a wild right swing. It caught his opponent squarely on the chin and knocked him flat on his back on the canvas. Siler started to count over the prostrate kid and had reached five when the gong ending the bout clanged.

It was up to Siler to give a decision, for decisions were allowed then, and he immediately gave the fight to the boy on the floor. That verdict was one of the queerest ever rendered in any ring and many disputed it. But Siler argued that as the boy on the floor had won five rounds and the fight was over when the gong stopped it, he deserved the credit of winning. If there had been another round the boy on the floor might have recuperated in the minute's rest and come back strong.

The LAST WATCH of HERO

Reproduction of A Painting by LORD LEIGHTON

Every week The Sunday Tribune will reproduce in four colors on this page one of the world's most famously beautiful paintings. There will be a brief biography of the painter and a story of the painting. Herewith is reproduced another in the series.

By Louise James Bargelt.

The Last Watch of Hero, by Lord Leighton, P.R.A. In the Manchester Art gallery.

OLDER almost than tradition itself, and yet ranked among the most humanly probable of all the fabled stories of antiquity, is this tale of love of Hero and Leander.

It was at a celebration of the festival of Aphrodite and Adonis in the town of Sestos that Leander and Hero met. She was a priestess of Venus and beautiful, says the story, beyond any woman he had ever seen. He was a youth of Abydos, a town on the opposite side of the Hellespont, and the fire in his eyes when he looked at her set her blood aflame. From the first moment of their meeting they loved and vowed that they would die rather than live apart.

The gulf which divided them, however, seemed unbridgable. As priestess she could not marry without forfeiting her life. Her parents denied her even the privilege of speaking with him. Finally they compromised with fate. They would see each other clandestinely each night at the top of the tower by the sea where Hero lived. Each night Leander would swim the Hellespont, strengthened by the passion in his heart, guided by the single lamp which Hero would place in a window.

For several nights this plan was carried out. The tall temples where once Hero had worshiped so devoutly looked on silently while Leander, dripping with the waves of the sea, would climb up the rocky coast and slip into the darkened tower entrance. And the whispering trees bent toward one another as he passed out again, down the path between their overspreading branches, on his way back to Abydos, across the Hellespont.

Finally one night a storm broke, and the wind, whirling violently about the heights of the tower, blew out the fragile signal with which Herc drew Leander safely to her. And Leander, unable in the darkness to locate the desired spot, perished in the waves.

All that night Hero waited and watched by her window in the tower. But morning dawned without his coming, and the rising sun showed up with ghastly vividness the body of her lover stretched on the sand. Stricken with grief and half maddened by the sight, Hero cast herself in the waves that she too, might meet the same death that had overtaken Leander.

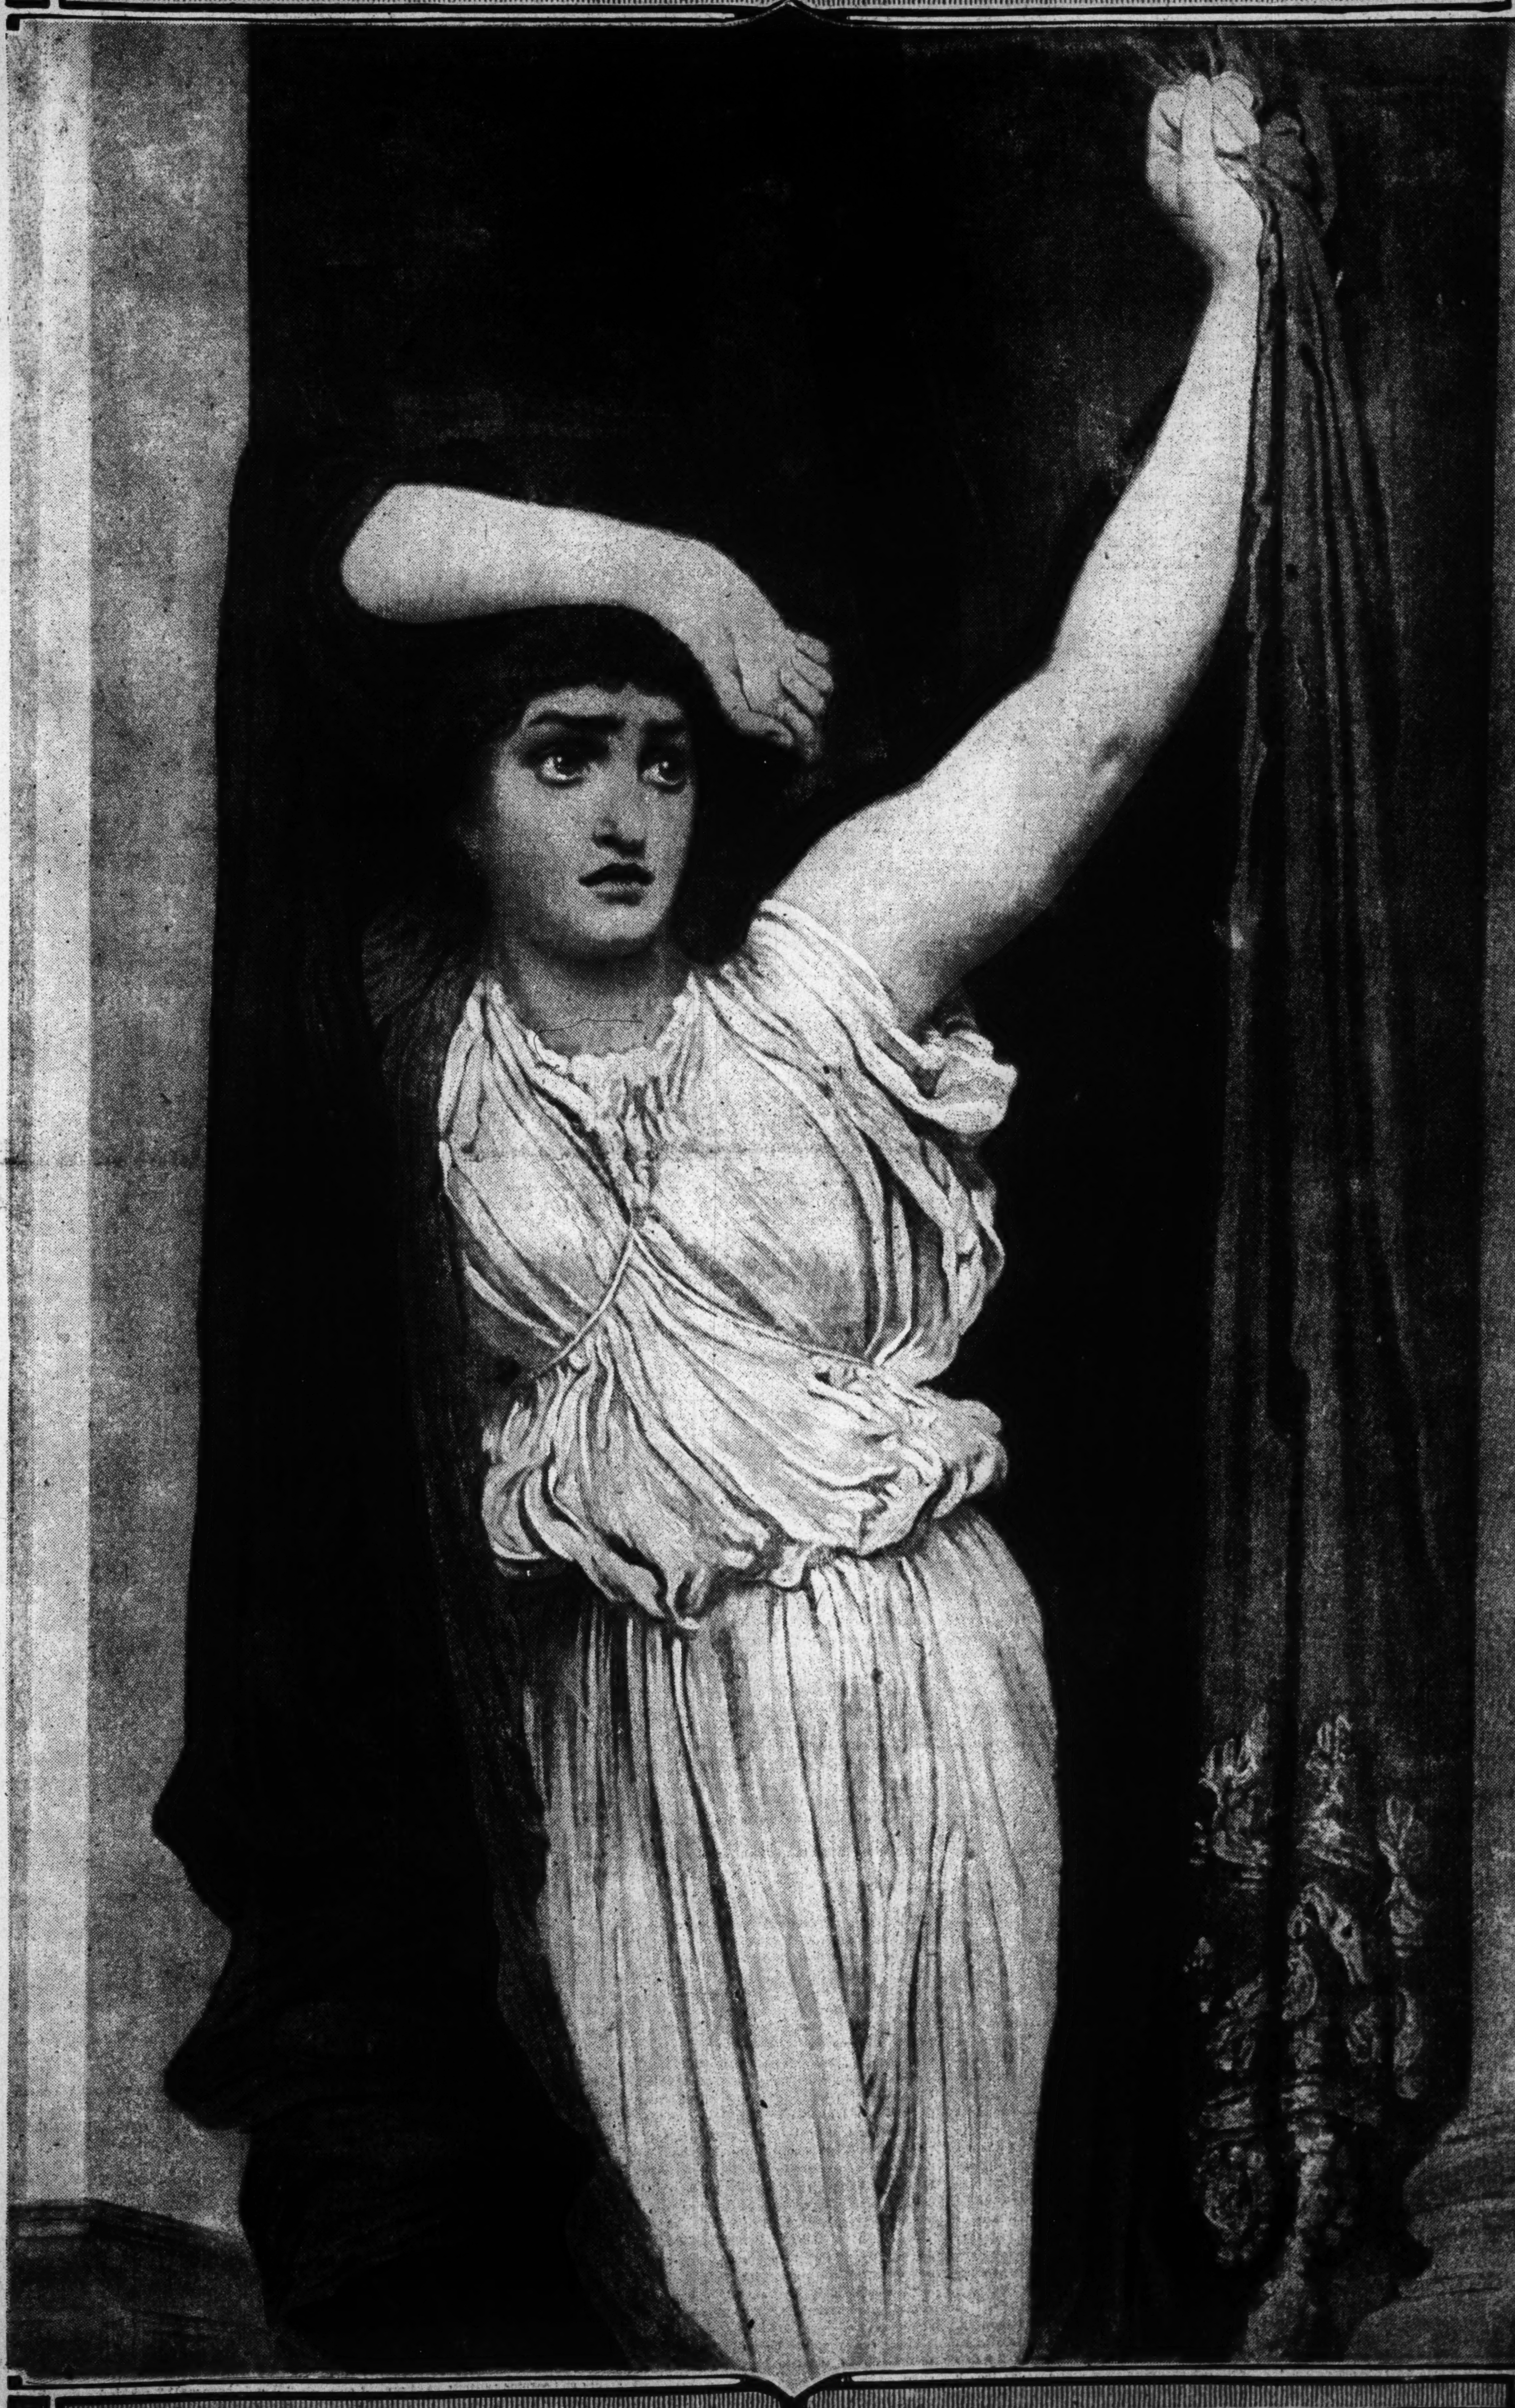
This is a story which has been dealt with many times in poetry and prose Marlowe, Schiller, and Leigh Hunt have all immortalized the pair. Byron with unusual practicality, attempted Leander's feat of swimming the Hellespont, and accomplished it in one hour and ten minutes.

In the illustration of the classical myths Lord Leighton was successful. His style of art is the sort especially suited to this representation of Greek heroines of old. His figures are many times sculpturesque in their beauty, and reflect the classical idea perfectly.

This painting of Hero is considered the finest of his classical delineations. The full grace of her figure in its Grecian robes, the fine modeling of her beautiful features, the utter despair in her searching eyes, and the tonal rendering of the whole picture combine in raising it to the height of a real masterpiece.

The biography of Leighton's life and work reads with the light of success and comfort thrown on nearly every page. His father was a prominent and prosperous Scarborough physician, and no financial hardships of any kind were ever forced upon the son. He was educated in Germany, Italy, Brussels, and Paris. In 1855 he exhibited his first great success, "Cimabue's Madonna Carried in Procession Through Florence," and which was later purchased by Queen Victoria. In 1864 he was elected an associate, in 1868 a royal academician, and in 1878 president of the academy. In 1878 a knighthood was bestowed upon him, in 1886 a baronetcy, and in 1896 the unique distinction for an artist, a peerage. He died the same year.

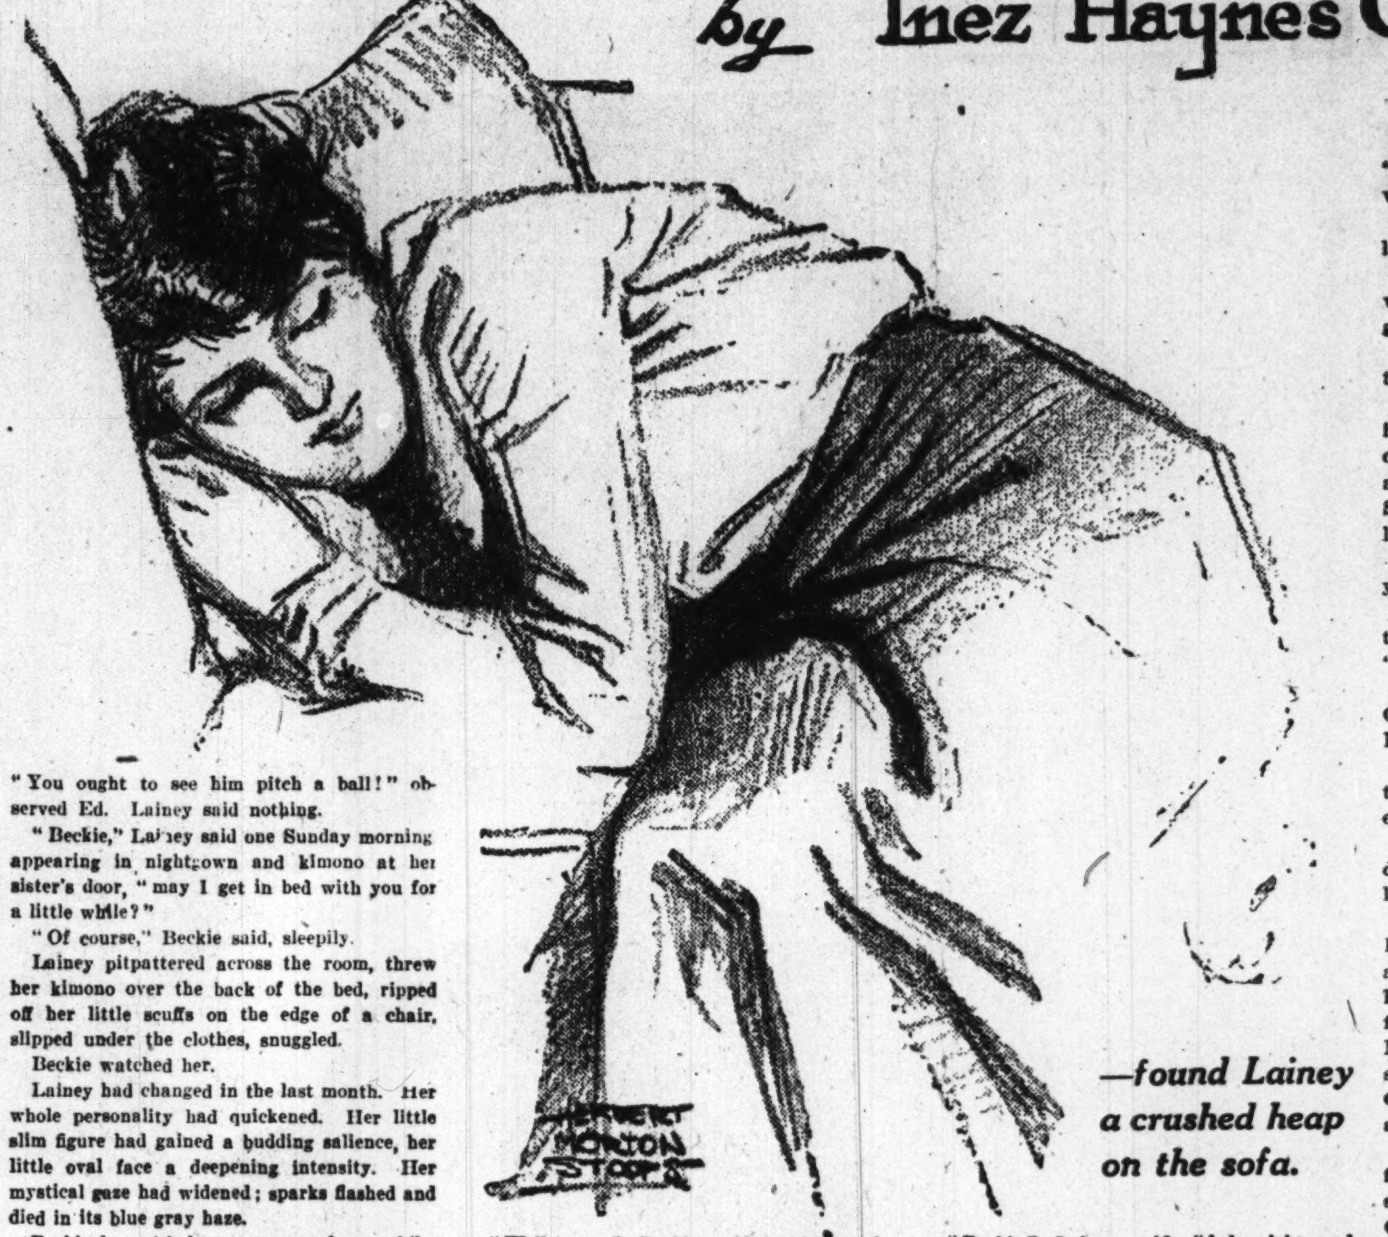
Another famous painting will be reproduced next week.



Lainey and the Eternal Masculine

by Inez Haynes Gillmore

This is the eighth of a series of stories by Inez Haynes Gillmore, the famous short story writer, dealing with the adventures, trials, and joys of the "Ollivant Orphans," which will appear every Sunday in The Sunday Tribune. Each installment will be complete in itself, although the series of stories as a whole will make a delightful novel. You will find the Ollivant Orphans good company, and the author's facile style and apt character delineation will make you remember the stories as among the best works of fiction you have read.



—found Lainey a crushed heap on the sofa.

CHAPTER VIII.

"WHAT do you suppose I heard today?" Ann Ollivant demanded. She suspended her pen over the ink bottle, a golden star of mischief dancing in each eye, and gazed at the quiet family group.

"I'm sure I don't know," Lainey answered for them all, "and I never shall guess. Tell us quick."

"That's right—you never will guess," agreed Ann. "You could have knocked me down with a feather."

"O, do tell us, Ann," Beckie entreated, interrupting her count and putting her lace down.

"That isn't all," Ann went on tantalizingly, bending again to her writing. "I've got another piece of gossip that will make your hair curl."

For a moment there was no sound in the room but the scratching of Ann's pen and the fall of the coals in the grate. In one island of light made by the big student lamp Matt and Roly hung wordless, almost breathless, over the chessboard. In another oasis of gold, cast by the Japanese lamp, Beckie resumed her smocking and Ed his reading.

"Please hurry, Ann!" Lainey's voice came, muffled through the cascade. "I do love gossip. It's so exciting."

Ann laughed triumphantly. "The first is about Edna Williamson," she began after a while. "She has just announced her engagement to Max Elton."

"Max!" said Beckie, and "Edna!" said Ed. Their exclamations were simultaneous, and their emphases were the same. "Well, I've been expecting it," came from Lainey, and, "I thought it was Miriam Max was after," came from Matt.

"I'd like to know how you could expect it, Lainey Ollivant, when it's been such a surprise to everybody else," Ann answered her sister. "So did Miriam," she answered her brother. "That's what makes it gossip. Of course, the two girls living in the same apartment like that, and Max, being in the apartment above, he saw just as much of one as of the other. Miriam thought he was calling on her. But he wasn't. She's all broken up over it, and they say she's been an awful cat to poor Edna ever since."

"That's the mistake girls are always making," Ed commented, "assuming that a man wants to marry them because he calls on them twice in succession."

"Sure!" Matt agreed. "They're forever doing that. It keeps a fellow from calling a whole lot of places that he'd be going to all the time otherwise."

"What's the other gossip, Ann?" Ed demanded.

"O, come on, Ann!" Ed urged finally.

"Come through!" Matt called.

Ann laughed another tantalizing laugh. "Well," she began importantly, "there's been an awful break between Babe Davis and Sidney Warren. It seems that Babe, somehow, got it into her head that he was crazy about Jane Forrester. When he proposed, Babe was utterly dumfounded. She refused him and Sid got mad and he accused her of encouraging him. Now they're not speaking. Lucky escape for her, I say. For Sid's turned out to be an awful cad. He's going round knocking Babe to everybody."

"Well, Babe certainly let him spend a lot of money on her," Ed pronounced judicially.

"Yes, but he included Jane in all his parties," Ann explained, "and Jane is such a heart smasher. And Babe isn't especially quick in the head, you know."

With an abrupt movement Lainey turned about and sat cross-legged on the hearth, her face towards her family. "What I would like to know—what I can't see—what I don't understand—how is a girl to know when a man is calling on her, whether he's in love with her or not?"

"What a question," commented Beckie, smocking wildly. "You can always tell. There's something inside you that makes you realize. It's intuition."

"Nothing inside me ever makes me realize how people feel towards me," Lainey said with decision. "I've occasionally had intuitions, of course, but they were just as likely to turn out to be unreliable. In fact, when I trust them they're always wrong."

"That's because you're such an absent minded thing, Lainey," Ann explained, pityingly. "You see, you don't give your intuitions a chance."

"You must be a very queer girl, Lainey," Beckie said vigorously. "Why, I always go by my intuitions."

"How about the time you gave that Armenian peddler five dollars to get educated on," Roland asked in the tone of scientific investigation, "and he swiped the hall rug on his way out?"

"That was different," Beckie said stiffly. "I'm not referring to things like that."

"Well, if a girl hasn't any more intuition than I have," Lainey sighed, a little waxen wrinkle coming between her brows, "I still don't see how she's ever going to tell when a man's in love with her—or, what's more important when he isn't."

"You're not supposed to think of it, Lainey," Ann said with impatience. "It's very——very—unwomanly. You're not supposed to have ideas that a man wants to marry you."

"But I couldn't help thinking of it," Lainey persisted with her gentle obstinacy. "I couldn't help having ideas."

"So much the worse for you, then," Ann said in a relentless voice. "But you oughtn't to, just the same. You're supposed to drift along, paying no attention to what he says or does, letting things take a natural course."

"And then when he proposes," an injection of scorn froze the perplexity in Lainey's tone, "you permit yourself to wake up to the fact that you've been in love with him all the time."

"Yes," said Ann.

"Yes," said Beckie.

Lainey stared at her sisters, a thousand tiny indignations blazing in her face. "But—but—but"—apparently she staggered mentally as well as orally—"suppose he shouldn't propose at all?"

"You still would take no notice of anything," Ann informed her.

"But—but——" Again, mentally and orally, Lainey staggered to silence. "Suppose, by and by, you wake up to the fact that by some awful fatality you are in love with him and he has no intention of proposing to you, what do you do then?"

"He'd propose," Beckie thrust in grimly, "if you knew your business."

"Anyway, Lainey," Roland called from the other room, "I'd knock his block off for you."

"Not if I was around," Matt said. "The thing to do is to let a man feel free."

Lainey's narrowed questioning, shimmering gaze still held Ann's wide, confident blazing look.

Ann answered when the others stopped. "You do nothing," she said cuttingly, "if you are a lady."

Lainey meditated, a tiny boned, helpless looking, bird claw of a hand on each knee.

"It seems to me," she said finally with a sigh, "it's an awful job being a lady."

"I don't find it so," Ann stated superbly.

"You!" Roland exploded. "Who ever told you you were a lady?"

Ann was still superb enough not to answer.

"Fortunately for me," Lainey decided, "I don't have to bother about this question, anyway. Not being the kind of girl that attracts men—. Besides, I never intend to marry, anyway."

"They all say that, Lainey," Ed and Matt informed her in chorus.

"Well, it would be a good principle to stick to," growled Roly. "I wish all girls had that idea."

"But I should think for a girl like you, Ann," Lainey continued, ignoring Roland, "that all men find attractive, it would be very puzzling. However, the thing to do, of course, is to assume that no man wants to marry you until he makes a deposition to that effect before a justice of the peace."

"Lainey, I think that's the most immodest—and unladylike—and mercenary remark I ever listened to," came in bursts of shocked phrases from Beckie.

"Well, all I've got to say," began Ann, "is——"

The long strident peal of the doorbell interrupted.

"Good Lord, who can that be this stormy night?" Ann concluded.

"O, my stars!" Lainey started with a horrified vigor, "and garters!" she ended in feeble dismay.

"Lainey Ollivant," Ann demanded sternly, "who have you invited here?"

"Some young men that Bird and I met at the local," Lainey answered, meekly, "some Socialists. And I had forgotten all about it."

"Stand up!" Ann commanded inflexibly.

Obedient, Lainey stood up, slim as a paper doll in the long sage green Chinese sa'am—an heirloom which she had resurrected from the attic. Her hair fell in straight, arrowlike strands. "Roll up your hair!"

Obedient, Lainey bulked her hair in her neck, skewered it together; pegged it down.

"Put on your cap!" continued the unyielding voice. "Now, open the door!"

Obedient, Lainey opened the door. In another moment she was performing prodigies of confused introductions.

. . . .

The three young men, thus suddenly thrown into the Ollivant circle, were contrasted types. Opinions differed widely in regard to them.

Mr. Quentin Quigly had just come from Paris, via New York. He was a magazine writer and he was collecting material for an article entitled, "How Shall We Wake Up Boston?" He was the oldest of the three, a young man of a romantic aspect. He was big featured and fine featured. He wore brown corduroy trousers, a loose blouse, and a flowing tie. Beckie said that he was as handsome "as a Greek god." Ann remarked that he had red eyelids. Roland oberved that he was a fathead. Lainey said nothing.

Mr. Worthington Pope had come straight from Millers Falls, Vermont, to Boston. He was a reporter on the Chronicle. He was not so tall as Mr. Quigly, but he bulked bigger, and he seemed to be cast in iron. His eyes were like wells of black ink, they were so big and changeless and sparkless, and it was as though his hair, brows and lashes had been powdered with coal dust. His skin and teeth were so milky that two great patches of crimson on his cheekbones looked like make-up.

Hopwood Lee—everybody called him Hop after that first evening—was an Oregonian, who was studying at Harvard. He was no taller than Lainey and almost as small waisted. His shoulders were enormous, as though they had been carved for a much bigger man and then fitted to his torso. "Looks like a little boy playing he was a man," said Beckie. "I hate those two gold teeth!" remarked Ann. "You ought to see him pitch a ball!" observed Ed. Lainey said nothing.

"Beckie," Lainey said one Sunday morning appearing in nightgown and kimono at her sister's door, "may I get in bed with you for a little while?"

"Of course," Beckie said, sleepily.

Lainey pitpattered across the room, threw her kimono over the back of the bed, ripped off her little scuffs on the edge of a chair, slipped under the clothes, snuggled.

Beckie watched her.

Lainey had changed in the last month. Her whole personality had quickened. Her little slim figure had gained a budding salience, her little oval face a deepening intensity. Her mystical gaze had widened; sparks flashed and died in its blue gray haze.

Beckie lay with her eyes open for a while, an expectant look on her face. But nothing came from Lainey. Beckie's eyes gradually filmed; her lids fell.

"Beckie," Lainey said suddenly. "Do you ever think of marriage?"

"Of course I do," she said. "All the time."

"I don't," Lainey admitted in a crestfallen tone, "or at least I haven't much. In the past, I mean. Lately I have. The trouble with me is, I guess, that I never think of anything until I have to. And marriage is—so—so—strange—and—and——"

Lainey stopped. Her voice faded into silence.

"Beckie!" Again Lainey called her sister back from the vestibule of dreams. "Do you feel as though—marriage—were an experience that you—ought to have. I mean—do you feel—that your life won't be—complete—without it?"

"I should commit suicide tomorrow," Beckie answered simply, "if I didn't think I was going to get married some day. That's the way I feel."

"Do you, Beckie?" Lainey said. She sighed; but then, as though all along she had been afraid that this was the way of it, she added, "I think Ann's like that, although, perhaps, she wouldn't admit it. Beckie, do you know I think there's something very queer about me?" Lainey's tone had become grave, sorrowful, a little alarmed. "The thought of marriage fills me with a—a—a—disgust—yes, that's what it is—a loathing. I don't mean—what you think I mean—exactly. I mean—well, when I go out to see Cousin Edith and walk up Edgemore street between those two rows of married looking houses." Lainey was suddenly fluent, facile, articulate again. "You know what I mean; each with a young married couple in it, and perhaps a baby or two. And when I see the rubber plant in the window and the iceman at the back door and the baby carriage on the piazza, and the baby's wash on the line, a sort of feeling of disgust comes over me that—that—well, Beckie, I just hate it. I hate it—that's all there is to it. It looks so cut and dried, so like the end of things. O, Beckie, it gives me a perfectly horrid sensation. Do you feel that way?"

"No," replied Becky calmly, "I don't know what you're talking about. I love to go out there. It's my ideal of a home."

"Beckie," Lainey said, "sometimes I hate the word home. But I guess I'm queer and different from other people."

Beckie attempted no closer translation of this.

"Beckie, I want to ask you another thing. Would you—would you—have you ever thought—What I mean is, do you want to have children?"

For a long moment Beckie did not answer. Lainey said nothing. But the silence was the kind that accumulates each second in intensity. "Lainey," Beckie broke in at last, "I'm 28. And if by the time I'm 40 I haven't had a baby of my own I'm going to adopt one."

"O!" Lainey said. "O!" Then again, "O!" There were three emotions in those O's, surprise, wonder, compassion. 'How strange! And yet it's beautiful. But, Beckie, I don't feel that way. I feel—I wish—I often think it would be so nice if babies came the way mother told us they did when we were children—growing out of water lilies. I don't see why we have to have fathers for our babies. I think they're awfully unnecessary. Now, if I could have a baby all my own without any father, I—O, I'd love that."

"Well, I wouldn't," Beckie proclaimed downrightly. "I'd like a husband and a father for it. Who'd support it?"

"I would—if it was mine," Lainey answered with conviction; "I'd find a way. I know I would."

There came another long silence; so long that this time the two girls drifted off to sleep.

. . . .

"Beckie," Lainey said, coming into her sister's room the following Sunday morning, "I want to talk with you. I'm troubled."

"Well, now," Beckie said, yawning the sleep out of her hazel eyes, "we're getting to it. Why didn't you tell me last Sunday? What's it about? Mr. Quigly?"

"Yes, I tried to tell you," Lainey said, "but somehow I couldn't. No, it's about Mr. Pope."

"What about him?" Beckie snapped.

"You see, Beck, I don't understand about such things—and I want to do what's right. And you have so much intuition—and I haven't any—I'm a perfect fool. But it began two weeks ago."

"What began?" Beckie demanded. "Lainey, do please be a little more clear."

"Well, two weeks ago, Saturday afternoon, he asked me if I'd go walking with him. I said I would and did. He called for me. After we left the house he said that he wanted to look at some vacant apartments and would I go with him. Well, the long and short of it was that we spent the afternoon at it——"

"Yes," Beckie said. "Go on!"

"Well, it didn't happen in the first one we looked at, but in the second. And I don't know how I got the idea. But presently I found that we were considering these apartments from the point of view—of a—married pair. He asked me all kinds of questions—and, Beckie, I can't tell you how queer I felt when he would say, 'Do you like this, Lainey?' or, 'Is this your idea of a comfortable apartment?'"

"What did you say?" Beckie asked.

"Beckie, I didn't know what to say. I didn't know where to look. But I kept repeating that I knew nothing whatever about housekeeping, and hated it, and that Ann was the one to go to, that she was so practical. And so forth—and so forth."

"What did he say to that?"

"O, that it wasn't Ann's opinion that he wanted, but mine. Now what—you have so much intuition, Beckie—what do you think he means?"

"There's only one interpretation of his meaning, Lainey. I'll tell you now what I've thought all along—Worth Pope is in love with you. I think he's shy, though, and that's his way of showing it. O, Lainey, can't you fall in love with him? I should so love to have a wedding in the family."

"Of course I can't—you goose! And yet, somehow, Beckie, I think you're wrong. I can't feel that he——"

"Why, good gracious, Lainey, don't you know when a man's in love with you?"

"No. Why should I? No one was ever in love with me before."

"But don't you have a feeling? Don't you realize that he's looking at you when you're not looking at him, and that he always knows just what you're doing, always listening to what you're saying, always plotting and planning to get alone with you?"

Lainey shook her head so vigorously that the bed shook too. "No, I've noticed nothing of those things. In fact, his eyes always seem to have a far off look, as though he was thinking of something else. No, the only thing he does is to ask me to go to places with him. But so does Mr. Quigly."

"Does Mr. Quigly act that way?" Beckie inquired.

"O, no, I should say he didn't," answered Lainey. "He's a comfort. He's always telling me about the other girls he calls on—he must know reams of them. And then he has very advanced ideas about love and marriage. He thinks the present system is all wrong. He says that women ought to have the right to propose marriage just as much as a man. He says that the perplexed conditions of today arise from wrong economic conditions. He says that when women have become economically independent, the degrading conditions that surround love and marriage will be done away with. When women have as much to offer men, in the way of prosperity and ability and earning capacity as at present men have to offer women, why then the wooing and proposing will come as often from one side as the other."

"Bosh!" remarked Beckie.

"Beckie," Lainey said, "he's right and you're wrong. He's taking me to a meeting in Newton tomorrow night. Now, I'm going to let you finish your nap."

It was three nights later that Beckie, coming home late, found Lainey asleep in her bed. When Beckie turned up the gas, Lainey's lids flashed open, wide. 'Is that you, Beckie?" she asked drowsily. Drowsily, too, she pulled herself up to a sitting position, fitted a pillow into her back.

"More trouble?" Beckie asked, her eyes scintillating.

"Beckie Ollivant, you're enjoying this!" Lainey reproached her sister. Perhaps she was enjoying it herself, for as she plunged into her narrative a smile, delicious with conscious power, showed her little teeth. "My dear, Mr. Pope called me up this afternoon and asked me if I'd meet him in town and go to tea with him. I said I would. I hoped that I might have an opportunity to tell him. He put the hour at 2. I thought that extraordinarily early, but when I met him he asked me if I minded going about to some stores with him. I said I didn't—never suspecting—you know what an idiot I am, Beck. And—it seems—he was looking at furniture with the idea of fixing up that apartment, and although he didn't say it in so many words, there was always the insinuation that it was for two—not bachelor housekeeping at all."

"Did he buy anything?" Beckie asked, hanging up her coat and hat.

"No, he only looked at things. But, just as before, he would say, 'What do you think, Lainey?' or, 'Remember, I'm depending on you!' or, 'Tell me exactly how you feel about it.'"

"Well, Lainey, I hope you told him——" Beckie was beginning, severely.

"But, Beckie, how could I? A man who's made no effort to make love, who never looks at me when he talks to me—well, he's got to give me more of an opening than that."

"Yes," Beckie said slowly, beginning to undress, "I suppose so. And, of course, it isn't as though he'd begun to buy those things. How about Quigly? Is he still talking about other girls?"

"O, no," Lainey said, with one of her rare flashes of humor, "now that he's established an alibi, he doesn't have to. O, but Beckie, we went to that meeting together way out in Newton, and, my dear, what do you suppose he did?"

"What?" Beckie demanded.

"We were late and he took a taxicab out there."

"A taxicab!" Beckie exclaimed. "It must have cost a million dollars."

"It did," Lainey said. "Eight dollars and ninety cents. O, I nearly died—watching that clock-thing jumping round. I told him if my hair turned white it would be his fault. But he only laughed. I never saw anybody spend money like that. I told him so. He said nobody else ever had in Boston. He hates Boston."

Beckie bristled. "I'd like to know what he thinks New York has on it—— Do you like Mr. Quigly, Lainey?"

"I do and I don't," Lainey answered in an analytic voice. "I like his ideas, but I'm not sure yet of his character. I don't think he'd suffer for a principle. But, although I like Worth Pope better, I'm more comfortable with Mr. Quigly. There's always a worry hanging over me when I'm with Worth. But I feel perfectly free when I'm with Quentin—knowing that he's not in love with me. Yes, all my intuition is that he isn't. But don't let it bother you too much, Beckie."

. . . .

The following Saturday when Beckie came home a little early from work she found Lainey a dull, colorless, crushed heap on the sofa. Ann was sitting beside her.

"What's happened?" Beckie inquired.

"O, that bounder of a Quigly," Ann answered viciously. "Didn't I tell you to never trust a man with red eyelids."

"What has he done?"

"He's proposed to her."

"Proposed!" Beckie said in bewilderment. "Quentin Quigly! Lainey, are you sure it was Quentin?"

Lainey emitted a little spiritless rill of laughter.

"Well, what's this all about, then," Beckie went on. "It's no insult to propose to a girl."

"It was the way he did it—beast!" sputtered Ann.

"I refused him," Lainey explained. "And he got quite offensive. He accused me of encouraging him. We had quite an unpleasant scene. Ann came home in the midst of it. She could not help hearing it—he talked so loud."

"Talked!" This from Ann. "Bellowed, you mean."

"But I don't want the boys to know anything about it," Lainey concluded feebly. "There, there's Ed now."

"Well, I declare, I never thought it was Quentin," Beckie said. "I thought—Hullo, Ed."

Ed did not answer Beckie. "What's all this row about Quigly, Lainey?" he demanded sternly.

"How did you know about it, Ed?" Lainey demanded in her turn, and her voice was no less stern than her brother's.

"I ran into Quigly before coming home," Ed answered. "I saw that he was considerably broken up over something and I asked him what the matter was. He evaded me at first, but I kept at him. Who's that? O, Matt and Roly. Finally he told me the whole story, and I must say—Beat it, you fellows; O, hullo, Hop! Get out, all of you. Lainey and I want to have a talk."

"No," said Lainey, "stay here!" Silvery flames fluttered her eyelashes; two flakes of solid color burst on her cheeks. "If Mr. Quigly is taking the whole world into his confidence, so shall I. The situation is this, boys: Mr. Quigly proposed to me this afternoon and I refused him. He has taken me about a good deal, as you know, and—yes, spent a great deal of money on me. He accused me of encouraging him, and I told him that I didn't know that he meant to—that he thought of—that he wanted to marry me."

Roly, obviously bored, opened Matt's paper. Matt fell into one of the big chairs and considered the subject, frowning. Hop Lee took a silent position in front of the fire.

"Lainey, I should have thought you would have known that he was in love with you," Ed said, accusingly. "Think of how often he's been here."

"Why, Ed Ollivant," there was a hysterical note in Lainey's voice, "it was only a month ago, in this very room, that you and Matt told me that the great mistake girls were always making was to assume that men who called on them wanted to marry them."

"That's true," Ed said. "But at the same time, you've got to show some common sense. There's a point beyond which—you shouldn't let a man spend so much money on you. Quigly mentioned—not in any caddish way; it just happened to come out in talking about taxis in Boston—that it cost $10 bringing you in from Newton the other night."

"Eight-ninety, to be exact," corrected Lainey. "Well, all I can say is that I got into this trouble just by following your advice and assuming that he was not in love with me until he told me so. Why couldn't I have supposed Worth Pope was in love with me? He's been taking me about—and spending money on me—if that's any criterion."

"Well, Lainey, I think he is," Beckie put in.

"Well, he isn't," Lainey said. "He telephoned me today that he was going to be married at Christmas. He'd got a letter from the girl this morning saying she would. He said one reason why he came out here so often was that I reminded him of the girl. He said he asked my advice about flats and furniture and things because he felt that my taste would be just like hers. He never mentioned that girl to me; he wouldn't insult me by making such an explanation. Now, suppose I had taken all his attentions seriously. It would be a pretty howdy do now, with him marrying another girl in two months."

"Well, all I've got to say," Ed promulgated, "is that you acted wisely in one case and like an idiot in the other."

"That's right, Lainey," Matt agreed; "you can't be too careful. You've got to let a man feel free—and you must not seem to be working him."

Hop Lee came into the discussion. "I wouldn't bother about Quigly. Getting engaged is the easiest thing he does. I know at least three girls he's made love to."

"Now, I have a proposition to put to you, Lainey," Hop said later, when the excitement had died down. "There's a strike in Beverly and next week I want you to go with me to some of the I. W. W. meetings there. I think there's going to be some grand doings. I wish to announce to you in the presence of your family that whatever my private feelings towards you may be, I don't consider that you are encouraging me by accompanying me."

"Hop," Lainey said, after an interval of calm consideration, "I accept your invitation. And in my turn I promise you that, whatever my private feelings towards you are or become, I shall not consider that these invitations compromise you in any way." But I've had one brush with your sex and I find that the game works out to their advantage any way you play it. And so, in the meantime, going to those I. W. W. meetings or anywhere else with you, I'll pay my own expenses, if you please."

"Lainey," Ann exclaimed, "I never heard such talk in my life. Do you think that's being a lady?"

"O, damn being a lady!" said Lainey Ollivant.

Marguerite Courtot spends lots of her time fussing around the house

MARGUERITE A "FLOWER GIRL."

Since she was first able to toddle out into the garden Marguerite Courtot has been a lover of flowers, and she argues that no home is complete without them. It is a mania with some people to set out photographs the moment they enter a new abode. They do not feel at home until the familiar pictures are all about them. Miss Courtot declares she feels exactly this way about her flowers. "I figure any room is homelike with a few flowers scattered about, no matter how simply furnished it may be, but to me the most gorgeous place in the world would be barren without them," she said recently to a visitor, and involuntarily bent to lift the drooping head of a blossom that was one of a mass in a vase beside her.

WHEN ANNA LITTLE RIDES.

When Anna Little rides, it's a good equestrian who can keep up with her. She has had more or less to do with horses all her life and knows just all there is to be known about them. Along with her love of them, she does not know what fear is, consequently she is able to enjoy her daily long rides more than would the average girl rider who experiences timidity. It is her passion for horseback riding that makes her like so well the Indian and western pictures in which she is so often featured. The picture shows Miss Little and her favorite mount enjoying a desultory conversation before starting to work.

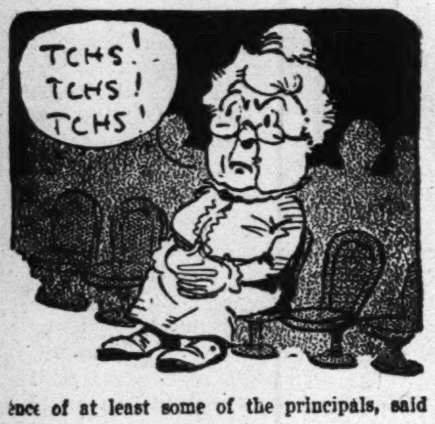
"The Little Girl Next Door."

"TCHS! Tchs! Tchs—ow-ow-ow!" The bosom of the dear old lady sitting next to me in the theater where "The Little Girl Next Door" was being shown heaved spasmodically and she elicited the above sounds with painful regularity as the film wound on its way. She thought she was suffering, but in reality she was having the time of her life—as were myriad other ladies, old, young, club, home, and department store, and as were men of all classes, ages, and nationalities, including those of the cast.



TCHS!
TCHS!
TCHS!

It's a safe bet that not many performances of this remarkable picture go over in the Chicago theaters without the admiring presence of at least some of the principals, said principals composed largely of Chicago's world famous pure politicians, William Hale Thompson mayor, et al., with Lieut. Gov. Barratt O'Hara leading the choir, leading soloist being Arthur Burrage Farwell, accompanied by the clergy

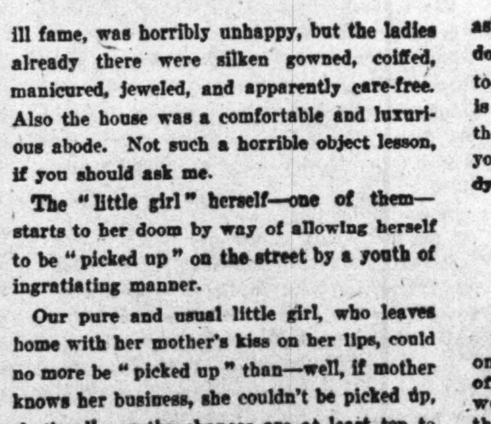
The only pure missing are the censors, and they, we are told, are not dead—just sleeping, having been put into a state of coma for the time being by some we shall not name, pure ones, though, whose argument for administering the drugged needle is that it was the means to an end

For those of you who have not paid your quarter to witness the picture in question, let me briefly inform you that it is the picturization of the report of the vice commission of Illinois "The Little Girl Next Door," who might be your little girl or your neighbor's little girl or the little girl around the corner—but who wouldn't be if she had proper home influences and a mother who was her pal, is exploited going down the staircase of ruin, step by step—her descent, however, only being used as a sort of spotlight to illumine the strenuous virtue of the vice commission and the pure politicians, none of whom would like to be our next president. O, no!

I'd heard about the picture from the pure politicians and their cohorts and I went to see the picture because it's my business to go and see pictures in order that I may talk intelligently about them—or as intelligently as I can with what God gave me as inspiration. And there were others who went for the same reason. But if you're asking me, asking me, it's my private opinion that the majority who dig down into purses and jeans for the quarter which provides the open sesame do it in order to satisfy morbid curiosity.

You can't blame 'em. They've "heard of such things." Naturally, when an avenue is opened for them by the vice commission itself and the city government and the state government—for the governor is there, too, bless him! signing something that "made it possible" for the vice commisison to do its noble duty—to see what they have heard of in a perfectly respectable way, they're going to go.

The sign "No children admitted" is, I think, not the sign that should have been put up. The children could go and not understand what it was all about. Those who should be excluded are the youths and high school girls whom I saw there, taking in with avid eyes things that no censor would have passed for a minute had they been presented in any regular picture. True, the young girl, drugged and taken to the house of ill fame, was horribly unhappy, but the ladies already there were silken gowned, coiffed, manicured, jeweled, and apparently care-free. Also the house was a comfortable and luxurious abode. Not such a horrible object lesson, if you should ask me.



The "little girl" herself—one of them—starts to her doom by way of allowing herself to be "picked up" on the street by a youth of ingratiating manner.

Our pure and usual little girl, who leaves home with her mother's kiss on her lips, could no more be "picked up" than—well, if mother knows her business, she couldn't be picked up, that's all—or the chances are at least ten to one that she wouldn't be. Of course, heredity influences many—but that's another question.

If the ultimate salvation of the girl who has slipped lies in the doing away with segregation—by all means let the lid be clamped down; but don't you think when it comes right down to brass tacks that the responsibility for her fallen sister lies with good women—those good women who lift their skirts and pass with unseeing eyes the girl who "has a bad name"?

As I see it, the only hope for "the little girl next door" lies in the dawn of worldwide charity of women for women. That would bring results. The emotional outbursts of politicians sweet and pure only salve one sore spot. They do not prevent the spread of the trouble.

THE popular vote this week was for Donald Hall of the Vitagraph company. He is always to be depended on for his reliable ability in spectacular acting. Mr. Hall is an Englishman and was born in Nurree, N. A. P., India, on the 14th of August, thirty-seven years ago. He received his education in London. Before entering pictures he was on the stage. He was identified principally with musical comedies. He has been in pictures for three years and has played only with the Vitagraph company. In appearance he is five feet eight inches tall, weighs 170 pounds, has gray-brown hair and gray eyes. He is an outdoor man and especially fond of golf and swimming. The picture which most of us like him best in is, I imagine, "The Christian." He is not married. We asked him if he danced and his answer was: "Not this new rot—No!"

THE CASE OF PARIS GREEN.

[Nutty Novel.]

By Gordon Seagrove.

CHAPTER II.

Paris Green's first day in the studio was one of excitement. Her eyes popped out of her head or what there was of it. There were so many things she had never seen on the farm.

"Can you act?" asked Mr. Whoosh, the director, who had persuaded her to go into the movies.

"No," answered Paris, "but I'm sure I can."

"Everybody feels the same way," answered he. "But fear not, we will teach you."

Thereupon he led her to a high bridge. Above it was the sky. Underneath it was the water. On either side was land.

"Jump off!" he commanded. Paris obeyed. Somehow, although it was a 200 foot drop, she had absolute confidence in Mr. Whoosh. When they picked her up Mr. Whoosh was smiling. Then he led her to the railroad track.

"Lie down on the tracks," he said kindly. Paris did as she was told. In one minute the fast mail would be along. Paris could scarcely suppress a little cry of delight. It was all so new and strange.

When the train had run over her Paris was picked up unharmed and taken up in a balloon. When 64,000 feet up Mr. Whoosh cried "Now!" and Paris leaped overboard. The air whistled past her ears. But Paris enjoyed it. She had always been an outdoor girl.

When she reached the earth she was rather disappointed that the journey had ended so abruptly. Admiring men gathered around her, applying bandages and giving praise.

"Now," said Mr. Whoosh, "you are a great actress."

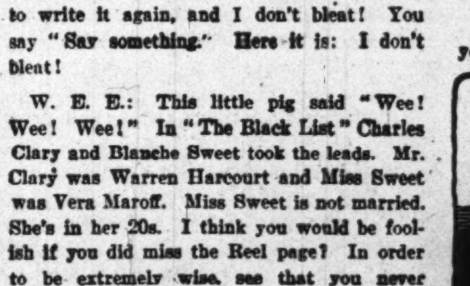
MAE TINEE'S ANSWERS TO MOVIE FANS
"ASK ME! ASK ME!"

MY INQUISITIVE FRIEND: You are so complimentary I gladly forgive you for being inquisitive—since you seem to think forgiveness necessary. I am glad you wish I could have half of the paper for all my own, but I must say I could not echo the wish. Just think of all the work that would mean! B-r-r! B-r-r-r! Beverly Bayne is with the Metro company; Lillian Walker and Maurice Costello are with Vitagraph; Blanche Ring is with Morosco; Mabel Normand and Irene Hunt are with Triangle; Billie Burke, Kleine; Ethel Barrymore, Metro, and Winnifred Kingston, Pallas. Y'wekkum.

OLD TIMER: I am mighty sorry you have had to wait so long for an answer, but you know there are so many questions to get answered that each must be taken in its turn. Arthur Johnson is dead. No, I have never heard of the other actor you mentioned. Henry Walthall is still with Essanay. Edwin August is with the World Film company. Indeed, I was only too glad to receive this letter from you and I do hope you will write again some time. It is pleasant to know that "old timers" are "present timers" as well.

OHN: Johnny musty gettee more votes than anybody elsee to gettee him fablets picthur in framee pubbee favor.

WORRIED ANNE: It is a difficult thing to eat lobster gracefully, Worried Anne, so if I were you I do not believe I'd be sending any of those delicacies to Mr. Bushman. Him might dettum face dirty!



REMEMBER YOUR COMPLEXION, F. X.

HENRI: I don't bleat! I never bleated in my life, and if you asked me three times before I ask you to ask me once again. I always answer my correspondents. Probably you didn't give any name on your question or your question had been asked and answered so many times before that I did not think it necessary to write it again, and I don't bleat! You say "Say something." Here it is: I don't bleat!

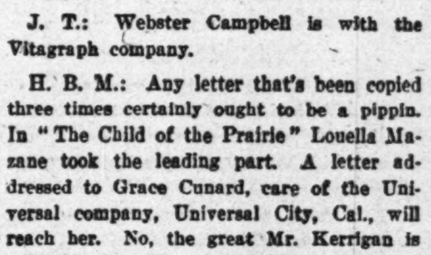
W. E. E.: This little pig said "Wee! Wee! Wee!" In "The Black List" Charles Clary and Blanche Sweet took the leads. Mr. Clary was Warren Harcourt and Miss Sweet was Vera Maroff. Miss Sweet is not married. She's in her 20s. I think you would be foolish if you did miss the Reel page? In order to be extremely wise, see that you never miss it.

GOLDY: I am glad you didn't wait until I was dead to tell me you like my page. It is a perfect shame I cannot enlighten you regarding the grand opera stars, but, you see, I am supposed to be a motion picture specialist, and motion picture specialists are supposed to know nothing whatever about the opera. I refer you to our musical critic. The only time an actor's salary is a secret is when he is not getting enough to brag about.

SAL K.: No, Sal, I never get tired. The cast of "Gloria's Romance" is as follows: Gloria Stafford, Billie Burke; Dr. Royce, Henry Kolker; Richard Freneau, David Powell; Pierpont Stafford, M. T. Carlton; David Stafford, William Roselle; Judge Freeman, Henry Weaver; Lois Freeman, Jule Power, and Gloria's governess, Harriette Sterling. No trouble at all. Write again some time, won't you?

M. N.: No, Francis Ford is not married to Grace Cunard. Her picture has appeared in the Frame. Carlyle Blackwell is with the Equitable company. He is married. Whom do I think the most beautiful actress in movieland? Tell me first who you think is. Thomas Chatterton plays opposite Anna Little in most of her pictures. Earle Williams is not married. You are vurr, vurr welcome.

JOHN: I never heard that it was necessary to play leap frog before one could become a motion picture actor. Of course, the more physically fit one is the better chance he stands of winning out in any line of work. Play leap frog if you want to.

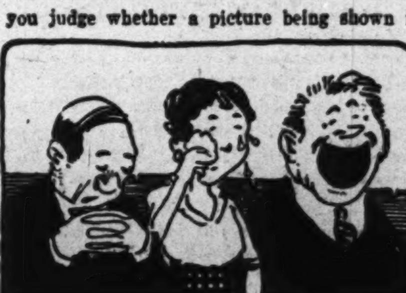


A DISGUSTED MOVIE FAN: I am vurr sorry you are so vurr tired of having me say vurr, but I can't vurr well help it, because I am vurr used to it now. Vurr sorry to disoblige you. Billie Burke is in her 20s. "Gloria's Romance" is the serial in which she is appearing. She was seen before in "Peggy." You are vurr, vurr wekkum.

J. T.: Webster Campbell is with the Vitagraph company.

H. B. M.: Any letter that's been copied three times certainly ought to be a pippin. In "The Child of the Prairie" Louella Mazane took the leading part. A letter addressed to Grace Cunard, care of the Universal company, Universal City, Cal., will reach her. No, the great Mr. Kerrigan is still unhampered by the bonds of matrimony. I cannot send you my picture, because I haven't any picture to send, but, that's no reason why you shouldn't send me one of yours, I'd dearly love to have it. Not a bit tired, H. B. M. You bet your life I'll write to you personally if you will send me a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Yes, if ever I am over there, I certainly will call on you.

THEATER MANAGER—How should you judge whether a picture being shown is a success? I'll tell you. If they snore it's a sedative. If they get sore it's a menace. If they weep it's either a decided failure or success. If they laugh it's a sure fire hit. Make 'em laugh!



D. P. E.: In regard to your letter, my dear Mr. D. P. E., I am afraid I shall have to continue to ask you to ask me. Surely you can see it would be far from diplomatic for me to reveal the secrets you ask me to. I assure you, however, I do appreciate your appreciation. May this page not depreciate in order that you can continue to appreciate.

ME: I am printing the answer to your question just as soon as ever I can. Grace Cunard and Francis Ford have been identified with the Universal company for many years. Grace Cunard is not married. Francis Ford has been, I believe. Beverly Bayne is in her 20s.

SYNOPSIS.

Sixteen years old, with Royce, a young doctor, ready to fall in love with her, the gay life of Palm Beach all around her and she forbidden to participate in it by her stern millionaire papa—that's Gloria. She kicks over the traces one night, steals her brother's car to prevent him riding with Lois Freeman, who she thinks is deceiving him, wrecks it, and finds herself lost in the everglades. Her father posts $5,000 reward. Freneau, a broker, needs money. He starts search. So does Royce. Freneau finds Gloria in the Seminole village, courted by Katacalani, a brave. The brave drives him off. A moment later Royce appears. He fights Katacalani—beats him. While Royce fights, Freneau sneaks in and carries Gloria back to her father and accepts the reward and all the praise.

(Copyright: 1916: By Adelaide M. Hughes.)

CHAPTER XII.

NEVER before in all her luxurious young life had Gloria encountered the slightest hardship. The most exquisite of the niceties of existence had been hers as regularly as the breath she drew. So she had wearied of them and rebelled. And now she had found that adventure was not altogether pleasant, either. A primeval jungle inhabited by a primeval people was, to say the least, distinctly uncomfortable.

It had been a busy day for one young girl. Within twenty-four hours she had stolen her brother's automobile, wrecked it in the waves. explored the Everglades, and endured Indian captivity. She had had her first proposal of marriage—and from an Indian chief! For the first time she had wanted to die. For the first time she had fainted. She was rather proud of that—it was so nice and old fashioned to faint. Also, she had been rescued—and by such a handsome man! And so modest he was about it!

Gloria felt it especially lucky that since she had to be rescued fate had been polite enough to select a good looking rescuer for her. The more she studied Mr. Freneau the better she liked him. He had a nice name, too—a nice, marriageable name.

The only fly in the ointment was the bad behavior of Dr. Royce. She had thought him charming. But now he sulked and moped. He did not want even to come along back to Palm Beach in the big motor that had brought her father and brother down to the edge of the Everglades. But her father made him get in.

Fortunately there were long dustcoats in the car to cover Gloria's squaw costume and Dr. Royce's disreputable wreck of evening dress. Mr. Freneau was spick and span. He was like a hero in a play or a novel. He could save a heroine from frightful danger and not spot a collar or rumple a cuff.

Dr. Royce was a sight: muddy, black and blue, his clothes full of holes and himself full of aches and bruises. The knuckles of his left hand were bleeding. He nursed them as if they were broken, but he did not mention that he had smashed them on the jawbone of a knife brandishing Indian while Freneau was stealing Gloria and the credit for her rescue and even her affections.

Later he got out to take back the motor he had borrowed without asking.

Dr. Royce was glum because he did not know just what he ought to do. He was confronted with a duty that he could not solve. It was like some obscure disease, hard to diagnosticate.

To speak up and denounce Freneau as a liar and thief was impossible. Royce had no proof that Freneau had played either the cad or the coward. He knew only that Freneau must have seen him battling with the Indian, and a decent man would have come to the assistance of a fellow white. Even if Freneau had felt that he ought to put Gloria in the boat first, he might have come back to help Royce. But Freneau had left Royce to his fate. That was ugly.

Royce heard Pierpont Stafford say to Freneau: "My boy, you've earned the $5,000 reward offered. You've earned a million dollars!"

Now Royce felt that he understood. Freneau had been coaxed into the Everglades by that $5,000 lottery prize. He had won it: and it looked as if Freneau were expecting to win Gloria's love in the bargain. For Gloria was simply devouring him with her eyes.

Royce knew little about Freneau, and that little was not to his advantage. Freneau neglected his office, but neglected no opportunity for a love affair. Dr. Royce had come to Palm Beach as the private physician of old Judge Freeman, and he had abundant opportunity to see the influence of Freneau on the judge's daughter, Lois. It was not a wholesome influence. Royce dreaded the look of adoration in Gloria's eyes as they dwelt on Freneau. But what could Royce do? He could not order Mr. Stafford not to pay Freneau the reward. He could not boast of his own deeds. So he kept silence.

CHAPTER XIII.

On the long ride back to Palm Beach they passed the spot where Gloria had left her brother's racing car in the ocean.

David grew angry and wanted to know what Gloria was going to do about getting him another car. She laughed at that. Her father did not allow her much spending money. She was not buying motor presents with what she got. But when Pierpont saw the big waves sprawling over the car and imagined what danger Gloria had escaped he had not the heart to rebuke Gloria. He said:

"If you'll behave yourself, David, I'll buy you a new car. It's worth a hundred of them to have the child safe."

"You're a very nice dad," said Gloria. "And I promise you I'll never run away in the Everglades or elope with a Seminole again."

But that was no proof that she might not run into just as great danger in so-called civilization.

When they reached the Royal Poinciana Gloria passed through a throng of welcoming friends, and Freneau received congratulations innumerable. Royce sneaked off to his room and plunged into a hot bath, treated his wounds as best he could, shaved, and put on fresh clothes.

Then he strolled out to order a new evening dress in a hurry from a Palm Beach tailor. He met Freneau, carrying his honors jauntily. Royce went to him and held him skewered with his eyes as he said:

"Look here, Freneau, haven't you a little something to say to me?"

Freneau colored a trifle, but he stared back at Royce without discomfort and he laughed no less easily than usual:

"Why, no, old man; nothing that I know of—except that I suppose I ought to feel sorry that you arrived too late. But I can't feel sorry. I didn't even know you were there."

Royce glared at him, then laughed harshly and said:

"The diagnosis in your case is clear. You are hopelessly infected with yellow fever; but you are immune to all honorable sentiments. Don't lose your head, though; and don't try any of your tricks on little Gloria Stafford."

Freneau laughed again, a more ugly laugh this time: "That seems to me to be Miss Stafford's business, and certainly none of yours."

"I'm going to make it mine," said Royce.

CHAPTER XIV.

Pierpont Stafford was overjoyed to have his lost ewe lamb restored to the fold, and he was childishly happy, till he realized that, after all, she was only temporarily his. She had escaped marrying the Seminole, but that did not mean that she would escape marrying somebody.

After Gloria had enjoyed all the redeeming influences of a tub, and a shampoo, and fine linen and a silk frock, she found that her interest in Mr. Freneau was as keen as ever. She even felt grateful to Lois Freeman for flirting with David. She sat out on the ledge of the veranda and day-dreamed.

When her father sauntered by and asked her what she was up to she answered:

"O, nothing! I'm just basking in the sun."

But when Pierpont came by that way a little later he found Dick Freneau basking in Gloria's most bewitching smile. They were Romeo and Juliet at Palm Beach, separated only by a low wall and a clump of rhododendrons. And Romeo was reaching across that with his walking stick.

It was the first time Pierpont had seen his child in a flirtation. He did not like her in that employment.

He was not afraid of Freneau, however. He went for him at once. He was about to begin with a stout, "How dare you speak to my daughter?" He paused, feeling that without Freneau's help he might have had no daughter to be spoken to.

Pierpont was used to accomplishing his ends with the weapon of the check book. He drew the weapon now and a fountain pen and said:

"By the way, there's that reward. It will give me great pleasure to pay it over."

He wrote after "Pay to the order of" the name "Richard Freneau" and the amount "Five thousand and no-hundredths dollars—$5,000.00." Freneau's fingers twitched to clutch the fortune, but his brain advised him to play for higher stakes. He put away the temptation with a proud smile.

"It is reward enough to have been able to be of service to Miss Stafford."

If Gloria had not adored him before, that chivalrous speech would have won her. It quite disarmed Pierpont. With his check book ruled out, his best weapon was gone. But he blustered all the harder: "My daughter is a little girl. I won't have her fooling time away with you. She must get her education first. She is hardly more than a child."

"O, papa!" Gloria cried.

Pierpont went on: "And she's going to school at once. We start north on the next train."

This was another thing again. Freneau quailed before the old capitalist's glare, which was as fierce as the Indian chief's had been. But Gloria was used to that glare. She knew the tender heart back of it, and she said:

"Then Mr. Freneau will come north, too, and we shall see each other all we want to. For we love each other, don't we, Mr. Freneau? Desperately! Don't we, Mr. Freneau?"

Mr. Freneau's answer was blurred.

Pierpont studied the two young people. He had his own opinion of Freneau. It was formed on brief acquaintance, but he was a judge of men.

"You love each other, eh? Desperately, too? Well, well! Now, look here," he said, after a quick balancing of his mind, "of course you both know that Gloria is too young for marriage. She must prepare herself for the solemn responsibilities of life and graduate at a good finishing school. Now, if you will wait, and not see each other or write to each other till then, and if you still love each other then, I will not oppose your marriage. I'll do all I can to make you happy. Is it a bargain?"

Freneau had not the courage to refuse the demand in the cold eyes of the millionaire. To be accepted as his son-in-law at any time was a marvelous promise. He hastened to give his own in exchange for it.

When he had promised there was nothing left for Gloria to do but promise also. She could not get married all by herself. It takes two to make a marriage—or any other quarrel.

She sat on the edge of the veranda and daydreamed

"For five years, then," said Pierpont grimly, "you promise not to bother each other or speak or write—for five years."

"I promise!" said Freneau quickly.

"From tomorrow," said Gloria with equal grimness.

"The train leaves very shortly," said Pierpont, and led her in to superintend the packing.

Freneau walked away in a daze. Yesterday he was a broker's clerk. Today he was the son-in-law elect of one of the country's wealthiest men. What were five years to him?

Five years sounded unimportant to Gloria, too, at the moment. She would love that young man forever. Five years were a small part of a forever, and he was such a wonderful man that she really ought to prepare herself to be worthy of him.

She wished that she might have had one dance with him, however, or one moonlight conversation. She had not had five minutes' chat with him since the rescue. Even in the dugout there had been a stupid Indian looking on.

She did not help in the packing with much grace. There was one consolation. Her father was going to send her to school. That meant an escape from her demon governess and those lonely hours of study and recitation. She would have girls of her own age for fellows.

At the railroad station she was not surprised to find Mr. Freneau waiting. She was enraged to have her father break in on her first few words and drag her on the train. She slipped away and came back to finish what she had started. Then the governess appeared and hauled her aboard. She stole back down the steps once more, only to have her father storm down after her and carry her off bodily. Then the train started, and she had no chance to say the million and a half things a young woman would naturally have to say to her fiancé on leaving him for five years.

CHAPTER XV.

Freneau felt rather lonely, too, when he saw the long train dwindle away northward. He wondered when he would see Gloria again. She was a sweet little thing, in spite of her money. She was prettier than any girl he had ever met.

Five years is a long time, and many things can happen in the eighteen hundred odd days and nights. Lois Freeman went north on the same train with Gloria, as did her father and that hound of a Royce.

Freneau hated Royce, for we rarely like the people whose property we have stolen. Freneau would have given the impudent Royce a sound beating, too, if he had not seen the way Royce attacked that poor Indian and knocked him senseless. He had no desire to go against those same sledge hammer fists. He was glad that Royce was gone. He hoped that he might never see him again.

Gloria was gone and Lois was gone, but an attractive youth like Freneau was not left alone in such multitudes of women as gather at Palm Beach with no more serious purpose than escaping the cold drafts of the north and the torments of boredom in the south.

He spent so much time gathering the applause from fair women that when the season closed at Palm Beach his firm gave him his full liberty. He had done nothing, they wrote, to encourage them to pay him further salary. He had to go next to places where his fame had not reached—where he had only his winning personality as capital. He found men rather hard to impress, but there was always some woman foolish enough to believe in his beautiful eyes.

Some of them were rich and some of them were as poor as poor Nell Trask, the daughter of Gideon Trask, a canal boat captain. He met her in a cheap boarding house, where he paid his landlady nothing much except his attentions and some extravagant compliments.

He behaved very shabbily in his affair with Nell Trask, and deserted her cruelly because, at a critical time for her, he got a tip on the market and sold it to a broker, who gave him a share of the proceeds.

He was so tired of poverty that he went to New York and anticipated his promise. But Gloria and her father were abroad on a summer vacation, and Freneau was thrown on his own resources. He flirted himself into another tip and sold that to a broker named Frank Mulry.

Mulry knew the value of such a partner, and he encouraged Freneau to learn from financiers' wives and daughters what could not be learned otherwise. In the course of time Freneau made himself so important to Mulry that he was taken into the firm as a silent partner. At length, through a most confidential tip, he got in as a sort of stowaway in a piratical raid on the market and cleaned up so much money that Mulry was glad to take him into full partnership as the senior member of the firm.

When he saw the legend, "Freneau & Mulry, Stocks and Bonds, Members of the Stock Exchange," on the door and on the letter heads, Freneau felt so important that he did not care what Pierpont Stafford or his daughter thought of him. He was the young Napoleon. One of these days he would buy and sell Pierpont Stafford.

His success enlarged his acquaintance, his attractiveness, and his temptations.

He was on the crest of the wave when he met Lois Freeman again. He was studying the diamond crop in a jeweler's window and wondering just what peace offering he should buy for a certain person whom he had rendered violently jealous when who should step out of the shop but Lois Freeman!

Each stared at the other with eyes ready for flirtation. Each recognized the other as a former Palm Beach comber.

"Why, Mr. Freneau!" was Lois' exclamation. Her language was not so brilliant as her eyes.

"Why, Miss Freeman!" was his equally brilliant answer. The same thing was true of him.

"But I'm no longer Miss Freeman," said she.

"I'm still Mr. Freneau," said he.

"I'm now Mrs. Stafford."

"Stafford! Stafford? The name sounds familiar," said Freneau.

"Surely you haven't forgotten David Stafford, your old rival for my young affections?"

"Of course not," said Freneau. "I've never forgiven him for cutting me out. How long have you been married?"

"O, for an eternity—two years."

"Really? You don't look it at all! But that's long enough for you to come and take tea with me somewhere, isn't it?"

"I suppose so. Anyway, I'm dead tired and in need of a pick-me-up. It's so stupid shopping all day. And my husband has already been married long enough to be quite frank about my extravagance. But what else is there for me? He is at the office all day; and he travels a good deal. He's ambitious to outdo his father in business."

"So am I," said Freneau.

They were buzzing away merrily when they found seats in a tearoom where dancing was the main business, with tea as an excuse. Freneau did not even take tea. He was not particular about excuses. He urged Lois to dance with him. But she saw several people she knew, and she declined. Also, she slipped away early. She knew enough to be elusive.

They met again, however, at a less conspicuous tearoom. Then she danced with him. She told him he fox trotted divinely well. He told her she fox trotted devilishly well. When an unscrupulous bachelor and the frivolous wife of an ambitious and indulgent man once begin a dance there is no telling how far it will lead them. At least there is no telling in circumspect print.

And all this while Gloria was cherishing her ideal of Freneau and working hard to make herself worthy of him! And her brother was cherishing a trust in Lois and working hard to give her the luxuries she exacted with increasing greed.

CHAPTER XVI.

Five years was a long time for Gloria, too; but not so long as she told herself. Her girl soul did not feel the emotional demands of a grown woman. She could put Freneau's picture on her bureau and find satisfaction in paying it worship.

In the school she had discovered a new world. She fought her way to the captaincy of a basketball team as if it were the presidency of an Amazonian republic. She learned to fence well and to box a little. She even took an interest in some of her text books.

Many and many a time she told to her breathless girl audiences the bloodcurdling story of her harrowing experiences in the Everglades and the tremendous glory of her rescuer's valor. The magnitude of Freneau's feat may have grown a little with retelling, but his photograph was always convincing proof to the envious audience.

Gloria had few sorrows of importance, beyond the occasional disappointment her examination records gave her. The chief of her disappointments was her brother's marriage to Lois. She never had liked Lois and had never understood her charm.

Lois had taken little interest in winning the approval of women. She had played a part in winning even David's serious interest. She never cared for him, but she could not resist the wealth and prestige of his name. She was bitterly disappointed in him when after the honeymoon was over he expressed his unwillingness to live on his father's money and vowed that he would earn his own way by his own energy. The life of travel and gayety that Lois had planned was taken from her. She drifted into the maelstrom of men and women whose one hunt was pleasure, whose career was killing time. Freneau was Lois' type to a T.

Gloria had a stanch little heart and she kept her word to her father. She kept faith, too, with her fiancé five years removed. She fell into the habit of talking to his photograph. When she was tempted to forget that she was a solemnly betrothed young person she would find strength in his image to be austere and to deny herself many of the gayeties of the school or of her companions in the gorgeous resting places where she spent her vacations.

It was a quaint and bitter irony that the eyes in Freneau's photograph should have had so pious an influence, while his own eyes were devoted to casting such evil spells.

Unconsciously Lois revenged her husband on Freneau, for while Freneau was causing Lois to forget her duties to the partnership she had entered into with David Stafford her fascinations led Freneau to neglect his duties to his partnership with Frank Mulry. He spent time and money on Lois that should have been devoted to the intricate stratagems—not to say treasons and spoils—of Wall street.

He and Mulry in the flush of their early successes had spread out—had established branch offices in Albany, Buffalo, Cleveland, Detroit, Chicago, St. Louis, and Pittsburgh. While the tide set their way these branches served as so many hands to gather in shekels. But when the hard times came upon the financial world they served as so many mouths to feed. The office of Freneau & Mulry became one of those dismal places where the pay roll is a weekly agony and where the watchword is "everything going out and nothing coming in."

When Freneau at last awoke to realize that bankruptcy instead of plutocracy was likely to be his portion he turned back to his work with a desperate energy. And now Lois found that he was as fierce an office man as her husband. He left her to her own devices. He had engagements when she was lonely.

She naturally imputed his neglect to some other charmer. She could not believe him guilty of overwork. She grew jealous and their meetings were stormy. She kept his telephone busy to make sure that he was at his desk. She began to annoy him. He wished to be rid of her, but she would not be jilted.

It was during this crisis that Gloria marked off the last month of her five years' ordeal. She was ambitious enough to go on and finish her course and get her diploma. She compressed her last year of schooling into half a year and graduated all alone in midwinter.

She dashed into her room at college for the last time, with her solemn mortarboard askew on her head, her somber black gown flying from her shoulders, and in her hand her parchment diploma (in Latin that she could nearly translate). She looked like a little Portia for a moment.

She threw her diploma in air and her mortarboard after it. She whipped off her black robe and began to juggle school books, letting them fall where they fell. She danced a jig over her scholarly past and made haste to pack her things and dart out to meet her future. "Future" was her spelling of "Freneau."

The journey to New York from school was as long as the journey to New York from Palm Beach had been years ago; only then she had been traveling away from her romance, now toward it.

When her father met her at the train she hugged him almost to suffocation, then asked him how dear Mr. Freneau was the last time he saw him.

"The last time I saw dear Mr. Freneau was at Palm Beach," said Pierpont, who had almost forgotten his name and had hoped that Gloria had forgotten it entirely.

As soon as she reached the house on Riverside drive and embraced the old servants and shook hands with the new Gloria took her father into his library and asked him for Mr. Freneau's telephone number. She had found "Freneau & Mulry" in the book already, and she said, "Do you suppose that that Mr. Mulry's Freneau is my Mr. Freneau?"

"I don't know, I'm sure," Pierpont grumbled. "But it wouldn't be very correct to telephone a busy man, would it?"

"I suppose not," Gloria admitted. "Where's a pen? I'll write him."

"How long has it been since you wrote him last?" said Pierpont anxiously.

"Why, I've never written him at all," Gloria answered, shocked. "I promised, didn't I?"

Pierpont kissed her brow with a profound pride. Then he ventured to say, "Don't you think it would be nicer if you waited for him to look you up?"

Gloria gnawed the end of the penholder a moment, and then sighed with all the impatience of youth in the shackles of conventionality. "I suppose so." She flung down the pen and wondered how she could manage delicately to attract Mr. Freneau's attention without seeming to.

"By the way," said Pierpont, "there's a gala performance at the Metropolitan Opera house tonight, a special benefit for some war relief. Would you like to go?"

"You bet!" cried Gloria with schoolgirl elegance.

At about that time Freneau was just putting down the telephone in his office. Lois had called him to say that her husband was taking her to the benefit and she hoped that he would be there. She had something immensely important to tell him. Everything she had to tell him was immensely important nowadays to her—and immensely unimportant to him.

The thing that agitated Lois was her knowledge that Gloria had come back to New York and was still in love with the memory of Freneau. Lois was in an anguish of fear and jealousy and she wanted to compel Freneau to swear that he would not forsake her for Gloria

Freneau was oblivious of this, but he had no intention of keeping his promise to Lois till Mulry, who had overheard Freneau's end of the conversation, said: "Come along. I got stung for a couple of tickets. You can have one of them. We might meet somebody who might give us a line on the market."

So the Romeo-like Freneau went with his Falstaffian partner. They haunted the promenade of the boxholders, wishing to be seen in expensive company.

Glancing over the balustrade, Freneau caught sight of Lois mounting the stairs with her husband. She was looking for him, and he smiled back at her with stinted grace. He did not notice that on the other stairway of the big double zigzag Pierpont Stafford was coming up with a vision of young loveliness at his side. He did not see Gloria see him. He did not see her clutch her father's arm and almost swoon with delight.

He might have observed all this and still not have suspected who the girl was, for the Gloria he had found in squaw costume in the Everglades, the Gloria who had exchanged vows with him on the veranda of the Poinciana, the Gloria who had waved farewells to him from the receding train five years ago, had all but receded from his memory. What recollection he had of her was of a little 16 year old thing with her hair down her back and an air of almost childish immaturity.

The Gloria who marched up the broad steps of the Metropolitan was a young lady of 21, with her hair up, her head full of knowledge, and her features changed as the bud is changed when it becomes a rose. Her costume was the latest thing from Paris, still Paris in spite of the war.

Gloria could hardly climb the steps to the level of Freneau. Her father did not know him, but she did. She left her father's side and hurried to Freneau's. He did not hear her or know that she was at his elbow, trembling with rapture and trying to keep from crying his name aloud and seizing him by the arm that had saved her from the Indians. She coughed and he did not hear. At last she ventured the terrific deed of touching his sleeve with her finger tip. He turned and she murmured:

"Mr. Freneau, I believe."

He turned, saw that a most exquisite creature had addressed him, wondered who under the sun she was, lifted his hat, made a violent pretense at remembering her perfectly, having met her just the day before, and exclaimed: "Why, hello! I'm so glad you got here."

He put out his hand, but hers fell away before he could clasp it. She had thrust her arm into her father's elbow and hurried him along toward the door of their box while Freneau whirled and stared.

Mulry stared, too, and muttered: "Good Lord, who's the new peach with old Pierpont!"

"It must be his daughter; it's Gloria!" Freneau gasped.

"His daughter! Do you know her?"

"Know her!" Freneau laughed. "Well, rather! I'm engaged to her in a way."

"Engaged in a way!" Mulry repeated. "Well, marry her quick. Her old man's money will come in mighty handy."

Freneau leaned against the balustrade thinking so hard and recasting his plans so rapidly and with such enthusiasm that Lois not only touched his arm but pinched it fiercely before he noticed her. Then he stared at her with a cold indifference that verified her wildest fears.

Meanwhile Gloria was sitting in miserable splendor on a little gold chair in a box like a prison cell to her, and she was batting her eyes fast to shake away the tears that came pellmell. She was wringing her little white gloved hands and trying not to sob aloud: "He doesn't remember me! He doesn't remember me!"

IN MASK AND MUFTI by BERTON BRALEY

Her Job Was to Pound Out Letters. But Even the Most Commonplace Typist May Have Dreams. And Hers Were About the Fellow in the Big Red Car. Maybe Some Time He Would Propose—Well a Girl Can Have Her Dreams Can't She?

HELEN COLLINS sat at her typewriter in the office of the Acme Carburetor company, on the fifteenth floor of the Monolithic building, and pounded out, or clattered out, as you will, the sixteenth form "personal" letter of the morning. She had been writing those form letters for three months, and expected to go on writing them for at least three months more. Then she would start on a new series.

It was dreary work, and it is small wonder that Helen paused in it now and then to gaze abstractedly out across the wide court on which the Acme offices faced. Often, indeed, she gazed without pausing. She knew the letter by heart and the Blake stenographic school taught the touch system.

To the eye Helen was a pretty little typist with black hair and a red, red mouth, as pretty as most working girls, no prettier than many. But perhaps because she had always lived in commonplace quarters and in a decently fed but uneventful way, and because the nearest thing she had ever seen to a mountain was the Masonic temple, her dreams had all to do with homes on the lake front and shooting lodges in the Adirondacks or the Sierras. What her experience had lacked of splendor and spaciousness her fancies supplied.

Thus it happened that while she seemed to be hammering out form letters for the Acme Carburetor company, she was really living in another world, where Gouverneur Morris heroes, illustrated by Howard Chandler Christy, strode superbly about.

. . . .

Lately her dreams had been centering about the man who with his motor coat up to his ears and his cap down over them lay loosely but somehow gracefully on the back of his neck in a long, low, powerful red car that went "hough hough!" as it passed her nearly every evening at the corner where she waited for her trolley.

He drove that monster with such careless ease, his whole attitude was one of such indolent masterfulness, such lazy assurance, that her Gouverneur Morris heroes thereafter usually drove up to her lake front home or to her Adirondacks lodge in such a car and divested themselves of just such outer habiliments to reveal a lithe and graceful frame and a finely chiseled patrician face.

And this representative of all that wealth and birth and breeding meant would then, in the logical course of her dreams, make tempestuous but refined love to her amid her magnificent surroundings.

"Helen," she could hear the imaginary suitor saying, "Helen, I have philandered gayly amid a wilderness of women and escaped fancy free. Indeed, I have come to believe that no woman would ever stir my heart—and then I met you. And you—you have swept over me like a consuming flame, you have thrilled me with an overmastering passion—you have made me know that all the poets and the singers have sung of love is true. I love you, I love you, I love you."

And Helen would play for a moment with the soft loveliness of her gown, that gown which concealed yet revealed all the slim, willowy grace of her, and then look up into his eyes and answer: "It seems impossible to believe this could have come so suddenly to you, Horace, or Reginald, or Harold—" the names changed often—"we have known each other only a few days. How could you love me?"

But he would look deep, deep into her eyes and say: "And hasn't it come to you, too, dearest? Hasn't it? I see by your eyes it has——" And then—and then Helen would shiver deliciously and finish up the letter and put another one in.

. . . .

Occasionally her eyes would rest contemptuously on the figure of the young man in the offices straight across the court, who sat on a high stool and bent over a big book, or the man in the office below that who tried to flirt with her. Though she saw them daily, they were mere lay figures to her, figures she used chiefly as contrasts to the indolent young prince in the machine.

"Huh!" she would say to herself, somewhat unromantically, "what would those men know about making love to a woman the way he would do? I have a picture of that bookkeeper over there proposing. He'd say, 'Little one, I'm for you. Whaddy yuh say to getting tied up and renting a nice little flat?' That would be his style. And the masher down below would be worse."

Whereupon she'd forget the lay figures and go back to the prince, as she called him, and invent a new situation in which he and she played brilliant rôles of romance.

Miss Collins' excursion into her dream world had so affected her idea of values that she had little to do with folk of her own kind. Most of the young men who happened into her orbit found her a "cold proposition," and none of the other world took their places after they desisted. She wasn't really snobbish; she merely thought that the type of young clerks and office managers she met did not measure up to the standard as set by her day dreams. There were plenty of them who did, except in the wholly material sense, but youth is blind to inner worth and too prone to judge by unessentials.

Because of this attitude Miss Collins was a bit lonely, and was thrown upon her dreams and her books more than ever. It was with some surprise, therefore, that one night when she opened the door of the flat in which she and her mother and father lived, she found outside Miss Sadie MacGregor, who resided on the floor below, and who was a dress model at one of the very exclusive shops.

"O, Helen, dearie," she said, "will you help me out of a hole? Haliff's, where I work, was going to send me and my sister Mary to the Big Society masquerade tonight in oriental costumes—gee, they're wonderful stuff—to advertise the house. Mary and me didn't have to do a thing but just fluff around and dance and show off our dresses. Haliff has it fixed up with a couple of society dames that's broke to tell everybody where the dresses come from.

"Well, Mary's got so darn sick all of a sudden that she just can't go, and it's too late to get another model. You're pretty near a perfect thirty-six. Will you wear the dress—it's gorgeous, you'll love it—and go in Mary's place? It will be a great favor to me, honest it will."

"I—I can't," said Miss Collins. "I haven't any money—not enough, anyway."

"Money!" exclaimed Sadie, "you don't need any money of your own. Haliff has fixed us with the tickets. I don't know how he worked it, but he did, and he's given me a lot of expense money besides. And we're going in a taxi—and everything. Gee, you, with your high society manner, you could get away with it fine and make a big hit with the swells. Me, I'm pretty good at the lah-de-dah stuff myself when it's necessary. 'Re-ally, Mrs. De Morgan, it's simply astonishing how these pahvenus is crowding into society lately. One is constantly confronted with the most impossible people. It's astonishing, really.' How's that?" said Miss MacGregor, relapsing from the attitude of the extreme hauteur she had assumed. "O, we can get away with it all right! Please come."

Helen came.

"Whither away, fair denizen of the dusky east," said a voice close to her ear, as Helen, basely deserted by Sadie—when a tall monk suggested to the model that she dance with him—was wandering aimlessly amid the motley dressed crowd.

. . . .

"Come, turn not thy pink ear so coldly away from me, O, pearl of the seraglio. Thy garb is purple and shimmering silk, thy step is like to the step of the young gazelle, thy lips are like ripe pomegranates. My heart leaps at the vision of thee. I bow low before thee——" The voice materialized in front of Helen as a splendidly clad cavalier whose mouth smiled winningly under a black mask and whose eyes smiled, too, through the apertures in the satin.

"But I know you not, Sir Cavalier," said Helen.

"That need not matter," replied the man. "You may know all my life's history—my lineage, my occupation, and my bank account—all in good time. But for now let it suffice that thou appearest fair to me—and dance with me."

"Well, I don't know—all right!" Miss Collins decided suddenly, and was as suddenly swept into the young man's strong arms and out upon the dancing floor.

They danced together as only two beings who have youth and strength and joy of life within them can dance; danced until the music and the nearness of each other and the swirl of the other dancers and the wine of carnival went to their heads—and until they found themselves murmuring indistinct words and half breathed phrases to each other—danced, indeed, until they were wildly in love.

For the man's voice was the voice of the Gouverneur Morris hero to Helen, and his figure was that of the Christy illustration, and when, after the fifth dance, he drew her within the curtains of an alcove and kissed her, she kissed him with all the fervor and the warmth of her young heart.

Things move as fast as that sometimes, for when you've been dreaming for years and the dream suddenly comes to you in the flesh, when you've visioned romance all a circumscribed and humdrum existence, and it appears before you garbed in all the richness of courtly raiment and with the subtle lure and charm of masked mystery, when, in short, Prince Charming stands bowing before you and asks you to dance—all your repressions and reservations and conventions melt away, and you're just yielding and tender and loving and human. All this providing you are young and feminine and have dreamed dreams as Helen had. May heaven pity you if you have not.

After that beautiful surrender they danced again and again together, till, flushed with the exercise and the warm air of the ballroom, they slipped away into the open palm garden and found a little table almost invisible to the world without. Besides, it didn't matter, most of the world without was beginning to hunt little tables, too. As for Haliff, Helen forgot that she was only a model for his gown.

Prince Charming leaned across the table and half whispered: "Helen"—for that was the only name she had given him—"do you know that I have philandered gayly amid a wilderness of girls and escaped fancy free? Indeed, I had come to think that no woman would ever stir my heart—until I met you. And you—you have thrilled me with an overmastering passion; you have made me realize that all the poets and minstrels have said of love is true. I love you, I love you."

Helen played for a moment with the soft loveliness of her gown, which "concealed, yet revealed, all the slim grace of her," and then looked up into his eyes and said: "It's impossible to believe this could happen so soon to you, Henry; we—we have known each other only a few minutes. How—how could you love me?"

Just as she had dreamed it, so had it happened—thus far. Even almost to the words he said. But here the reality departed from the dream, for instead of looking deep into her eyes he bent over the little table and kissed her. Which she thought an improvement over the dream.

"Take off the mask, sweetheart, sweetheart," he breathed, "I want to see your face."

But perhaps because she feared to awake from her dream, perhaps because the flavor of mystery was sweet to her taste, she refused, nor would she let him take off his mask.

"This is—tonight," she said, softly. "tomorrow is—tomorrow, and daylight, and—the hard practical world. I'm Cinderella, and dawn will change me back to rags again, and when dawn comes you will not want a Cinderella with a face all cinders."

"Dawn or night or full afternoon," said the prince, "are all one to me—and that one is you, little princess in disguise. Let me come to see you tomorrow and we'll go out in my car."

"Is it a big red car?" asked Helen, breathlessly.

"Yes, it's a big red car," replied the cavalier, "a sixty horse power racer. And it sure can go. Why?"

"O, O, nothing," said Helen, "except that I like big red cars." She was on the verge of asking him if he ever drove uptown about the hour she left her work, but she dared not test her dream too far.

"Will you let me come to see you?" he urged again.

"Y—yes. Come tomorrow—Saturday—at half past three. Apartment 7—Main street." She kissed him swiftly and before he could follow her had dodged into the crowd, rushed to the cloakroom, and departed in a taxi.

That night her dreams, for the few short hours before she was to go to work again, were of one figure—his, and she discovered that where in the past she had strayed in splendid surroundings and luxurious palaces and spacious grounds, with the figure of the man always indistinct and nebulous, now the figure of the man stood out—and she had not thought of the surroundings.

From the office in the fifteenth floor of the Monolithic building she looked across the court as she had done a thousand times before to the young man bending over his high desk, and she thought:

"There he is, the poor mutt, footing up figures for eighteen per and with no more idea of the wonderful romance I have found than a policeman. How commonplace and humdrum he seems compared to the prince I met last night. I wonder, I wonder if he will come." And then she found she was gazing not across the court but beyond it, to Arcady, until the head clerk jacked her up for writing a line about the "Masked Prince Charming of Fairyland" in a form letter.

Across the court young Mr. Henry Harper hung up his auto coat which came up to his ears and the cap which came down to them. He yawned as he climbed on the stool at his high desk and took down the pen.

"I wish father'd cut out this working-my-way-up thing and slip me the partnership he promised," he observed. "I'm going to need it for me and Cinderella."

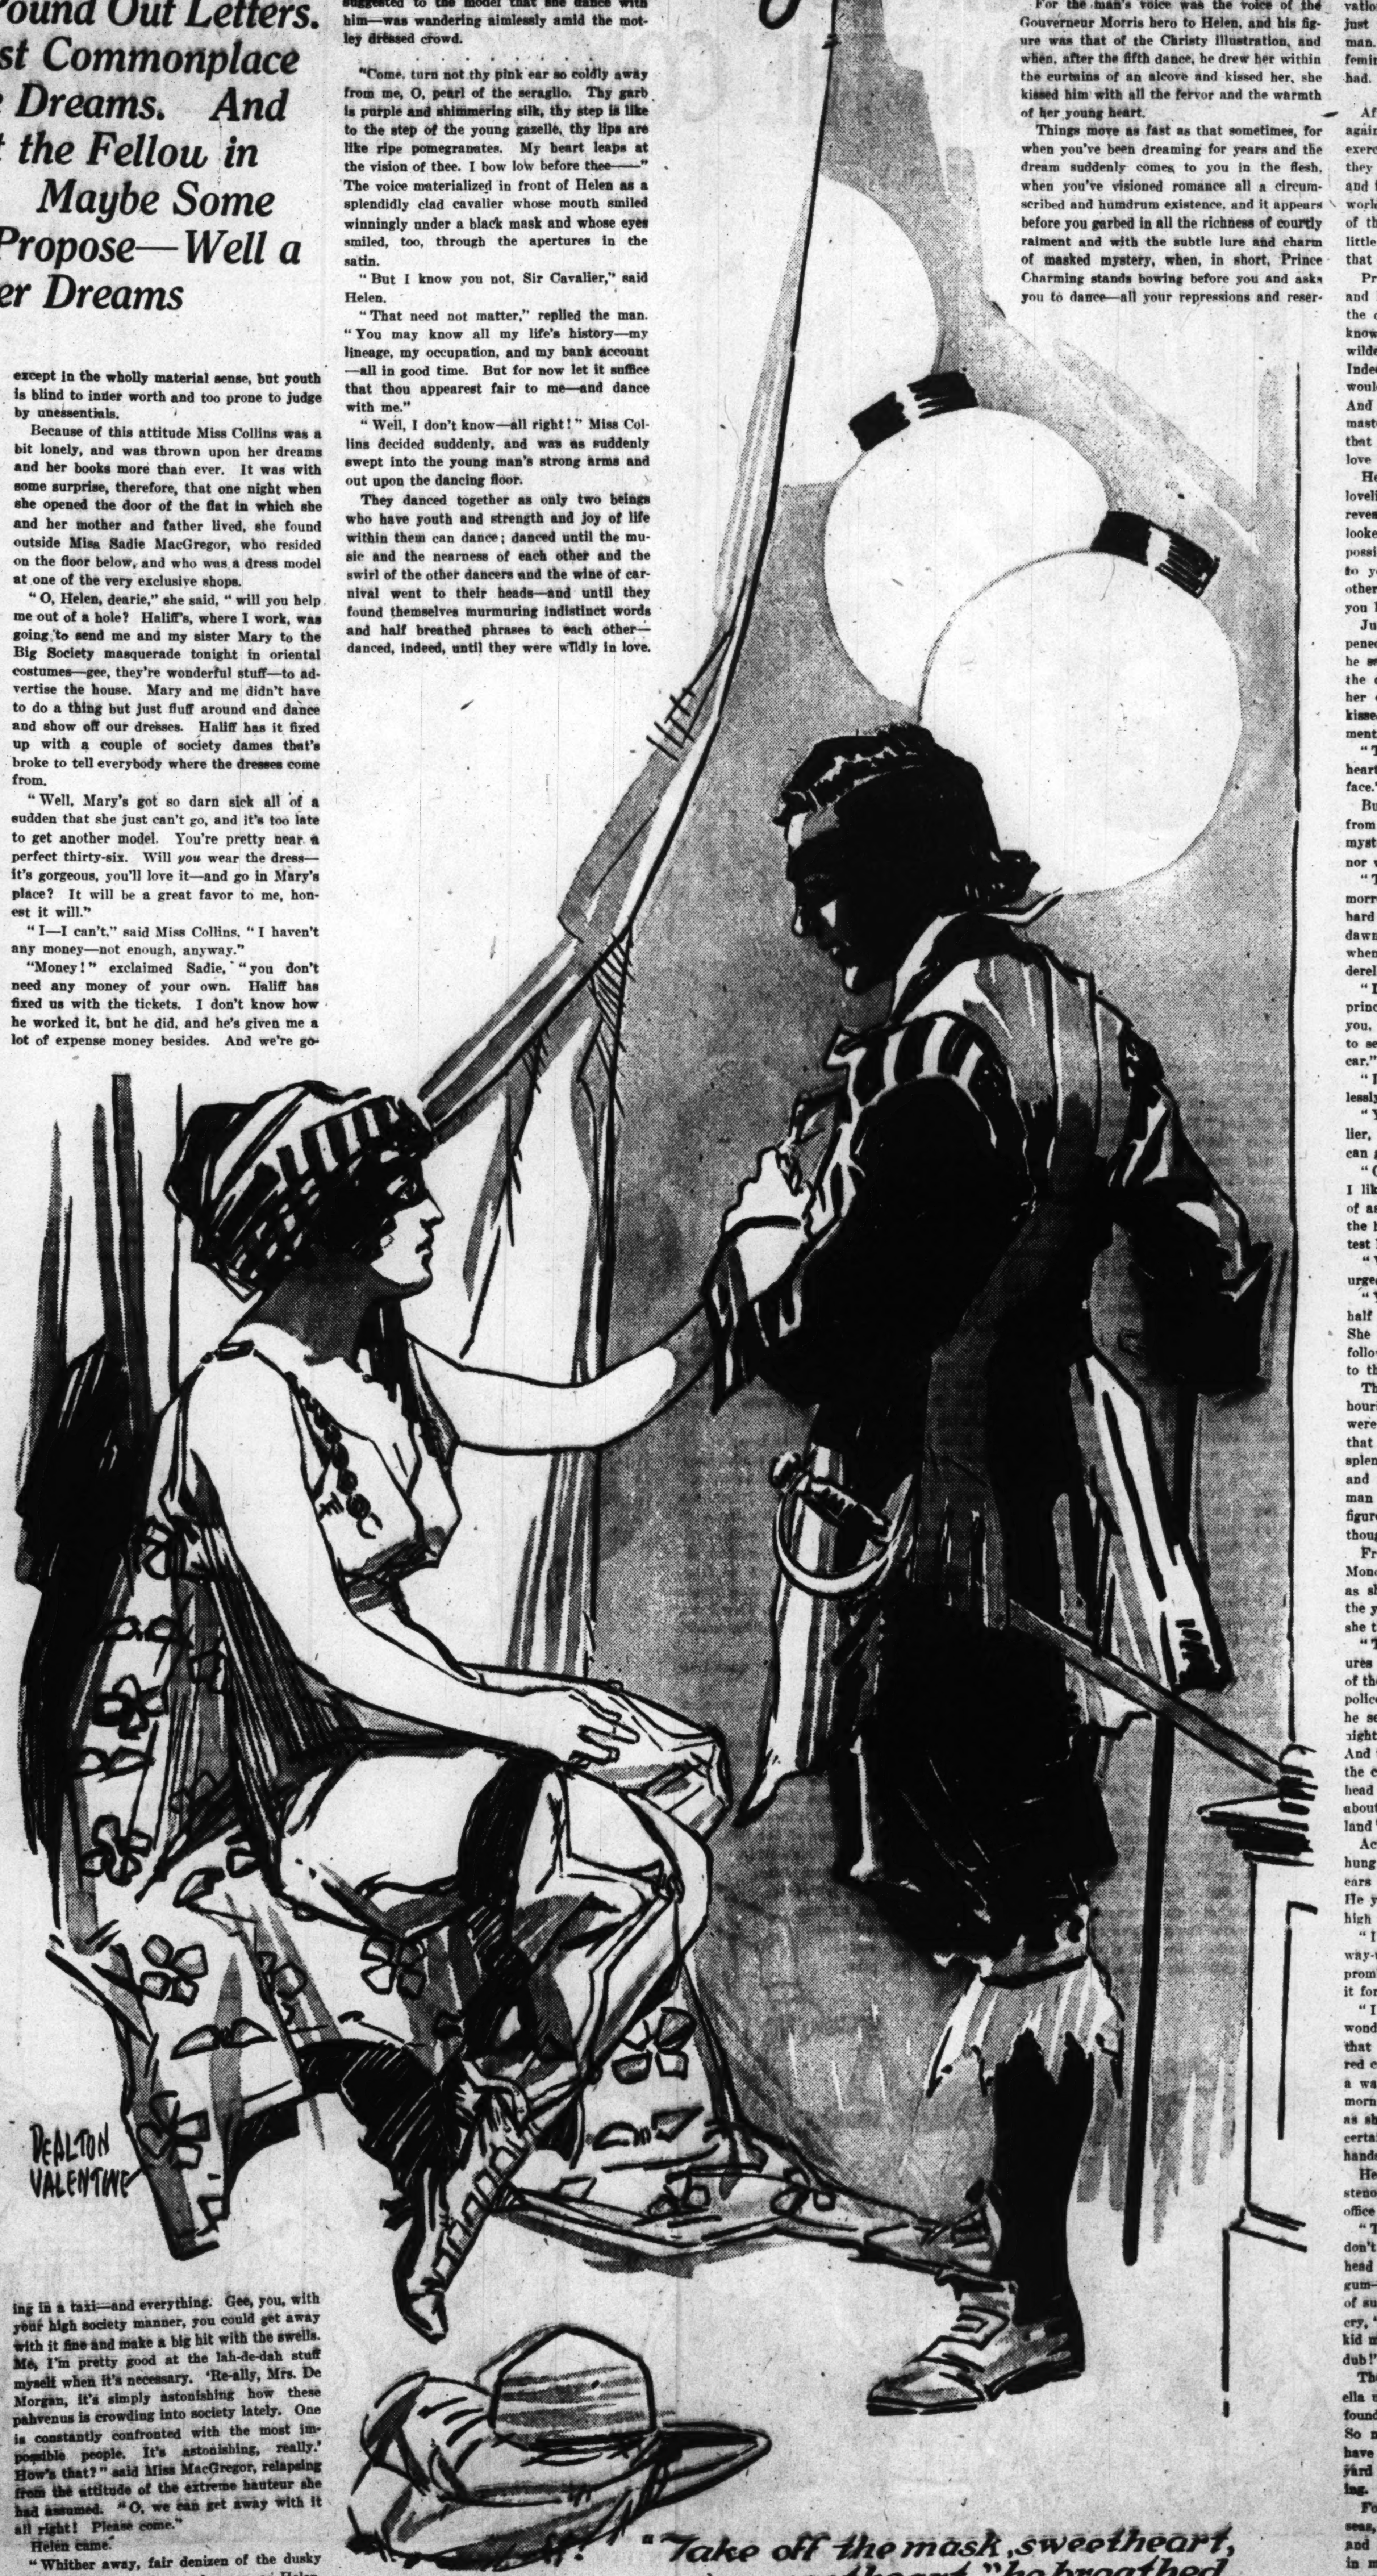
"I wonder who she is?" he pondered. "I wonder if she'll be there when I drive up in that big red car she talks about. I guess big red cars are a sort of dream to her instead of a way of ducking the jam in the street cars morning and night. I wonder if she's as pretty as she seemed. Cinderella," he mused, "you certainly are going to have a husband on your hands if I have anything to say about it."

He glanced across the courtyard at the stenographer he had seen so many times in the office opposite.

"The poor little automaton," he mused. "I don't suppose she ever had a thought in her head beyond dances and shows and candy and gum—and 'fellers.' I'll bet if she could hear of such a love as Cinderella's and mine she'd cry, 'Aw, say, tell that to Sweeney. You can't kid me that way!' Poor little dub, poor little dub!"

Then he forgot her and thought of Cinderella until the head bookkeeper came over and found an error of $6,890 in a $12,000 account. So might the prince and Cinderella of old have mused had they been across the courtyard from each other in a fifteen story building.

For we always look for romance across the seas, or across the continent, or in gala dress and masque, and it's seldom we recognize it in mufti right across the courtyard, footing up figures or tapping out form letters.



"Take off the mask, sweetheart, sweetheart," he breathed.

I WAS WITH THE CIRCUS—"SELLING CHERRIES" ON "THE COME OUT"

Says ONEY FRED SWEET

INSIDE the menagerie tent the sunlight filtered mellow through the canvas that billowed with the summer breeze beneath a noon sky. It was half an hour yet before the crowd would come squinting and exclaiming through the narrow, roped off lanes of the "main entrance." I would not be a part of that squinting and exclaiming throng. Leaning there on the white oilclothed counter of the "No. 1 candy stand," I was actually part of the world's greatest show.

I was waiting for the strange faces—waiting, fresh, white coated and sophisticated. I knew by first name the man in the red, gold braided coat who stood by the hay-munching elephants. Because of familiarity I scarcely glanced toward the "Lion Nubia Africa" or the "Tiger Royal Bengal India," pacing back and forth behind the iron bars of their crimson and gold cages that encircled the edge of the tent. Twice that morning strangers in the strange town had thrilled me with the query, "Where do you go from here?" Yes, sir, "I belonged with the show!"

Of course, I had been a bit homesick at first. "Si" Ogden and "Chick" Dailey and "Fatty" Smith, who had sold pink and green and blue honey coated popcorn and ice cream cones and balloons and fans and flying birds with the Ringling Brothers for so many seasons, had sized me up rather sarcastically. But Sid Rubien, who was boss of the whole thirty-one "candy butchers," and who had been right with the show for twenty-six years, had hired me, so I didn't give a dang how the rest of the bunch felt.

Sid hurt my feelings a little, though, by a remark he made when he came upon me drinking my third glass of orangeade. In tall, thick glasses that orangeade floated—in tall, thick, ice cold, moisture dripping glasses, that stood tempting and as methodically stationed as an army along one whole side of the oilcloth covered stand. The eyes might have their feast this day of days, but we were on hand to furnish accompanying gastronomic pleasures as well.

"What's the idea?" Sid remarked. "Still testing it to see if it's sweet enough? I hope that stomach of yours'll get filled up finally. I didn't hire you to eat my stuff; I hired you to sell it, and according to the line of talk you gave me, you're going to make the rest of the crew look like pikers. They ain't telling 'em any more over at the side show tent that there's 'plenty of time before the big show starts'; they'll be crowding in here pretty thick now."

* *

Before the Afternoon Performance.

You could still hear the band music over in the side show tent. The summer breeze was wafting the music after it had been strained through the canvas. At times the drums and the slide trombones seemed to be close in our ears; again they would grow faint as the shadows of the pennants on the yellowish roof above us were given an extra flutter. When we had arrived in town that morning there had been no acres of canvas tugging at the blue poles—just a stretch of vacant ground, with the blue grass and the dandelions and the ragweed nodding untrampled. Tights were now drying from guy ropes in the sun over behind the dressing room tent where the blue grass had waved; dandelions had been sprinkled over with sawdust for the arena of the "big top," and ragweed lay crushed under the hoofs of a giraffe.

We had arrived in town by sections. There must have been 600 of us in the long red train that carried the sleeping performers. I remembered how I had looked from my berth window out onto the vegetable gardens of the little towns, the gaping loungers on depot platforms, the coal sheds near the tracks that had been plastered weeks before with our flashing lithographs. I recalled how I had eaten back in the café car with Lucille, the daring western rider, beside me at the table; with "the Tybell sisters, aerial human butterflies," and "Flexible Schubert," the contortionist, just across the aisle. At one of our brief stops a Russian Cossack rider, a Japanese wire walker, and an Arabian acrobat had left the train to pick wild flowers along the right of way on the Indiana prairie, and at the farmhouse at the end of an apple orchard a man and his wife and youngsters could be seen staring in their doorway.

"How would you like to settle down like that?" I had asked of Lucille. "A husband and a farm and kids?"

Lucille had replied: "I don't know." Like nearly every one else with the circus, Lucille had been with the circus a long time. Ask any one with Ringling Brothers how long they have been with the show, and they will invariably answer "ten years," "sixteen years," "twenty-six years." Genuine friends to each other, loyal to their employers, jealous of the reputation of the show for honesty and morality, they form the sort of an army that would insure the success of almost any institution.

But "Fatty" Smith woke me out of my reverie. The strange throng and the strange town had started to pour into the menagerie tent. "Fatty" was first to break the silence among the white coated "butchers."

"Peanuts, 5 cents!" shouted "Fatty," in a voice that came from his stomach, and the rest of the butchers began taking up the refrain.

"Gimme one of them pink popcorn packages," ventured a farmer in a dusty black suit, who came squinting toward me with a baby in his arms. "Yeah, that kind. Say, young feller, where do you go from here?"

Working Among the Seats.

It's just sort of a peek that you get of what's going on in the "big top" from a position at the No. 1 candy stand there in the menagerie tent. I could get a glimpse of a mere section of the audience on the blue seats, their distance dimmed faces appearing as if painted against the wall of canvas back of them. I could hear the laughter burst forth when the clowns came running in; I could see Ernie Clark bounce in the net at the finish of his aerial act (too bad I couldn't have "made" Ernie's act when I had that tryout up at Baraboo, but if a candy don't get much applause he does get plenty of homage); and I was right close to the string of elephants as they were guided in for their act. The little elephant, "Sammy," stuck out his trunk and whistled for a sack of peanuts when he came past the stand. He always did that, they told me, and he always ate the offering whole, sack and all.

Mlle. Leitzel, "dainty, daring queen of the air," was up in the dome of the canvas when Mr. Rubien sent me in to work among the seats. I was glad of the chance. It gave me a dandy opportunity to watch the circus. I didn't sell much, but the usual question was asked me a good many times. Sometimes instead of asking, "Where do you go from here?" they wanted to know how many people the tent held. But after a while, when I ran onto Mr. Rubien again, he had a different sort of question to ask me.

"Show look pretty good?" he wanted to know.

"Fine!" I says, not catching his sarcasm at first.

"Glad you're enjoying it," he says, "but that ain't what I sent you in here for. I'm going to give you one more chance. I'm going to try you on the 'come out' with 'the cherries'—you know, sell balloons to 'em while they're coming out of the tent when the show's over. Don't clown your talk like you've been doing. That smart way of yelling is old stuff. I want my men to be legitimate salesmen—state 'what you've got and the price, and cut out the cute talk. In the old days of red lemonade with cheap shows—in fact, before the individual drinking cup idea—that 'made in the shade, cleans your teeth, curls your hair' line of spiel may have been all right. But we haven't had any red lemonade on 'the lot' for five years, comic writers notwithstanding.

"I heard you yelling a while ago when it interfered with the announcements from the platform. I thought I told you about that. It's got to be quiet then—so quiet you can hear a pin drop. Now you get out there along by 'Old Folks'' stand; he's particular and old fashioned, 'Old Folks' is, but he's the hamburger king of this business, and you want to be careful that you don't lean against his tent guy ropes.

"Butchers" and "Trailers" Clash.

Waiting for the "come out" I had occasion to observe that I had competition that had nothing to do with the circus at all. I had heard about it. They were "trailers," taking advantage of the big crowd in town to push their individual enterprises. They had pitched their tents as near as possible to us, and the clashes between them and our butchers were not unheard of events during the course of a season. Their methods of dealing with the public were often a source of irritation to the show management, but there was apparently nothing that could be done to keep them from following along.

Though coming outside had robbed me of seeing what was going on under the "big top," my new surroundings were not without their interest. On one side of the "come out" waved the side show banners, the breeze wafting them back and forth and distorting the faces and forms of "the lady with the hirsute adornment," who was the result of "a strange whim of Dame Nature"; "the three legged boy, whose father, mother, sisters, and brothers were perfectly normal"; "Princess Tiny, who had just returned from a triumphant foreign tour" and had photographs of herself to sell to those who wish them," and numerous other "museum of wonders" attractions that had occupied a car together just ahead of our car on the train switched onto the sidetracks down in the railroad yards that morning.

Lew Graham's discourses concerning these attractions fascinated me, his voice being influenced as it was by the acoustics of the great out of doors.

"Why hesitate?" asked the dignified Mr. Graham from beneath his big green umbrella of those who, not having the price for the big show, still lingered about the grounds. "Ask those coming out what they have seen within. They are in there—all those strange peoples, freaks, and curiosities you see depicted on the banners!"

Then Mr. Graham would pause dramatically, while the Negro band inside struck up "Back Home in Tennessee" or some dreamy waltz. The ticket selling would start with the seller, also elevated on a red stand and shaded by a green umbrella, laying special emphasis on the fact that the charge for "adults" was 15 cents. "Adults!" thou unpopular word of the show grounds that stands for a discrimination in prices! How sickening the sudden knowledge that you have become such a thing and it will thus cost more to get you inside!

Of course, outside there you could picture the bored looking, diminutive Admiral Thumb and the smiling during her act snake charmer on their tasseled and plush rostrums, but you could picture more. There was no end to what you could picture under the magnetism of Mr. Graham's breeze wafted voice. The hidden band music caused one's squinty eyes to almost close with dreamy wonder.

* *

The End of a Perfect Day.

Eventually the crowd began to come out of the "big top"—sated, nerve frayed, figuring on getting home. It was a big crowd. With a circus so much depends on the weather, and it had been a cloudless day. I know the throngs passed me. I know they jostled me as they came along in sort of a hazy stream. But the crowd didn't bother me. I came at length to the realization that nearly every one had gone by. Lew Graham was still talking beneath the green umbrella; the hidden Negro band still continued to drift into dreamy waltzes. The——

A hand was laid on my shoulder and I looked up into the face of Mr. Rubien. He was counting my balloons. One of them had accidentally burst, but the others were in just as good condition as he had given them to me.

"Let me have the cherries," he sighed. "You can turn your coat and your badge and your satchel over to 'Old Folks' there. I'm afraid I can't use you any more. Sorry."

Then, I don't know, the music inside the side show tent seemed to take on a lonesome strain that I had not been conscious of before. The flashing, breeze distorted banners seemed to blur. When that balloon in the bunch I had carried had burst, what an instant before had been a plump, sunshine reflecting thing of pinkness became nothing more than a dangling little piece of rubber at the end of a stick. Somehow I felt like that balloon must have felt just after the bursting "pop."

The next thing I remember was an old man stepping up to me. "You've got mostly gray horses with the show, ain't ya, Shorty?" he remarked, with an apologetic little cough. "Say, by the way, where do you go from here?"

"I ain't had a chance to decide yet," I gulped. "All I know is that I'm a long, long way from home."

Herewith is presented the fifteenth installment of a fiction serial dealing with what might happen should European powers, after they had settled their own differences, wage war upon the United States. The author, one of the best fiction writers in the country, has based his story upon a thorough understanding of military, naval, and internal conditions in the United States and upon a sound knowledge of military and economic history. The story will cause you to realize the critical situation in which this country and you, your neighbors, and your family are placed by the let-well-enough-alone attitude of the pacifists.

SYNOPSIS.

In Elgin, Ill., live the Ashby family, consisting of Nathan Ashby, owner of the Ashby Brass company, and his wife; a daughter, Nellie, married to Bob Wendell, a navy lieutenant; and Jim Ashby, a son, engaged to Agnes Ware. Nathan Ashby is the archtype of pacifist, deaf to the impending danger to America. Almost out of a clear sky news is received that the United States scout cruiser Salem, proceeding against orders in the North Atlantic, has encountered the fleet of the league of former European enemies, and has been sunk, a deliberate act of war. Bob is recalled to Newport News. A legion of spies swarm the country and spies are even enlisted in the army. Jim, against the protests of Agnes, joins the army. The United States fleet, outnumbered two to one by the league ships, and crippled by lack of men, scout cruisers, destroyers, and battle cruisers, engages the enemy fleet and is defeated after a gallant fight. The Arizona, Bob's ship, sinks and Bob is rescued from his turret by a comrade after Bob had made his subordinates seek safety ahead of him. A cabinet meeting is called to meet the perilous situation in which the country is placed. An angry mob surrounds the White House. Admiral Poe, who has lost two sons by the administration's neglect of the navy, drives the secretary of the navy from the White House; General Stone, of the general staff, forces the reluctant politician president to sign an order for universal compulsory service. Jim, encamped with his regiment in Chicago, receives orders to march to the defense of New York. Before leaving Chicago, Jim discovers Marion Marlatt, the girl he met in the house of the regent's spies, in the uniform of an aviator, and disguised as a boy. She tells him she has turned patriot or rather that she always has been patriotic to America, although her uncle was a spy. Jim does not know whether to believe her or not. When the train carrying Jim and the other soldiers draws out of the suburban station, Marion leaps from it and Jim, mystified at her action, leaps after her. A short distance ahead a terrific explosion wrecks the train and kills a number of army men. Jim stumbles upon the unconscious body of Marion and carries her to a farmer's house and, leaving her there, goes to help the victims of the wreck. When he comes back Marion is gone. Another train carries Jim and his company to New York, which is already under bombardment.

CHAPTER XXII.

BREAKFAST UNDER FIRE.

COMPANY F filed out the front door of the car; Corporal Jim Ashby—his squad numbered two other men beside Kilbane and Swenson—led his four across the tracks, avoiding third rails; he climbed the barriers of the railroad right of way and led on to Madison avenue. The shells seemed to be bursting close; the shock of a detonation rocked the air; and all about windows were broken. The white and blue flag of company F was on the corner of One Hundred and Eleventh street. All but two of the men, who had answered roll call after the wreck, replied now; the battalion did not delay for those.

A sergeant, in the khaki of the regular army, rode up on a motorcycle; he found Maj. Wray, saluted, and handed over written orders. The command came down the column: "Forward, march."

Certainly the shells were bursting closer than a few minutes ago, and they were coming more often, too; there was a big fire lower down in the city—several big fires; the smoke blew in great streamers across the sky toward the Hudson. God, how the shells were coming! Breakfast under fire? Jim had forgotten breakfast; he felt no hunger to remind him of it; he did not need to eat. There was talking in the ranks, plenty of talking, but no one spoke of needing to eat.

What a sight was Madison avenue! If all the throngs who had crowded the boats on the river, the trains, and the roads north of the city had fled from New York, where could these people be coming from? Well, some of them were coming from houses and flats and stores, right there on the avenue. Old men, middle aged men, and boys; men gesturing wildly and excited, men stammering and furious, men quiet and pale and too calm were leading their families from their homes to start flight to end—where and how?

That shell! There was no doubt that the shells were bursting farther uptown and were coming more often. Women screamed and children cried; men cursed madly. What in hell was the matter with the forts—what were they doing? Where was the army and all the men who had volunteered? Some one started a cheer for the soldiers marching down the car tracks; the cars in Madison avenue for some reason were not running.

"Where're you from, boys?"

"Illinois!"

"Hurray! Hurray! Some more of the Illinois boys! Hurray! Hurray! Say, some of you fellows are hurt! Been fighting? Where? How did it come out?"

"No; train wreck!" a recruit confessed.

"Bridge blown up before us by spies!" some one corrected quickly. "We lost half our men!" he boasted.

"Where you going? Long island?"

"Don't know; hope so!"

"They need you there; our boys were beaten this morning!"

"That's a damn lie! Then what're you running for? I ain't running; it's orders; we're all to get out. O God, where was that shell? I tell you the army's beaten! The regent's landing a hundred thousand men and they're marching on New York. O God, there's another one."

"What's that, please? We just got off a train and we haven't heard anything!"

"They're shelling New York; those shells, they're exploding just below there!"

"We can hear; damn it, we can see that; but what's going on, you fellows there, you rotten cowards!"

"Cowards!"

"Then some one run alongside of us, can't you, and tell us what's happening!"

The company officers made themselves heard above the shouts. "No talking! Here, stop that! Don't listen to sidewalk talk. Close up. Close up. Here; no straggling there! Column forward! No one can leave the ranks! Column forward! Close up, men, close up!"

Column forward! The column was going forward and every one else was going the other way; every one else was running now, dropping things they carried; they were running. Now, except for the column of marching men, there was no one in Madison avenue at all.

The shells, the awful shells which shook the paving and seemed to suck the breath from you where you were blocks away—the shells were bursting, now, just ahead.

"Column forward! Forward!" some one was beseeching now, not ordering. "Close up, men! O, close up!"

Corporal Ashby gazed dully at the back of the men in front of him, then to Kilbane marching at his side. The Irish boy's face was chalk white; Jim knew that his skin was as bloodless and his legs were as unsteady as he strode.

"Close up! O, damn you, close up!"

Jim stumbled forward, certain the cry must be meant for him; but Kilbane scurried similarly at the same instant like others all about. Shell fire; big explosive shell fire! So this was it, and they were marching into it—hell! "You low quitter; you rotten coward!" Jim's lips whispered at himself. "Go on; you've got to go, and you've got to walk straight. You low, sneaking, cowardly—quitter. O God! O God!"

The shell burst in the building just ahead on the right; the front wall of the building puffed out and spattered all over the street. It was not the deafening detonation; it was not the eruption of the walls or the assault of the flying brick, nor the sudden sight, now, of women's and children's bodies dismembered and strewn, reeking, over the wood and plaster débris—it was not all of that which most stunned and overwhelmed a man; it was the monstrous, inhuman shock of the force which engulfed and made petty the immediate obliteration of half a square.

Jim swayed—blind, deaf, insensible to feeling of any sort; now he knew he was battered upon, crushed as he had dreamed of divers being crushed under the pressure of ten thousand tons of water in an abyss of the sea; his head hummed and his breath pent up within him seemed about to burst his lungs; it would have burst his breast but for the pressure without which crushed and crushed upon it; but now, with astounding pain, the pressure was gone. He found he was on his feet; the pressure all about had kept him up, he supposed, for he stumbled now and fell; blood was pounding his head, his ears were roaring, blood was breaking from his nose; whereas the instant before he had been down in the abyss of the sea, now he was upon a pinnacle of a mountain sucking for breath and cheated of it by the rare, thin air. Other men, too, were cheated of it; they were tumbling all about him. They were not hurt any more than he; that is, they didn't show any hurts; they were just——

"Shell shock! That's all!" some one was reassuring. "Get up, everybody. That's just shell shock; you're all right! Get up! Get up!"

Some one gave Jim a hand and he again was on his feet; he staggered but succeeded in helping up others. "Shell shock!" he said to them, parrotlike. "Just—just shell shock. You're all right!"

Some of them were, for some got up as he did and helped up more; but others were lifted only to fall again and collapse, quite insensible, or roll, groaning, in the street.

"Shell shock!" That was all; not a man in F company had been struck by any metal of the shell; only a couple of the men in E company, ahead, had been hurt by flying bits of brick; that was the inhuman feature of it; no one showed serious hurt and yet a dozen men were dead, or as dull and insensible as the dead; a score more were stunned, so it was no use waiting for them to revive, or were walking about as in sleep, incoherent, mildly mad or babbling, quite insane.

Wray, the major, called the men and women who appeared from cellars.

"Take these men to safe places, please, and look after them; they'll probably come around all right after a while. You can get a doctor, can't you? One of you is a doctor? That's good." He detailed a couple of the less injured soldiers to assist. "When those men recover, you'd better join any other battalion you can find, unless you happen to learn where we'll be."

* *

"COME ON, BOYS!"

Wray, with the captains and the lieutenants, was reforming the companies by physical force, pulling about the men and pushing them into position. "We're going to the subway now!" the officers promised. "We're going as direct as we can to the subway!"

The battalion dazedly formed in column. "Forward!" The men trailed through the debris in the avenue and went on. "Column right!" It was marching on a cross street, with Central park on the right; it passed the end of Fifth avenue and went on. Jim recognized Columbus circle. The column headed for the kiosk to the subway and halted. The major went ahead to make explanations; the column learned, while it waited, that the subway or the power plant or something had been damaged so that only a few trains might be run, and the whole subway system had been taken over by the military. Wray reappeared; evidently he had won dispensation for his men suffering from shell shock. Company E began to file down under the street, F gratefully followed into the subterranean world where the sound of the shells—even those shells which tore whole business squares to bits and killed or crazed a score of men without marking them—was dull and distant, and where you could lie back on the rattan seat of a steel car and be quite safe again. Where the train was taking the battalion and why no one at that moment seemed to care.

Swenson, who sat beside Jim, was opening and closing his hands and staring at them. "That's funny," he said slowly. "It was my right I couldn't feel moving; now it's the left."

Jim again tried the muscles of his hands and feet. Kilbane appealed to him in a whisper. "Is siven times nine sixty-three?"

Jim considered; then he nodded.

"You've awful pain here?" Kilbane touched the back of his head.

"Awful!"

'Then you and me'll watch ache other. They make you dippy after a while sometimes, ye've heard?"

"Yes; I've heard."

"Worth street!" an officer's voice warned. "The next is ours, boys. Brooklyn bridge!"

Did that mean marching on the surface again or going in cars exposed to fire? Why couldn't every one stay in the subway? It went to Brooklyn safe deep down under the river. The train stopped and every one got out; the battalion started up to the street. The shells! They were bursting ceaselessly just above. The concussion of them battered down the subway stairs and the noise above was awful; not only the shells—screams also and cries of men in panic, terrified, beaten.

"Forward, boys! Come on, everybody! Forward!"

Smoke—black, [illegible] smoke, hot and scorching—eddied down into the subway; the battalion struggled through it. There was a fight at the top of the stairs. Soldiers were trying to turn back men who were crushing to get into the subway; they struggled and swore; the battalion brought help to the guards and cleared the stairs. Company F, following company E, came out to the street. The end of Brooklyn bridge lay before them, shrouded in the smoke which rose from the tenement blocks which were burning. From the smoke men staggered and stumbled—men in uniform and with rifles, uniformed men without guns and others without uniform or rifle, but wearing the arm bands and the brown shirts of American recruits. Shells burst above them and scurried them on. These were not the monster shells which had been striking farther up in the city; these were smaller and came much quicker and burst with two different sorts of detonation. One sort made little noise; the other burst with shock and roar of the same type, only much less, as the shock of the shell which had dazed the battalion.

"Shrapnel that! And that's high explosive!"

"Yes!"

"Column fours! Column fours!" the company officers were begging. "Forward! Forward, men! March!"

A bugle blew the signal over and over again. The battalion moved slowly toward the bridge; shrapnel and the quick, ceaseless high explosive shells were bursting above company F now.

"O, God, I'm hit!" The man who cried it caught at Jim's shoulder and dragged there; beyond him another man went down without cry or gasp; he just crumpled and the man marching behind stepped on the body before he knew it.

"Forward, men! Forward! You've got to come on! O, come on, you damned cowards! For Illinois, boys! Come on! Come on! Never mind the wounded; don't look at the dead! Come on, boys! Forward! Come on!"

Never mind the wounded! That meant—for Jim Ashby—that he must free himself from the fingers of the man clasping his shoulder; he must let the man fall on his face in the street.

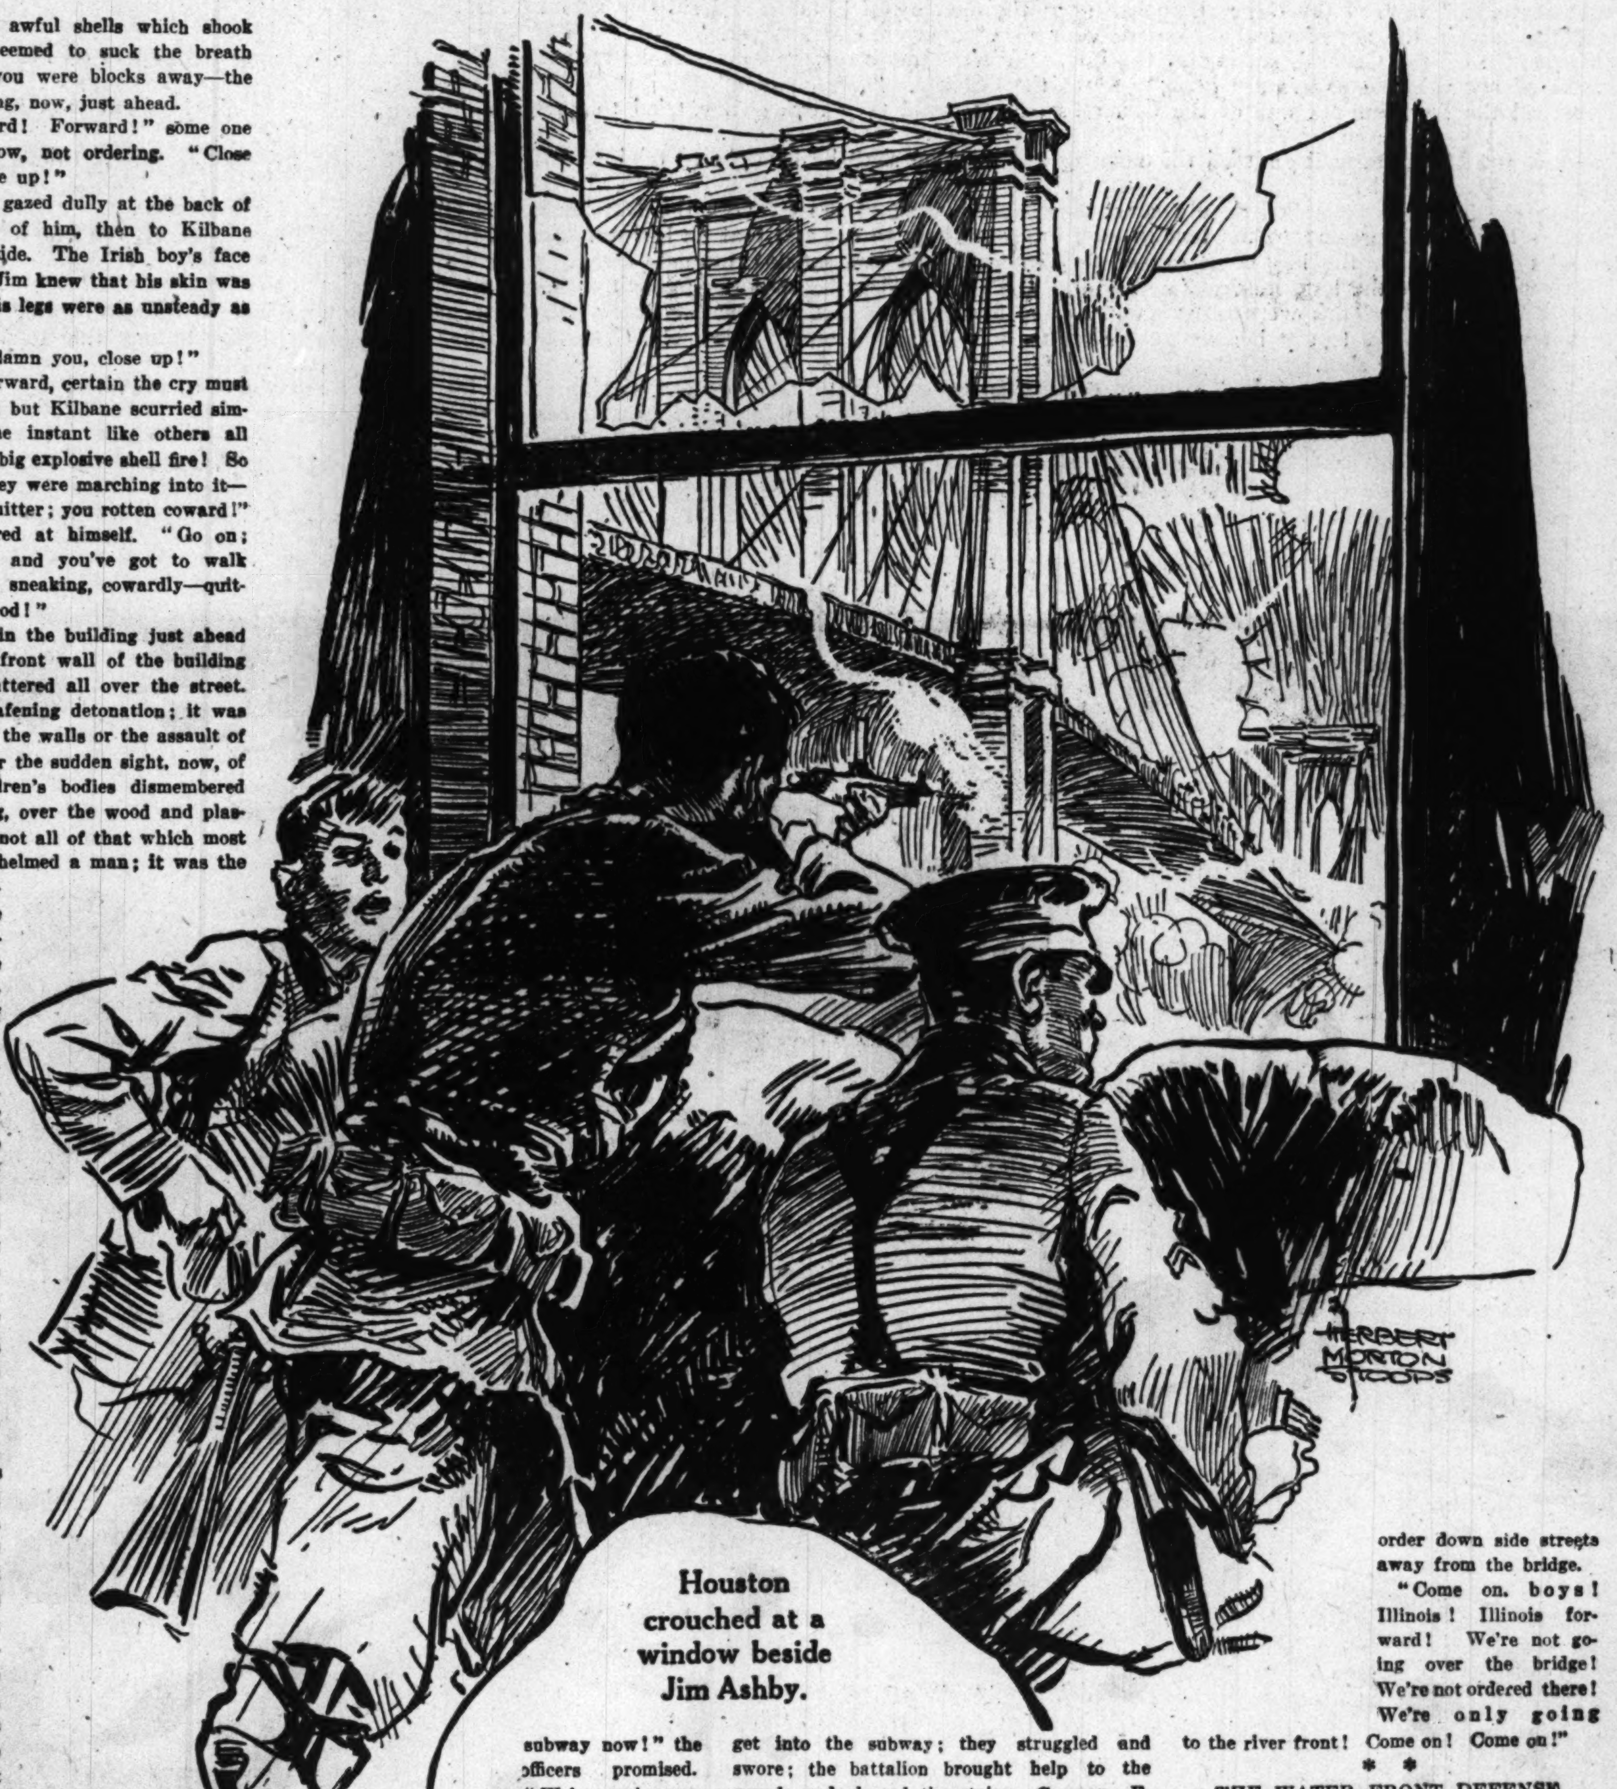
"Ashby!" Winslow, the captain, appealed to him because he was a corporal; at least he had a uniform. "Help bring up those men! Forward! Make 'em come on!"

Jim freed himself from the wounded man and laid him, moaning and groping, on his back in the street.

"Come on, boys!" Most of company F faltered forward a little; for the moment the shells were worse behind than in front. The company advanced farther. Winslow's voice cried in praise: "That's the stuff, boys! Don't let the New Yorkers think we're afraid. Come on, now!"

The New Yorkers! If they were the men running from the bridge they had a lot of right to think things about any one else. They were running mad, crazy with fear and ducking their heads and trying to dodge when the shells were breaking above them. They flung themselves, coughing, out of the smoke, and when officers yelled to them and tried to gather them and get them together they ran or fell wounded, squirming in the street. Only here and there a few formed and moved off in order down side streets away from the bridge.

"Come on, boys! Illinois! Illinois forward! We're not going over the bridge! We're not ordered there! We're only going to the river front! Come on! Come on!"



Houston crouched at a window beside Jim Ashby.

THE WATER FRONT DEFENSE.

The battalion began to move again. Only to the river front! That sounded like some safer place. Anyway, it couldn't be like the bridge. No place on earth or in hell could be like the bridge. No one could live on the bridge; some men were posted there and were standing and not running at all; they had a field battery and machine guns trained across the bridge; they were just waiting there and not firing. But those men were regulars; that was their business to be in a place like that. Company F, following company E, turned into Chambers street and marched down it. The shells were not striking there often; they were all breaking over the bridge. The battalion reached South street on the water front. They could see Brooklyn plainly now across the narrow neck of the East river. The whole city seemed to be burning; at least the whole water front was screened in smoke which swept over the river and concealed and now disclosed and concealed again boats coming over from the Brooklyn side. The noise of the guns on Long island also was louder; they were closer and there were more guns firing. Aeroplanes—one, two, four, six—were in the air over the East river, and above the smoke from Brooklyn a great, globular object swung and swayed in the wind—an observation balloon.

"Column left!"

There was no sort of column about the battalion as it debouched from Chambers street; the men proceeded merely bunched together in company crowds; some of the recruits of E mingled with F, and F with G, and so on; but they turned to the north in fair order as they reached the water front; the shells were still striking mostly about the bridge or much farther on where some of the regent's aeroplanes seemed to have sighted something worth destroying. So the battalion made its way north beside the docks and the piers.

"Company E!" Wray, the major, halted the first group of the battalion and pointed out a position. "Company F!"

Thirty-eight men gathered before him.

"You will occupy and prepare a defensive position in that warehouse, which will be designated hereafter in all reports and orders as 'N-04.' The New York regiments, with some of the Connecticut and New Hampshire men, are engaged with the enemy's troops on Long island; the landing of a large body of troops on Long island was being effected simultaneously with the naval battle. The enemy has driven our troops back upon Brooklyn. You must understand, however, that our general staff had no hopes of preventing the landing; our troops were sufficient then only to make the landing costly; and since the landing they have been merely delaying the enemy's advance by fighting a rear guard action. Therefore you are not to be dismayed or disheartened by the retreats you have witnessed and may witness.

"Here, on this line of the water front, our forces will make a stand; you, with certain reserves and reinforcements which may be sent you, will defend this section of our line. In case orders fail to reach you from me or from other officers you must hold your position at any cost."

So far Wray succeeded in speaking as to soldiers; now his voice appealed. "And for God's sake, boys, stick and fight back when you're under fire, and if you can't fight, if it seems there's nothing possible that you can do, if it seems just suicide to stay, stick. Boys, for your country's sake and your own, stay at your position. It probably won't do you any good to try to retreat anyway; but, whatever you think, stick!"

He jerked his head up and his voice was formal again. "You are to defend that section of our front against attack from the water—by boat—or by men who may have crossed elsewhere and move in this direction. Remember what you've been told for battle; take care of your own front, and, unless ordered to assist elsewhere, leave it to other companies to defend their posts or you will fail at your own. I repeat to you the battle order which Gen. Stone has issued to all troops who fight today in the first line of our defense; our victory depends upon every man holding his position or dying at his post."

Wray stepped back and bowed his head. Some one started a cheer, but most of company F—Jim Ashby for one—had too much shame to join in it. Winslow, the captain, led to "N-94"; the company followed and entered.

It was a four story brick building, old but substantial, with thick walls and tall, narrow windows opening toward the East river. In front, upon the first floor, was an office, deserted now and with desks shut and locked; the space behind the office was a warehouse floor, crowded with crates, boxes, barrels, bales, and sacks of all sorts and sizes; there was a freight elevator in the rear where a man was sitting with a rifle across his knees. He was a stocky, muscular man, upward of 40, with tanned skin and sandy brown hair and with blue, determined eyes. As he stood up Jim observed that he had a peg leg: his right leg had been cut off at the knee. In spite of that he stood in a manner which made the recruits of company F put back their shoulders straighter. The wooden legged man saluted Winslow.

"My name is Houston, sir," he said. "I worked here, so I came to do anything I could. I used to be in the regular army, sir; I was at Santiago and in the Philippines. I tried to get into this, of course, sir, but was refused." He moved his peg leg forward.

Winslow looked him over; Houston wore an old army shirt and khaki trousers. "Tell me what's here."

"Sugar, sir."

"And those packs?"

"Meal. The best stuff for protection here, sir, is baled cotton in that corner; there's more upstairs. I hope I can help, sir."

Winslow considered; his orders left him discretion in dealing with civilians; but he was cautioned particularly to guard against espionage and to prevent civilians from taking part in the fighting. As far as uniforms went Houston's army shirt and trousers certainly equaled the arm bands and caps of some of the recruits; his rifle, though not a Springfield, was a military rifle—the Krag he had used in the Philippines.

"You want to fight with us?"

"Yes, sir."

"Show us upstairs," Winslow bid him. There was no time for delay. If "N 94" was not the most vital neither was it the least important post in the defense of the eastern water front. A couple of hundred yards to the south lay Brooklyn bridge, half shrouded in smoke, with shells bursting over it for its whole length, with the American militiamen and volunteers, who had been fighting on Long island, fleeing across; a few hundred yards to the north stretched Manhattan bridge, also under shell fire, with American troops running in rout; directly opposite "N 94" was the narrowest stretch of the river, with the burning docks and warehouses of Brooklyn barely a quarter mile away from the boat slips of New York. The smoke was drifting low now, covering the water and concealing the boats being brought over from Brooklyn; the battle—the noise of artillery, the rattle of machine guns—seemed now just behind the smoke on the Brooklyn shore. A shell—perhaps a stray, perhaps a precursor of a bombardment of the whole water front—struck and burst in South street before "N 94." Company F dropped their rifles and leaped at Winslow's orders.

There were cotton bales on every floor, there was sacked wool, meal, sugar. Company F, sweating and gasping in the noonday heat, bore the bales and sacks to build up barriers at windows and behind the brick walls. The wooden legged man brought a fire hose and drenched the barriers, floors, and walls. A shell blew half the roof off "N 94." Houston put out the fire and, with his rifle, crouched at a window beside Jim Ashby, kneeling behind a cotton bale.

THE TEENIE WEENIE

LADY OF FASHION SAVES THE LIFE OF A SPY.

BY WM. DONAHEY.

THE Teenie Weenies slept. Only the tramp of the sentinels disturbed the quiet of the tiny camp. The guard had been doubled, for several suspicious bugs had been seen prowling about the neighborhood, and the General thought it wise to be well-prepared, so now two Teenie Weenie soldiers watched the camp while their comrades slept.

It was a warm moonlight night and the Sailor and Mr. Lover, who were doing guard duty, rather enjoyed their tramp among the tents. As Mr. Lover turned the corner of the hospital tent he suddenly saw a dark figure pass out of the General's quarters and run across to the shadow of the Cook's tent. Quickly hurrying around to the other side of the tent, he came face to face with a huge pinching bug.

"Throw up your hands," shouted the sentinel, threatening the bug with his bayonet. The bug immediately held his hands above his head. Calling in the Sailor, Mr. Lover marched the prisoner up to the General's tent, where he soon aroused the commander in chief of the army.

"Whazmatter? Whazmatter?" yawned the General, appearing at the opening of his tent and sleepily rubbing his eyes.

"We've just arrested this bug in the act of sneaking out of your tent," answered Mr. Lover.

"Great Scott! is that so?" said the General, staring at the bug. "Wait," and turning to his tent he struck a light and hunted among the papers on his desk for some time. "Some of my valuable papers are gone," gasped the General. "Search him."

The two soldiers searched the bug, but not one of the General's papers could they find. They tried to question the bug, but not a single word would he say.

"Put this fellow in irons and have him well guarded till morning and then he shall be brought to trial, and if he is found guilty he shall be shot," thundered the General, looking fiercely at the bug.

Early the next morning the bug was brought before a court martial composed of the General, the Dutchman, the Old Soldier and the Doctor.

The bug claimed that he had merely gone into the tent to look for something to eat and that he had not touched the General's papers. But, on the other hand, Mr. Lover testified that he had seen the bug come out of the General's tent and sneak cautiously away.

As the testimony was much against the bug, he was found guilty and sentenced to be shot the following morning.

The Policeman, Gogo, Scotty and the Turk were ordered out as the firing squad, and with heavy hearts the little procession marched to the execution.

"Is there anything that you would like to say before the s-s-sentence is-is carried out?" asked the General as the procession stopped before the tomato can, against which the bug was to be shot.

"Nothing," said the bug, looking proudly around. "Nothing, other than the fact that I am innocent of this crime for which I am about to bravely die."

A bandage was quickly tied over the bug's eyes and he was stood up against the can, facing the four soldiers of the firing squad.

"Make ready!" shouted the Old Soldier, who was in charge of the executioners. "'Take aim——"

"Stop! Stop!" screamed the Lady of Fashion, dashing madly between the loaded guns and the doomed bug. "This bug is innocent. Here are the lost papers. I found them under the mattress of the General's bed," and, quite lady like, the tiny heroine fell in a faint to the ground.

The Doctor soon brought the Lady of Fashion to her self again, and the bug was quickly released, with humble apologies from the General, in the name of the Teenie Weenie army.

By JEAN SEIVWRIGHT.

(Drawings by E. C. KELLY.)

THE stage with its dramatic presentations of the varied emotions of humanity proves a fitting place for the introduction of new modes. Indeed, the clothes that are worn and the manner of wearing them are always of much interest to the audience, for fashions set by the stage frequently become the mode of the hour. Three years ago Mme. Laporseri produced "Le Minaret" and the picturesque designs created the lampshade influence in skirts.

From time to time Cora Laporseri presents many darling things in the modes. "Le Dindon," which is staged at the Theatre des Varieties, is merely a domestic comedy, so that the clothes worn are representative of the upper middle class French woman of modish inclination. All, however, are in excellent taste and style, and offer charming suggestions for the woman who seeks distinction in her summer dress.

In the upper group, two charming models worn by Mlle. Marcel Praince are illustrated. The costume at the left is originated in a beautiful taupe faille. The skirt, cut rather straightly, forecasts some of the style features that will be in vogue for fall, as it is sometimes narrower and rather longer than the modes that have been in vogue so long. Then all bunchiness on the hips is eliminated, so that a more natural and pleasing silhoutte is achieved.

A quaint tete de negre velvet jacket, prettily slashed and bound with braid, adds a deeper and richer note to the costume. This also contrasts cleverly with the bertha and sleeves of tinted gray batiste which are exceptionally dainty. The deep ,tight fitting cuffs with their short flaring frills are trimmed with old silver buttons, and this simple decoration makes a pleasing trimming on the bertha. The neck is closely collared and the strangely shaped hat is set low on the forehead. This, too, maintains the soft tones of the costume, for it is originated in gray faille.

None the less effective yet more cheerful in color is the dress that is depicted to the right. This is made of old rose taffeta, with cross-stitch embroidery on the apron-like panel that distinguishes the front of the skirt. A somewhat different tone of rose is chosen for the basque that is cut away in the center front.

Dainty roses and rose leaves take the place of the ordinary buttons and buttonholes and match the closely set roses that adorn the chapeau. This, by the way, is fashioned from a rose colored milan with twin frills of delicate pink tulle.

The sleeves of this frock are decidedly worthy of note, for frills and puffs are cleverly combined, while below the elbow all fullness is summarily dismissed, and the soft folds of pink tulle are firmly stitched down. At the wrist, however, all restricting devices are forsaken and a modest little frill cuffs the arm.

The hat pictured in the upper circle is made of white velvet simply trimmed with grosgrain ribbon and a silvered ostrich tip.

For Mme. Cora Laporseri is designed the wonderful cloak that is illustrated on this page. Its gorgeous sweeping folds are developed from a lovely nattier blue faille with a deep border and cuffs of black velvet. Rich gold embroidery is used to elaborate the mantle, which is finished with a collar of putois fur. The lining of rose velvet greatly enhances the beauty of this cloak, which is most magnificent in color.

With this mantle an effective hat is donned. Fashioned from jet, this interesting chapeau is trimmed in front with an aigrette so placed that it accentuates the long sweeping lines of the upturned brim.

Another hat is pictured at the lower corner of the page. This is modeled in silvered milan faced with gray felt and trimmed with a small precise looking silvered fancy.

The model that completes the illustration is developed in a supple mastic colored faille. The skirt is prettily plaited, and the plaits are so arranged that at the hem they suggest a partly open umbrella. A broad band of the material and three narrow tucks give much individuality to this model.

In the bodice, however, there is exceptional beauty of color, for touches of pale blue and silver are cleverly disposed on front of the basque. The filmy tulle sleeves of mastic colored tulle are finished with long, tight fitting cuffs faced with pale blue. Similar treatment also characterizes the collar. The shoes of mastic suede match the dress, while the hat of gray milan trimmed with gray coque introduces a softer note of color that is decidedly pleasing.

MEN AND WOMEN

I T was with deep personal concern I read the other day of the ban Pope Benedict has put on dancing under the auspices of parish churches. If there is one pastime I heartily indorse, for reasons of health and good, wholesome fun, it is dancing. If there is one that I enjoy it is the call of Terpsichore.

Now a National Pastime.

Therefore, I was somewhat disturbed over the papal edict, and the first person to cross my path was the first to get the benefit of my rebellious attitude. It happened to be a young woman of most excellent principles and a coworker.

Generally speaking, our moralizings and theorizings are conducted in perfect harmony. But this subject of the dance and my attack upon what I think to be an unnecessarily drastic ruling proved to be the proverbial reef upon which discordance struck up. A lively argument ensued.

"It's all wrong," said I, rebelliously, "to put the ban on dancing when it has become a more national pastime than baseball even. Dance fans are bound to seek pleasure in the dance, so why not let them be conducted under the chaperonage of church and clergy?"

She: If the papal edict is put into effect here in this country it won't be long before other and more morally healthful amusements will supplant the dance among the Catholic young men and women.

I: I don't believe such a thing will ever come to pass. They've danced since the year 1, and human beings will be dancing the day before Judgment day, I'll wager. At any rate, the ban applies only to dances conducted under direct parish jurisdiction, and as it involves revenue for the church, if it is a recognized danger to morals, why the clause permitting church societies and organizations to conduct dances?

She: Well, then the responsibility lies with the individuals. The church can't be blamed——

I: Certainly it should be held responsible if the moneys made by these societies are turned back into the church coffers. If dancing is to be decried at all by the church authorities, then it should be abolished entirely and preached down from every pulpit.

She: Well, it should be abolished entirely, in my opinion. I have made up my mind that I shall never again attend a dance. I don't see why I should subject myself to the unhappiness of having my whole evening spoiled by the unpleasant actions of at least one man, and sometimes more.

I: You don't mean to tell me you mean that—that you never will attend dancing parties again?

* *

Some Objectionable Partners.

She: I do. I have been so enraged at the way in which I have been held by some dancing partners—many of them men I had only just met—that I have had all I could do to keep my tightened fist from indicating my displeasure. If it weren't for the fear of making a scene I would strike.

I: I certainly cannot agree with such experiences—but then maybe it's because I like to be held reasonably tight because I can dance so much easier, and besides my dancing partner as a general thing is just an impersonal "he."

She: I don't see how you can call impersonal the tight embrace of any man.

I: I can recall only a few occasions where I was thus subjected to any unpleasantness, and even with those men I found a little good natured but emphatic raillery was sufficient to offset any further advance. But I certainly would not dream of letting a few instances of the kind spoil all my dancing pleasure.

She: The old men—and especially the fat old men—are the worst offenders, although I notice a good many of the really young chaps are extremely familiar in their way of holding a girl.

I: Well, granted some do hold you tight, I don't believe the percentage of young or old, fat or thin, middle aged, that are guilty of ungentlemanly conduct is big enough to put dancing parties below bazaars, carnivals, and dramatic performances as means of legitimate revenue. Take in the foreign districts, where the dances given under church auspices have proved to be a successful competitor to the public dance hall, what better argument in favor of the dance can you present

She: There are other amusements that are quite satisfactory. It is only within the last few years anyway that dancing has become so popular. When I was little, dancing was preached down from the pulpit. I remember I used to think it a sin.

* *

Indecorum in Dress.

I: But you can't deny its popularity now, and, leaving entirely aside the subject of revenue it must be admitted that the evil dance hall and the public dance hall are best combatted in certain neighborhoods by the right kind of dance recreation under proper conditions and supervision. At church dances decorum of dress is better observed.

She: I haven't seen any greater dress decorum at church dances than at public balls. It's a perpetual surprise to me that there isn't more decorum in dress in conjunction with affairs of the church. I can't believe but that young women from quite excellent and religious families, who garb themselves in dresses cut after the woman of the world patterns, are so extremely innocent that they know not what they do.

I: Well, that's my argument about the young men and the other men whom you accuse of "familiar Nelson clutches" on you when they dance—there is nothing wrong in their minds. So why blame either the innocent minded young women or the equally innocent dance?

Am I right, or is she?

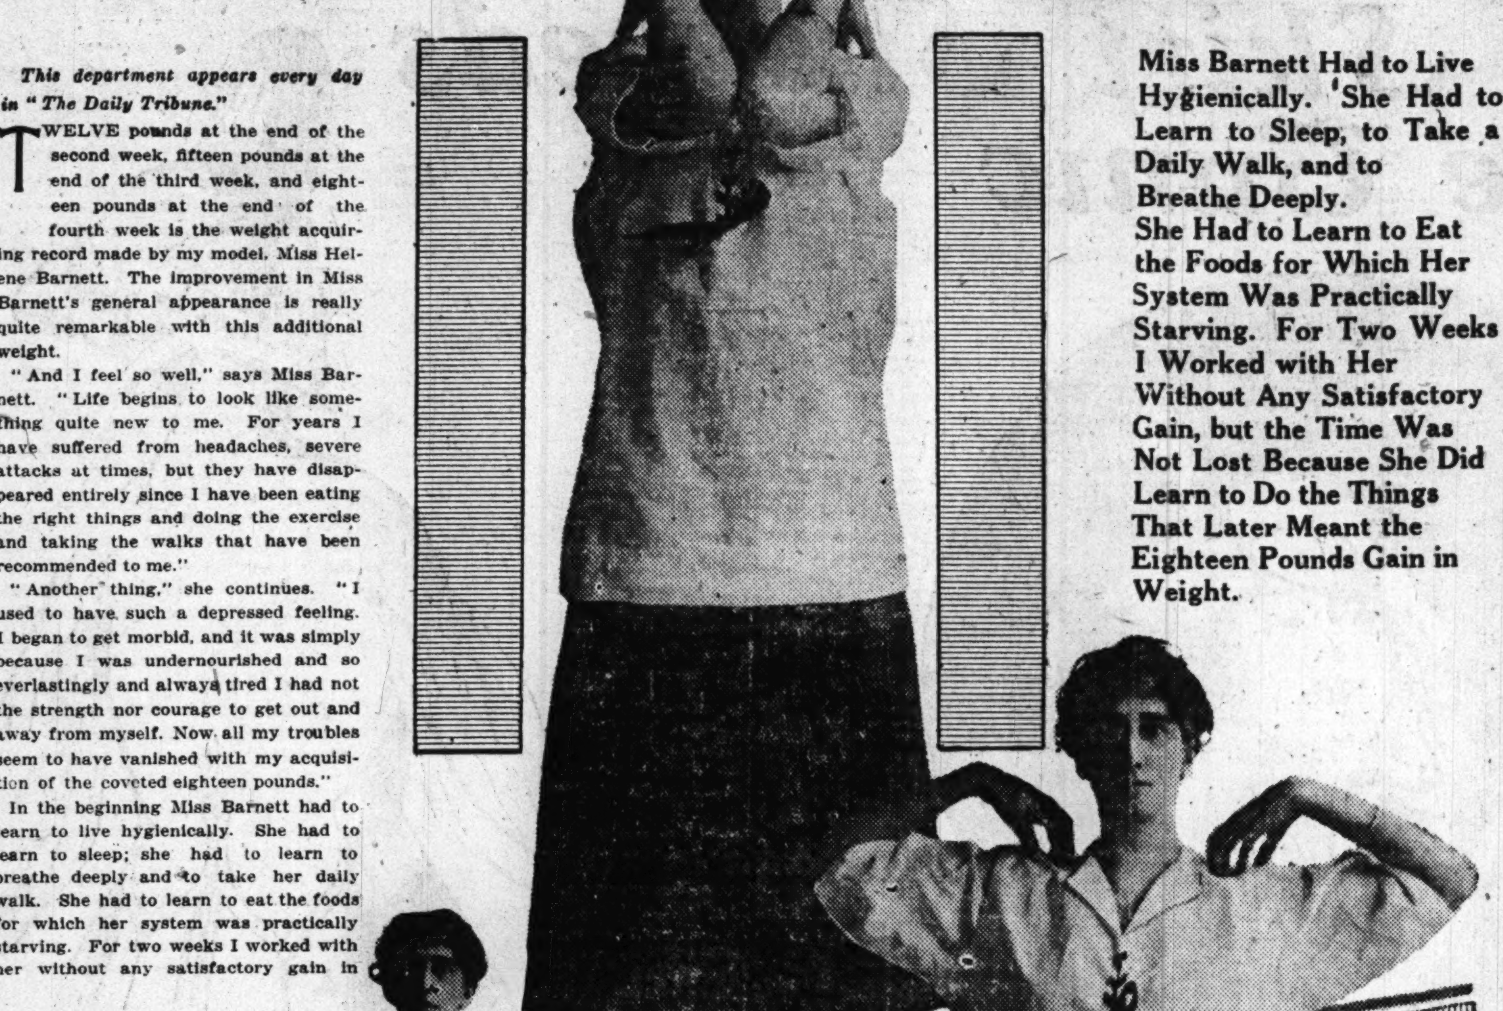
18 POUNDS IN 4 WEEKS I'VE ADDED TO HELENE BARNETT'S WEIGHT

says Antoinette Donnelly

Miss Barnett Had to Live Hygienically. She Had to Learn to Sleep, to Take a Daily Walk, and to Breathe Deeply. She Had to Learn to Eat the Foods for Which Her System Was Practically Starving. For Two Weeks I Worked with Her Without Any Satisfactory Gain, but the Time Was Not Lost Because She Did Learn to Do the Things That Later Meant the Eighteen Pounds Gain in Weight.



This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

TWELVE pounds at the end of the second week, fifteen pounds at the end of the third week, and eighteen pounds at the end of the fourth week is the weight acquiring record made by my model, Miss Helene Barnett. The improvement in Miss Barnett's general appearance is really quite remarkable with this additional weight.

"And I feel so well," says Miss Barnett. "Life begins to look like something quite new to me. For years I have suffered from headaches, severe attacks at times, but they have disappeared entirely since I have been eating the right things and doing the exercise and taking the walks that have been recommended to me."

"Another thing," she continues. "I used to have such a depressed feeling. I began to get morbid, and it was simply because I was undernourished and so everlastingly and always tired I had not the strength nor courage to get out and away from myself. Now all my troubles seem to have vanished with my acquisition of the coveted eighteen pounds."

In the beginning Miss Barnett had to learn to live hygienically. She had to learn to sleep; she had to learn to breathe deeply and to take her daily walk. She had to learn to eat the foods for which her system was practically starving. For two weeks I worked with her without any satisfactory gain in weight. But the time was not lost, because she did learn to do the things that later proved of infinite value in her flesh gaining record. At the end of the two weeks she immediately began to pick up and at the gratifying rate of twelve pounds in two weeks.

Acquiring a taste for milk was difficult for Miss Barnett. But having made up her mind that it was necessary if she hoped to gain she stuck to it, and now she drinks six pints a day.

"I found by rising earlier—at 7 o'clock—that it was easier to eat the increased amount of food," says Miss Barnett. "I increased the amount of milk gradually as my stomach grew accustomed to it. I found, too, that by drinking it oftener and in smaller quantities it did not have the tendency to constipate me as it did in the beginning, when I was ambitious enough to attempt to drink a quart at a time. I drank it cold, as I found it more palatable that way."

Miss Barnett included her milk drinking with her meals, as well as between them.

Her breakfast diet varied little during the entire work of the eighteen pounds' gain from this: One-half grapefruit with sugar, two soft boiled eggs and three slices of buttered toast, two glasses of milk, several times a week, adding a cereal with cream.

At 10:30 she drank a pint of milk.

Her luncheon consisted generally of a bowl of rich broth, or cream of corn soup, or cream of celery, or cream of tomato soup; slice or two of bread spread thickly with butter; two glasses of milk, a half dozen pecans, four or five dates or figs.

At 3 o'clock she drank another pint of milk. About 4 or 4:30 three or four chocolate drops were eaten.

For dinner she had choice of any cream soup or soup made from rich stock, fresh, rich beef, or ham, or bacon, or pork; potatoes, baked or mashed or served with cream dressing; spaghetti or macaroni: lettuce or fruit salad, with oil dressing or oil and cheese dressing; green vegetables of any kind, ripe olives, ice cream and cake, or rich custard, or rice pudding, or tapioca pudding; two glasses of milk.

Before retiring she drank another pint of milk.

"I used to be an inveterate coffee drinker," says Miss Barnett. "But the milk cure has killed my taste for it and I'm sure that has a lot to do with my feeling so much better."

The bust development exercise, which is illustrated on this page, and which Miss Barnett practices faithfully every day—morning and night—is the best that can be recommended for increasing the size of the bust.

As I have said before, the development of the chest is accomplished by deep breathing exercises, and they should never be neglected if you are making an effort to make larger the bust. For a perfect bust cannot be developed on a poorly developed chest.

The development of the bust is accomplished by movements of the arms and shoulders. Every exercise that moves these parts, such as swinging dumb bells, rotating arms, or moving shoulders, brings some benefit also to the bust, as always some part of the bust participates in these movements. The most effective exercise, as illustrated herewith, is done as follows:

Stretch the arms out to the sides, as in Fig. 1, then bend the elbows so that the tips of the fingers touch the shoulders, as shown in Fig. 2. Now move the elbows forward until they touch in front of the chest at a level with the center of the breasts or a little higher, the tips of the fingers remaining on the shoulders. Then return arms to original position.

Practice the movement a few times with the right arm only, placing the palm of the left hand upon the right breast. A strong and decided contraction is felt under the left hand while the movement is in progress.

Begin the movement with ten or fifteen times and gradually increase to 100. Repeat the exercise during the day whenever it is convenient. In the meantime, don't neglect the deep breathing when you arise in the morning and before you go to bed at night and every moment between when you think of it. Get the deep breathing habit, so that it will become an unconscious and regular habit. The importance of your daily walk, too, must not be lost sight of. You must give your lungs their ozone bath if you want better blood, better circulation, and a better appetite.

When you come to analyze this business of getting fat it is nothing more or less than a common sensible mode of life, of which fresh air, nutritious food, and wholesome sleep are the maxims.

Next week I shall continue with my experiment with Miss Barnett.

Replies to Beauty Seekers.

MISS B.: Dieting is a most important feature in reducing. Keep right on with the dieting. I suggest your following carefully my instructions as given to Mrs. Eva Lane, who lost thirty-six pounds in six weeks. If you have lost three pounds in a couple of days you are doing well. If you only practice the exercises twice a day you must understand, of course, that it will take longer to accomplish results. Do not forget the baths after the exercising, as they not only keep you from getting sore and stiff, but lessen the danger of taking cold. I shall be glad to send you the fifth and sixth articles in the series if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

* *

ALICE: A girl of 15 can wear her hair in a braid or curls down her back. Some girls prefer to wear a barrette to hold the hair in place while others like a bow at the back of the neck. It is simply a matter of taste. If your hair is pretty I shouldn't think you would long to have it grow darker. Blonde hair if well cared for is wonderfully pretty, especially on a girl with dark brown eyes. I have a formula for shampoo for blonde hair which I shall be glad to send to you if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope. It is not a dye, but it will bring out the pretty tints in your hair.

* *

VIRGINIA: The following formula is excellent for dandruff: Resorcin, two drams; grain alcohol, three drams; glycerin, one-half ounce, and of rosewater a sufficient quantity to make four ounces. Resorcin sometimes undergoes a change of color that gives to light gray or white hair a dingy or yellowish cast. This may be obviated by the addition of ten grains of salicylic acid to an ounce of the solution. Apply this to the scalp every night just before you massage it. On account of the infectious character of dandruff you should have your own brush and comb. Keep your brush and comb scrupulously clean. Wash it at least once a week, placing a few drops of ammonia in the water.

* *

MISS BLANCHE W.: A good tonic will overcome the oily condition of your hair. I have a formula for a tonic which I shall be glad to send to you if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope. Lack of space will not permit me to print it now.

* *

WORRIED GIRL: There is no special height or weight for a girl of 14. She is still at the growing age, and her height and weight would vary with her growth. A simple and pretty way for a girl of your age to wear her hair is in a braid or curls down her back, with a bow at the neck or a simple barrette to hold it in place. Don't assume any of the exaggerated styles of coiffure. It is not becoming to young girls.

* *

FLO: Sweeping, lifting weights, swinging Indian clubs, and swimming are good exercises for developing the arms. The weights should be fairly light at first, beginning with perhaps two and one-half pounds and gradually increasing until five pounds are used. Face the chest weights, grasp the handles firmly, and hold the arms straight out in front of the chest. Stand with your heels nearly together and far enough away from the weights to raise them a little distance from the floor. Draw the two handles to the chest and almost under the armpits, letting the elbows and shoulders go well back; then extend the arms. Repeat ten times. Practice this exercise twice a day faithfully.

* *

FORTY: The color cannot be restored to gray hair. The roots of the hair are embedded in the hair follicles and cannot be reached by any fluids applied to the scalp. You might, however, prevent the hair from becoming more gray by taking a course of scalp treatments. The grayness of the hair is due to loss of pigment. The scalp massage stimulates the circulation and promotes a proper flow of blood to the roots and gives them nourishment.

For and By BUSINESS GIRLS

Parsimonious Patriotism.

DURING the recent patriotic demonstration in Chicago practically every store and business house closed for the day in order that everybody, from owners and managers to the janitors and office boys, could take part in the parade.

The display windows of the shops and the façades of the office buildings were elaborately decorated in bunting and flags of silk and other fine material. Business was stopped for the day, and everybody was gred with a love of country spirit that had rarely ever been equaled. Preparations had been going on for two weeks and people talked with enthusiasm of the big business concerns which were not only sacrificing the business of the day but were bearing the greater part of the expense and furnishing the decorations. The owners of the large stores and heads of other corporations were the real patriots. The employés were given a holiday to march, so why shouldn't they?

Marching seems to have been man's forte, as woman has heretofore taken little part in any of the great parades, whether public or private. They have been out of her line, but since equal suffrage has gained such a strong foothold in the country and is bringing not only local political questions but issues of national importance to her consideration she is beginning to take her place in the line of march with true patriotic spirit. She feels, perhaps, that she is being a bit heroic by participating in this public demonstration, but she is not only willing but eager to make a sacrifice for the cause of adequate national defense and preparedness.

To come to the point, one of the largest jewelry houses in the city, along with other big concerns, declared a holiday for the patriotic demonstration. It found its clerks, both men and women, all eager to march. Some time before the day set for the parade the girls employed by this firm were told by the management that they not only would be compelled to march but would have to buy and wear a special costume which was being designed for the occasion in order that they might be easily distinguished and recognized as employés of the firm.

None of the girls could well afford to spend the money for a special outfit to be worn for one day, but, whether they could afford it or not, they had to spare it. "It wasn't so much the expense of the costume that I minded," said one of the girls, "as being told that I would be compelled to march after having volunteered."

The spirit of the affair was probably taken out of it for these girls. Since this firm was so particular about the appearance of its girls in the parade and insisted on a uniform it might have added to its public spiritedness a wee bit, without endangering the patriotism of its employés if it had furnished the uniforms.

ETIQUETTE by ELIZABETH VAN RENSSELAER

Any question on etiquette will be answered if you write to Elizabeth Van Rensselaer, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply inclose a stamped, addressed envelope. Please write on one side of the paper only.

Simian Maneuvers in Public.

THERE is nothing more unpleasant than the habit some people have of scratching themselves, or of exploring eye, ear, or nose in public.

It would seem an obvious fact that these habits or tricks were taboo were it not that both in public conveyances and on the streets, as well as in private houses, people—even supposedly well bred ones—are seen frequently indulging in these simian maneuvers.

Don't handle your features, or touch your body unnecessarily when with others. Don't pat or smooth your hair or clean your finger nails, or even powder your nose (if you are of the gentler, more powderful sex). Try to keep your hands from your face. Many people have the habit of putting their hands or fingers near or over their lips when talking, which makes their speech indistinct as well as tends to make the face grimy.

A careful avoidance of these habits goes far towards making a well bred exterior. And it is hard to maintain a well bred exterior without its having an effect on the inner man, the animating force which makes our personality.

* *

FRANCES: Don't worry if your classmates get more flowers on graduation day than you do. Treasure those you have and write little notes of thanks to those who send them to you. Use your own words and express what you really feel.

* *

T. M.: If the young woman seems to prefer the company of others to yours do not try to attract her by presents of candy or invitations to the "movies." Either make yourself more attractive than any of your rivals or go culling blossoms in other fields. Especially be careful not to outstay any welcome her family may give you.

* *

MARY S.: The man goes first down the aisle of the theater, following the usher. Then comes the woman. Her escort, when the seats are reached, stands aside and lets her enter first.

—GET IT FROM THE FACTORY—ALMOST A GIFT
ONE DOLLAR
In Thirty Days
Solely for advertising purposes we have almost given away more than ten thousand of these magnificent Mantel Clocks; and we have thereby won more than ten thousand permanent customers: for, with the product of nine great factories available to them on open charge account, without the tremendous profits of jobbers and retail stores, people don't go back to the old way of buying their home furnishings. They continue to get them direct from the factory.
There will be about five thousand more of these clocks distributed under this great offer, and then the distribution will end. It is likely you will never have another opportunity to speak for your clock unless you speak NOW; for this advertisement probably will never appear again.
This clock we call the Quaker Valley Masterpiece. We go back to the temples of ancient Greece for its prototype. Stately and dignified in proportions, graceful and harmonious in every outline. On either side of the ivory-like dial stand two sturdy columns, with metal bases and capitals finished in bronze. The metal feet and the ornaments above and below the dial likewise have the rich bronze finish, in pleasing contrast with the perfect simulation of Italian marble upon which they rest. Strikes the hour on the cathedral gong and the half-hour on the melodious cup bell. Runs eight days at one winding and is guaranteed a perfect timepiece. A clock with a successful factory record of more than a hundred years back of it. Height, twelve and one-half inches; width, seventeen inches. Guaranteed to reach you safely and in perfect order.
NOW ALL THAT'S NECESSARY to get one of these clocks while this nation-wide distribution is in progress is to sign and return the following coupon. Send no money with the coupon. The clock will then be shipped by express direct from the factory to your home. Doris Blake Says

If you were born this week you are Sensitive.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

SUPPOSING your birthday falls during the week beginning June 11, then you are a Gemini person, with all the dual personality that goes with this sign; proud, energetic, and shrewd, but always sensitive. And you are ready for a fight if occasion demands, but, ordinarily, prefer not to disturb the existing order of things.

Enemies and friends are yours in about an equal proportion, but you are never malicious in your dislikes. Naturally affectionate, you are apt to place those you love upon a high pedestal, and if by any chance they disappoint you, your sensitive soul is tortured. You have a strong regard for intellectual and scientific achievements, as well as a leaning towards things spiritual and mystic. Your intuitional nature can be cultivated to an almost "uncanny" degree, for unseen influences seem to affect you strongly.

You are musical and poetical and of a happy makeup on the whole, though you do have your "down" spells, when you want to be left alone. It is then that you give vent to harsh words that aren't at all befittting your good half; one might say, your "Mr. Hyde" self was uppermost at such times.

Rather unlike most of your Gemini neighbors, you are a bit inclined to be close in money matters, especially towards your friends. But not so in regard to your business affairs; you tell them in great detail to these same friends, from whom you seek advice but do not always follow it. While strongly disposed to have your own way, you will sacrifice your own desires for the sake of the welfare of your own family.

With all your good traits you're not much of a money maker; you're just naturally impractical in a business way. Your great trouble is that you do not rise to an appreciation of your real worth, nor do you understand how highly you are regarded by those who know you. Stop doubting and criticizing yourself; you'll do immensely better in the end. You're all right, for you really have both commercial and executive ability along with your impracticalness.

But how you do enjoy luxury and ease when they come your way! True, loving, and sympathetic companionship is a vital necessity to you, but it is seldom your good fortune to find this. You constantly suffer misunderstandings and misrepresentations, but you suffer patiently, though you feel keenly. You've just this to remember—if you do not meet with your share of sorrow and suffering, absolutely undeserved, you escape the average lot of those born in this sign. Knowing what to expect, don't let the cares, sorrows, and misfortunes of others weigh so heavily upon your shoulders.

You have great power of expressing yourself and when circumstances are propitious you can be a most entertaining companion, for you do enjoy clean fun.

As a clerk, salesman, lawyer, accountant, literary editor, or bookkeeper, you will be successful, though you will have to, in every case, overcome that natural tendency to change from one occupation to another. But given a responsible position which is congenial and progressive you will settle down with a steady attention that is commendable.

You will find true, helpful friends in Virgo, Aug. 24-Sept. 23, and Aries, March 22-April 20, but marriage with one born in Aquarius, Jan. 21-Feb. 19, or your own sign will probably prove happiest.

Your colors are red, green, blue, and white: birthstone, beryl and sapphire: fortunate weeks, those beginning April 23 and Nov. 14.

* *

She's Made a Discovery.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am acquainted with a young man of whom I am very fond. I see him about three times a week: that is, meet him to talk to. He has asked on three different occasions to take me out, but I refused because I did not think I cared for him. I have discovered since that I do.

"What shall I do to make him ask me to take me out again? I feel as though I cannot get along without him.

"As long as I encourage him slightly he confesses his love for me, but the minute I treat him somewhat indifferent he seems to treat me indifferently also. Please let me know what to do.

"VINIE."

Your note is a regular plus and minus quantity; you say you refused to accept his invitations, then you add, "as long as I encourage him," etc. Now what do you really do, encourage or discourage? And why do you think you have to be in love with a man to accept his attentions? You're a funny girl! I think, under the existing conditions, that you might with propriety, ask him to call, but don't allow this exception to become a custom.

* *

Nothing Slow About Him.

"Dear Miss Blake: Permit me to ask you to give me your advice just once more in regard to my love affairs. Well, I have been getting library books from one of the city libraries for about a year, and I have been in the habit of returning my book over the counter to a young lady about 23 years old.

"I consider her one of the prettiest girls I have ever met, but I do not know any one at the library and don't even know her.

"I am in love with her. She seems to be so refined, and has such a pleasing personality that I would like to propose to her. Of course, I have never been introduced to this young lady, but we have talked frequently together about the various story books.

"I have also invited her to go to the theater in the evening, but received the answer that 'I must not until we are better acquainted.' Will you please advise me whether it would be proper for me to propose?

"C. H. H."

There's nothing slow about you, I must say. To think of considering proposing when you haven't even been introduced to the lady of your heart. Go a bit slower, young man, or you'll be having only a sad memory left. Ask to call on her at her home, and if she allows you this privilege, then it will be time enough to ask to take her to the theater. Keep this proposal idea of yours in the background until you are decidedly sure of your "stand-in."

> Have you a perplexing love affair in which you need the counsel of a friend? Write Doris Blake, care "The Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply send stamped and addressed envelope.

* *

Now They Are "Sore."

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 15 years of age. I have been going with the boys for a good while, and one especially I liked real well.

"I went with him a good bit, more than with any other boy, but when we had a party of couples—the boys were to take the girls to the ice cream parlor—he refused to go with me. He has never given me any reason for this refusal, and we are now 'sore.'

"Can you tell me how I can get him back again, or should I let him go?

"MARION."

My, O, my, to think of any one being so sophisticated at 15! I'd just pretend not to care one bit what this ex-favorite does; that will surprise him to the point of curiosity, I am sure, and perhaps, who knows, it may bring him back to the former state of bliss. If you will just insist on being grown up when you ought to be playing with your dolls, you can expect to have heartaches.

* *

He's Only 19.

"My Dear Miss Blake: I am only 19, but I met a girl about three months ago whom I love, and I think she loves me. She is 17.

"Will it be right for me to tell her I love her and ask her to marry me in a few years, when I can get a start in business?

"I have heard so much about long engagements being bad that I thought I would ask you. C. W. E."

In a few years, yes, but why worry now? Omit the telling altogether for a while; you might change your mind and you might also be mistaken as to her attitude in the matter. You haven't known each other long enough and she is far too young to be bothered with love problems. Wait; that's my advice to you, Mr. Young-in Love.

* *

He Shouldn't Kick.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have been going with a nice girl for the last five months. Lately she became acquainted with a boy two years my senior. She accuses me of trying to make her jealous by looking at or speaking to other girls. What does the name of Ardys mean?

"I. W. J."

Well, what's the trouble? You don't seem to have lost out, and the jealousy she has shown is a mighty good sign that she is interested in you; didn't you know that? If she has her other friends, why shouldn't you, also? There isn't any reason why either of you should give up all your other acquaintances, so don't do it. The name Ardys is a derivative of some surname, so has no especial meaning of its own.

* *

He Doesn't Answer.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 18 years of age. I am in love with a fellow two years my senior. I met him a year ago and he fell in love with me. He wrote to me often until about two months ago. I have written twice since and have received no reply. Should I write again or wait?

"X. X. X."

No, don't write again, unless it be to send a special delivery which he will have to sign; in that way, you can at least be sure he has received your missives. Of course, he may be ill, but two months' silence after such devotion is quite some time to explain, I'll admit. Treat him to the same, that's my advice.

* *

Patronize Home Talent, Boys.

"Dear Miss Blake: We are two boys of 18, and are in love with two girls of 18. These girls live in another town, and they often tell us to come down, and when we go they treat us as though they had never seen us before. Please advise us how we can win their love. J. B. AND L. B."

Your letter gives me the impression that you must have repeated your visit to the girls in the other town. I should think once would be enough for two young men of 18 to be given the "unwelcome sign" from any girls. Why not bestow your affections upon home girls? There must be nice ones in your town. You'll save money and disappointment patronizing home talent, maybe.

* *

He Must Be Cured.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have been reading your columns, but have failed to see any cure to stop smoking. Will you publish a good cure as soon as you can?

"L."

I suppose there may be some connection between love affairs and smoking; in fact, I know that often this subject is a great bone of contention between lovers. But I don't like to take a stand too decidedly on either side of the fence, though. This habit, like drinking, once acquired, seems often to get a fatal hold. The point is, I don't think a woman need be a tyrant about a man's smoking unless indulged in to excess, but where to draw the line for the hundreds of thousands, that's the rub.

Meaning of Names.

"Dear Miss Blake: Will you please give me the meanings of the names Adeline, Lucille, Emma, Anna, Frances, Jessie, Katherine, Louise, Virginia, Florence, and Courtney?"

Evidently I am to cover the family and neighbors in this answer. To live up to her name, Adeline should be a princess of noble birth; Lucille is the poetical derivative of the masculine, Lucius, meaning "born at break of day," as does also Louise; Emma, the short for Emeline, applies to the energetic, industrious type of girl; Anna should have "grace"; Frances, "free"; Jessie, "wealth"; Katherine, spelled with a K or a C, means "pure"; Virginia, just as you would infer, means "virginlike in purity"; Florence, "blooming or flourishing"; Courtney is a surname, hence has no original meaning. A Hill Climbing Test.

I have a friend who is a large woman. Before her engagement she always was bewailing the fact that her weight was around 180. After meeting the man whom she afterwards married she became quite reconciled to being large because he always was praising her "wonderful figure" and expressing loud admiration for "fine big women." No "broomstick" for him; "there was something to a big woman." About a year after their marriage I went out with them in their new car. All went well until the car refused to climb a steep hill. After three or four failures to get even half way up this man looked at his wife and said in a disgusted tone: "No car on earth could climb this hill with a heavyweight like you in the back seat."

Looks About the Same.

My fiancé always observed my birthday, Christmas, and such occasions with pleasant little reminders.

After a few years of married life I began to notice that he was forgetful, so I said to him: "Dear, can it be possible that you have forgotten this is my birthday?"

And the artful rascal answered: "Well, you see it is only natural that I should; there isn't really a thing about you to remind me that you are a day older than you were a year ago." C. W.

Twenty Minutes Late.

Before we were married I thought she had the best disposition in the world. When we had been married ten months, I was twenty minutes late to dinner one night. There were no preparations in the dining room and when I went into the kitchen my wife stood by the stove with a plate heaped with food. Taking off the cover of the stove, she dumped the whole thing into the fire, saying, "There goes your dinner, sir. Let it be a lesson to you and don't keep me waiting again."

Love Needs a Bracer.

I was young when I married and knew practically nothing about cooking and used repeatedly to warn my lover when pressed to set the wedding day that I did not know how to cook, but he would wave the excuse aside and remark, "O, that's nothing; I don't eat much and love makes up for poor cooking."

I have, however, noticed that when poor cooking comes in the door love flies out of the window. I now often hear the remark, "For heaven's sake, can't we have something fit to eat?"

I find it takes good food to brace up love. R. H. J.

Sweet Smile and Gentle Hint.

My friend and I were attending field day in a nearby town. We both had our school colors tied around our left arm and a boy whom my friend had known for several years grabbed her colors, but they were tied tight. She looked at him with her sweetest smile and said: "If you take them you'll have to take me, too, John." He said nothing, but the next night she came running over to show me her new ring. And she told me she thought he needed a gentle hint.

Getting His Stride.

I am taking agriculture at a state university, and the other evening an engineer and myself had engagements with a couple of girls for the theater. As we were late I was swinging along with the unusually long stride which is customary with me.

The girl behind said: "Why don't you two keep step?"

The engineer blurted out: "He is hopping clods like all 'ags' do."

My friend lengthened her stride and said back over her shoulder: "Might as well learn to hop clods now as to wait until we go to our farm, hadn't I, Tom?" We all laughed, but I rather suspect it will be back to the farm for me after graduation. R. N. T.

Was He Ready?

It was on a Thursday night, at choir practice, at our church, when a group of young people were gathered in a bunch, that my brother made the remark that he wanted to get rid of his diamond ring by either selling it or giving it away. His steady girl turned to him and said, "When you are ready to give it away let me know." E. E. W.

With Auntie Listening.

This is what happened on the front seat of my auto, nephew driving, with pretty girl he liked beside him, me on the back seat:

"Did you go to the leap year dance?" he asked.

"Uh-huh," she replied; "lots of fun."

"Proposed yet?"

"No. Would, though, if I was sure I'd get accepted."

"Why, any boy'd have to accept if a girl proposed."

"O, do yout hink so? You wouldn't."

"Yes, I would."

"Well, then, I do."

"Do you? Then I accept."

"Surely?"

"Indeed, yes. Auntie," to me, shocked by hearing from the back seat, "Polly and I are engaged."

Aren't you ashamed?" I exclaimed.

Result: June wedding. I should like to ask the gentle reader was he going to if she hadn't, and, if not, should he have accepted? MRS. M. W.

Her Mother Her Rival.

A FEW years ago there lived close to us a widow and her only child, Eva. Eva and I were about the same age [20], and we chummed together, so, of course, I knew all her joys and sorrows.

She was a pretty girl, at least the young men thought so, my brother, James, especially, but the mother would not agree to any matrimonial alliance between Eva and any of her suitors. The truth is, she was jealous of her daughter. She wanted a husband for herself.

My brother James was fond of Eva and she of him, but they had about given up all hope of ever gaining the widow's consent to their marriage.

A Mr. Crane also lived in the neighborhood. He was a bachelor, about 35, and was just crazy to get married. He decided to go courting. He was going about it in a roundabout way by gaining the mother's good will before trying for the daughter, for he concluded that former suitors had not paid due respect to the mother.

He called quite frequently at the widow's house, and, of course, she thought he came to court her, so she always made him welcome. They used to take walks in the park and sometimes visited the ice cream parlors.

Eva had a great deal more freedom now, for her mother did not watch her so closely. She had something of greater interest on her mind. Each day [so the rumor was] she would say to herself, "Well, he'll surely propose before another day," while he was thinking it must be about time to pop the question—for the girl.

As I said, the widow was interested in her own affairs, so neglected to keep an eye on Eva. Eva and my brother grew fonder of each other every day, and finally they just couldn't wait any longer, so they eloped.

When the widow learned the news she did not faint and fall over, as every one expected. She might have done so had Mr. Crane been there to catch her. But when Eva and I told Mr. Crane, you should have seen him. He grew pale, and then came out with the whole story. That's how I know all about it.

He said he guessed the good Lord intended for him to be an old bachelor, so he wasn't going to try again to get married. Of course, we were much affected by his story. It never entered any one's head that he was after the girl. In fact, it was rumored all over town that he and the widow were engaged. We gave him a little tip, and he brightened up and asked: "Do you really suppose she would have me?" Says Eva: "Why, you silly, can't you see she's crazy about you?"

Pretty soon after we left, we saw him going over toward the widow's as fast as his short legs could carry him.

That was four years ago and Eva and I live about 600 miles apart, but we write to each other, and she says they are all as happy as any one could wish to be and she likes her stepdaddy fine. G. D. C.

"Hello, Bill, where is you doin?" he called.

"No place," answered Billy.

"Where'd you say you was doin'?" Junior repeated.

"No place," was the response.

Junior turned in disgust: 'But, mother, look at 'im walkin'." G. E. S.

After being troubled with some unpleasant visits from the doctor Sidney was asked if he felt any pain. He asked a little suspiciously, "Is the doctor coming today?" He was assured the doctor was not coming. "Well, then," he reluctantly answered, "it hurts a little bit." S. P.

Lionel while playing around the kitchen range at grandma's burned his hand quite severely. His mother in relating the incident would say: "It happened at my mother-in-law's." A friend of the family, meeting Lionel some time afterward, exclaimed, "Where did you get the burn?" to which the youngster replied, "At my mother-in-law's." MRS. J. G.

A little boy in the next block is wild about his rabbits. Every time he sees anybody, he mentions his rabbits. One day when he was talking to me I said to him, Richard forget about your rabbits for a little while, he exclaimed: "I can't. Didn't you know they were adopted in the family long before you was?" M. Shirley visited his Aunt Peggy, who has a canary bird which takes its bath in a square dish made of three sides glass, and is attached to the cage from day to day. Looking up as he entered the room, Shirley admiringly said: "Gee Aunt Peggy, that's a swell bird cage with a sun parlor on it." P. J.

Vera had been told repeatedly not to contradict older people. One day a man came to the house on business, and as he stood patting her little 2 year old sister on the head he said to Vera, "What's his name?" Marie was a bright little girl. She had many friends among the "grown ups," and was especially fond of one particular woman but had never known where she lived. While taking a stroll one day she was surprised to see this woman standing in her own doorway. She looked at her an instant, then exclaimed, "I knew you was you, but I didn't know you lived here." T. To Avoid Eating Too Much.

WHAT is the most practical way for people over 40 to keep from overeating? There is positively no surer way to overcome this bad habit than to cut out bread, or never to use it except when making an entire meal of it, with butter and either coffee or tea. Fat is not inevitable, but any man who is fat and eats bread at three meals and with every course of a meal is defying his intelligence.

Let them cease eating bread with the soup, with meat, with vegetables, and never eat bread with crackers or salad, and any man or woman of overweight may safely and slowly lose their excess. It is not a foolish prescription, like so many in vogue, which impose horrible injustices on the organs which take care of wastes such as the products of rapid breakdown are. These organs are always abused, in rapid reduction, though they may not complain until later on.

Bread is an acid making food, if just as good as it can be. If it is not perfectly digested, it ferments in the digestive channel and makes a worse sort of acid. On the other hand, potato is not acid making, but a splendid basic food which neutralizes acids, and, besides this, it is never so sophisticated in the cooking as flour is in breadmaking.

If there is one request I dislike to receive it is for a bread recipe. The world is full of good recipes, but fuller of bad bread made by those who think they are following the perfectly good recipes and in too many cases do not know that their bread is bad. I do not like to put a good bread recipe, more than that for anything else, into the hands of an incompetent or inexperienced person, for I know what kind of bread she will have, and the less she has reasoned on the problem of breadmaking the more likely is she to hold me responsible for the results she gets. I know this is true. I do not make bread often, because I prefer to get my starchy fuel in other forms.

It is one of the easiest things in the world to cook pearl or big hominy, or what is sometimes called samp. It makes a delicious breakfast or Sunday night supper, or it can be used with plain butter to eat with bacon or into a soufflé of the type that you would have to use a hammer to make fall. These soufflés and other bread or cake like things, made with some cereal and eggs, are among the most wholesome of foods—no residue of baking powder, no products of fermentation as with yeast.

Rice is always a splendid substitute for bread, and brown rice is in as high esteem as the whole wheat breads and for the same reason. Whole wheat cooked has exactly the same type of palatability as the best bread, the same flavor, but a flavor seldom to be found in the bread. Farina is a coarse form of the wheat, too little used, but capable of being presented in many palatable forms. It is such foods that make it easy to get on without bread unless you can get the best, but having the best is often to overeat.

If anybody really wants to make bread, really and earnestly desires to have this accomplishment, I would be the last to discourage them. But I would have them take the matter seriously. There is plenty of splendid literature on the subject considered at length, and some of the best is to be had for the asking. There is, for instance, "Some Points on Making and Judging of Bread," by Isabel Bevier of the department of household science of the University of Illinois. This gives forty-four pages of specific help, and, while published especially for the housewives of Illinois, is used all over the country.

This bulletin has pictures which will help any beginner to judge her product, but best of all it is the record of the experiences in breadmaking of many thoroughly in earnest people, both instructors and students, working at the problems of breadmaking for years. They did not speak of their "luck" with a batch of bread.

From this bulletin the beginner may learn what kinds of flour to use, the different amounts of liquid to use with different flours (granular take most), what are the kinds, influences, and behavior of yeasts, how much alcohol they develop in the fermentation (it is driven off in the baking), the influences of salt, sugar, shortening, the temperature of rising and baking, the kinds of pans to use, etc.

A great number of people want to make whole wheat bread. They cannot do it with the best recipe, unless they can make a good white bread, but when they can they may substitute the whole wheat, except for the kneading, and have good results. The recipes advise doubling the yeast, or even using three times as much, and it is because so much yeast is used that baker's whole wheat bread is anything but a health food. Too much sweetening is added to a kind of flour that has more of a wheat flavor than does white. And finally no two flours, whether white or whole wheat, are exactly the same, so it requires experience to tell how much to use.

A Scientific Bread Recipe.

One of Miss Bevier's students tabulated the bread recipes of twelve standard cook books. This table showed that most authorities used for one loaf of bread one cup of liquid to three of flour. Water was more often preferred than milk, although in five cases half milk and half water was used. The amount of yeast varied from one-eighth to one-half a one ounce cake per loaf, and there were similar variations in sugar, shortening, etc.

Perhaps the most compact statement in the shape of a recipe in the bulletin mentioned, and one that Miss Bevier would most fully indorse, is this: One teaspoon of salt, one teaspoon of sugar, one teaspoon of butter, one cup of water, one-half cake of compressed yeast, three and six-tenths cups of flour.

"The cup of water, having been measured at room temperature, was warmed to 107.6 degrees F.; three-fourths of it was added to the butter, salt and sugar, in a mixing bowl, and one-fourth of it was used to soften the yeast. The yeast mixture was added to the liquid in the bowl, then the flour, slightly warmed, was beaten in gradually. The dough was kneaded for twenty minutes and put to rise at 78.8 degrees F., until double in bulk. It was then made into a loaf and again put to rise until doubled in bulk in the pan. In many cases three risings instead of two were allowed. The loaf was baked in a gas range for forty-five minutes.

"The oven temperature most used was 356 degrees F. for ten minutes, 356 to 455 degrees F., rising gradually during fifteen minutes, and 424.4 degrees F. for twenty minutes. The size of the pan was 8½x3½x3 inches."

Boiled Pearl Hominy.

Compare this recipe with the above in its simplicity. The product yields fundamentally the same sort of food. Pick over and wash in several waters one cup of "big" hominy and put into a four quart aluminum kettle, with a cover which may be clamped on, with eight cups of cold water. Bring slowly to a boil, then cover and reduce the flame to the lowest point and simmer for three hours. The amount of steam in the kettle and the low boiling point are such as to cook this perfectly in a time shorter than is generally prescribed and without its being necessary to soak the hominy even for one minute.

Hominy Soufflé.

One cup of hominy with the jellied liquid in which it was cooked, two eggs, one-fourth cup of sugar or sugar to taste, nutmeg or other flavoring. There should not be too much of the jellied liquid, but with a little this holds up even under exceptional circumstances, and for some time after it is baked, where other soufflés would fall. Beat whites and yolks separately. Sweeten yolks and stir in the hominy, then fold in the whites thoroughly, pour into buttered baking dish, and bake from twenty to thirty minutes in an oven between 350 and 375 degrees Fahrenheit.

Hominy Rocks or Fancies.

These are of the kiss variety of little cake, palatable, but not easy to make, because the cooked hominy must be neither too wet nor too dry. One cup of rather dry cooked hominy to one egg white and half a cup of sugar are the proportions, with some flavoring. They must be baked in an oven on inverted iron dripping pan that will toughen the egg somewhat so that it will hold the hominy, but not so hot as to burn the cakes. They cannot be made with the whole egg.

Farina Savory.

Cook four tablespoons of farina in one pint of milk for ten minutes, starting materials cold and stirring all the time. Allow to cool and then prepare just like the hominy soufflé. It is a soufflé, but the English name is used, since this is the type of dish they use much just before the celery or lettuce or radishes served at the end of a meal. It may or may not be sweetened. It may be served with a sauce or without. It comes the nearest of being bread, cake, and pudding in one of any dish there is.

"Well, I Should Say 'Gets-It' DOES Work"

"Look a' There, If You Don't Think It's Just Wonderful for Corns!"

"Bless my stars, look at it! Land of the livin'! Why, just look at it! That corn came right off—just like peeling bananas. Put your finger on my toe, right there—don't be afraid—that's it—feel how smooth the skin is? Well, that's where the corn was. Well, that beats all!" That's the way "Gets-It" works on all corns, every corn, every time. It's the new, simple way of curing corns. You'll say good-bye to all foolish contraptions like bundling bandages, sticky tape, plasters, toe-eating salves, and grave-diggers, such as knives, razors and scissors. "Gets-It" stops pain. Applied in 2 seconds. Never fails. Nothing to stick to, hurt, or press on the corn.

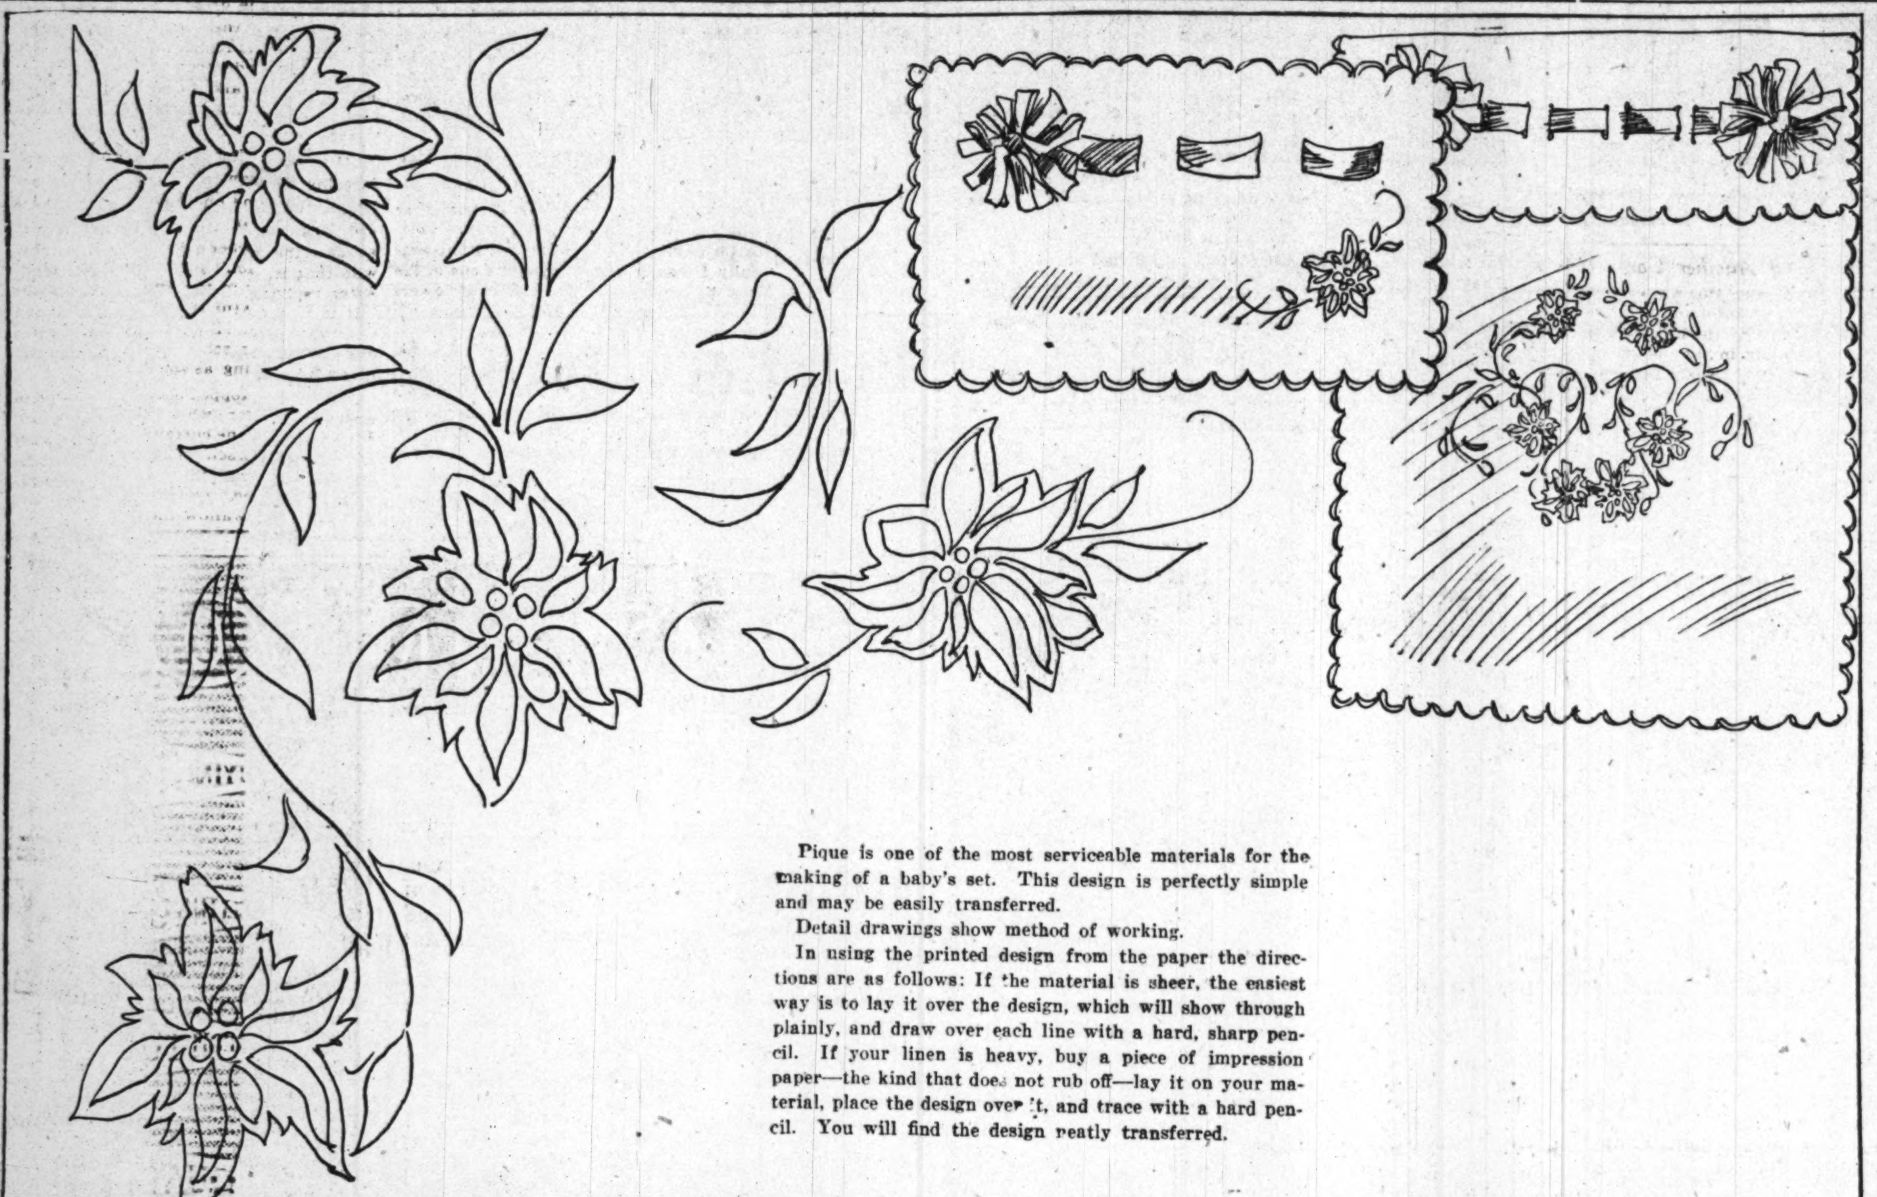
Embroidered Carriage Set for Baby.



Pique is one of the most serviceable materials for the making of a baby's set. This design is perfectly simple and may be easily transferred.

Detail drawings show method of working.

In using the printed design from the paper the directions are as follows: If the material is sheer, the easiest way is to lay it over the design, which will show through plainly, and draw over each line with a hard, sharp pencil. If your linen is heavy, buy a piece of impression paper—the kind that does not rub off—lay it on your material, place the design over it, and trace with a hard pencil. You will find the design neatly transferred.

How I Won My Mate.

How did you win the love of your mate? What measures, if any, did you adopt? "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on "How I Won My Mate." Write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, "The Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

Making It Hot for Him.

I lived in the country, where kerosene lamps were used, and one night there were some boys and girls at our house. We were all having a glorious time when some one tipped the table accidentally, knocking the lamp off. The girls screamed and ran towards the door, knocking down chairs and everything that came in their way; but I stepped outside, took the door mat, and threw it on the flames, extinguishing them. Before leaving one young man complimented me on my presence of mind in putting out the flames and said that I had started another flame burning that I could not extinguish. We have now been married three years and the flame is still burning, I fanning instead of trying to extinguish it. A. J. H.

Courting a Widow.

I was in love with a young widow, but I was awkward and bashful and there were other more popular young men who also sought her hand. I learned that she was in the habit of leaving her little son with her sister-in-law, only a block from her own home, while she went out, for she was a social favorite. I formed the habit of dropping in to call at the home of her sister-in-law, whose husband was a friend of mine, when I knew that she would soon be coming for her little son. Sometimes when he was tired and sleepy I carried him home in my arms. She has always said that this won her heart from the first and that is how I won my mate. E. W.

Won by Her Courage.

On my twentieth birthday, mother gave me a party, to which were invited a dozen or so of my best friends. Among them was a young man whom I secretly admired, but up to this time he had treated me with only the same courtesy that he used with all the other girls.

During the evening one of the boys who was always up to some practical joke or other surreptitiously took from his pocket a mechanical toy which bore an extremely natural resemblance to a live mouse. When there was a brief lull in the merrymaking he jumped from his chair and cried, "What's that?" as the contrivance, released from beneath his foot, went streaking across the floor.

Somebody screamed, "It's a mouse!" and most of the girls immediately became hysterical. As I had been suspicious of the joker's warning, I calmly walked over to the corner and picked up the object, showing the others how they had been victimized.

When the party broke up, the young man of whom I was so fond stayed until the others had gone, and as he held my hand to say good-night he told me how much he liked my courage. In a short time we were engaged, and now that we are married he often speaks of my bravery, declaring that thsi incident was the cause of his final decision. L. B.

An Anonymous Flirtation.

Walter was such a bashful fellow! When I was a bookkeeper I used to watch him over the top of my desk when he came in to have any work done. I didn't know any name for him except the nickname which all the men around the office good naturedly applied to him, but I often sat there and wondered about him. He was a fine looking, broad shouldered fellow, but it was amusing to see him color when spoken to in the presence of a woman.

When I had been with the company about a year I began to receive anonymous post cards. This at first was interesting to me, I'll admit, but later I became annoyed when every Monday morning I received a card with a different postmark, but the same handwriting. I did not connect this incident with the fact that the bashful young man had stopped coming in the office where I worked and was doing considerable traveling in connection with his work as a surveyor.

Finally one Monday I received a photograph instead of a post card. It bore no name and no letter accompanied it. I did not recognize the picture, but felt sure it was the "anonymous" who had been pestering me with his post cards, so I showed it to my employer and he immediately recognized 'Sandy,' as they called him.

After much persuasion on the part of my co-workers in the office I acknowledged receipt of the photo by purchasing a picture of a typical "old maid" and sending it to him at his home address, bearing the words, "Your photo was fine. How do you like mine?—Anonymous."

This might have been flirtation on my part, but it led up to a meeting, and finally a happy marriage within two years, and this union is blessed with a "Bashful Walter Jr." G. A.

Housekeeping Mistakes.

Did you make absurd mistakes when you first started housekeeping? Of course you did. Every bride has. So tell us about it. And if you are a man—well, surely you can remember what your wife did. The funnier the experiences the better. For every letter published "The Tribune" will pay $1. Keep your story on one side of the paper and within 300 words and address it to Housekeeping Experience Editor, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." No manuscripts returned.

She Struck the Spoon.

I was preparing "mock turtle" for the evening meal and just as I was stuffing the meat with bread crumbs the telephone rang. I answered the call, came back to the kitchen, sewed up the meat, and put it in the oven.

I was delighted with the result, it was so nicely and evenly browned. I brought it into the table and James heaved a sigh of satisfaction at the sight of it. He started to carve and after a few moments he was "sawing" the meat. "Good night, but this is tough!" he said. "Here, you cut it."

I did so. The knife struck something hard and after a few minutes' labor I withdrew a tablespoon which had been used to stuff it! M. H.

Spearing the Dumplings.

I was a bride and we were planning at breakfast to have lamb stew for dinner. As my husband was leaving he called back. "Don't forget to thicken the stew. You know—a half cup flour to a cup of water." And I answered with dignity, "Why, certainly, I know," as I was getting a little peeved at him for always telling me what to do.

At dinner time I prepared to thicken the stew and threw in half a cup of flour and added a cup of water. The flour floated off in little balls, but the stew refused to thicken and I kept adding more flour, then more water, until I had to change it to the largest pot I had.

Finally I had about a gallon of the stuff and a lot of little balls that I assumed to be dumplings, but the stew did not thicken. And it was really funny to see hubby at dinner spearing those balls and disclosing a bale of dry flour cooked on the outside. Poor fellow! But I was only 17. M. L. A.

She Was Easily Bothered.

My father and other company were coming on a Thanksgiving visit, and as dad was very fond of pumpkin pie, I was baking an extra large number. A neighbor came in while I was baking. Being new at the work, I was easily bothered, and in some way used the wrong spice jar. The pies were lovely looking, but when it came to eating—O, my! It was cayenne pepper instead of ginger. I shall never hear the last of those pies. S. V. C.

Corned Beef and Cabbage.

When I first came to Chicago I had never heard of corn beef and cabbage. One day my husband remarked of having had corn beef and cabbage in a restaurant. Later on he told me to get some, so the next Sunday morning I set off for the butcher and grocer. I bought one pound of beef, a can of corn, and one head of cabbage. Upon my return home, my husband had the laugh on me. We had corn, beef, and cabbage, anyhow. Mrs. A. P.

A Dish of Dahlia Bulbs.

I was called to Grand Traverse last fall to keep house for my widower brother. One day in the latter part of the winter my Indian helper informed me that there was nothing in the vegetable line for dinner but cabbage. We had served cabbage every day.

I visited the cellar and discovered a half bushel of a new species of vegetables I decided they were a choice variety of white carrots. They were grown together in clusters of three and five. I carried a five cluster up stairs, cleaned them and put them on to cook. I prepared a rich and well seasoned white sauce.

The carrots tasted to me like horse radish. My brother took two mouthfuls and dropped his spoon.

"What do you call this mixture?" he questioned.

"I thought them white carrots," I answered. "I found them in the basket in the vegetable cellar."

"That is my dahlia bulb basket," roared my brother. H. M. W.

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING·HAND

By MARION HARLAND

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

"I SEND you with this a direction how to get rid of ants. Ants go in colonies. If you put anything out to drive them away, you turn them down on other sections of the house or send them to your neighbors. They will eat almost anything, but are especially fond of bones or pieces of meat from the table. Lay such pieces of meat on the bare floor or on a piece of oilcloth near to the ants' 'run' and in a short time it will be covered with the insects. Prepare strips of newspapers, folded several times. Light one end and as soon as the blaze is good pass it close over the bone, back and forth; move the bone to get those ants on the under side. Repeat this a few times and you will get every member of that colony. The premises can be rid of every such colony in short order. "S. J. M."

This is a novel way of getting rid of ants and I am glad to print it. They are such annoying pests that always some are is troubled by them and eager to find out a method of disposing of them that will not drive them into other parts of the house.

* *

Magazines to Donate.

"We have several magazines that we would be glad to give to any one who could pay postage upon them. "Mrs. C. W. D."

Is there some one who would like to have the magazines offered? If so, I will send the address of Mrs. C. W. D. on the receipt of a stamped and self-addressed envelope accompanying the request. I cannot advertise for the missing numbers you request, but you might secure them by writing to the publisher of the magazine.

* *

Hatching Canary Eggs.

"In reply to 'Cornerette's' inquiry regarding the length of time necessary for a canary bird's eggs to hatch, I would say that it requires fourteen days for each egg to hatch out. Keep your watchful eyes on the parent birds after the brood is hatched, as occasionally they eat the eggs or show neglect in feeding their babies. Soon you can get the young birds used to your hand and then you can train them and make great pets of them. I have raised canary birds [not for profit] for years and have a lot of interesting experiences that I would exchange in correspondence with 'Cornerette' or any other lover of these birds. Mrs. E. L. C."

I regret to say that I have not the address of "Cornerette," but I print this letter in the hope that it may meet her eyes or those of some other lover of birds who would like to be put into communication with this correspndent.

* *

Want a Doll and Things.

"Two little girls, one 8 and the other 12 years old, want a doll and some books and quilt scraps. Their initials are N. F. and M. F."

Can some one send the desires of their hearts to these little girls? I am sure there must be other little girls more fortunate than they who would be glad to share their possessions in the lines of books and dolls and quilt pieces with these less lucky ones.

* *

Plants to Exchange.

"Please ask some of the Cornerites to send me some galax leaves and cut rhododendron blooms and I will return the favor with plants. I am a semi-invalid. I wish some of the Corner would write to me. Mrs. M. J. M."

I am sure there should be no difficulty in this writer's getting the leaves and blossoms she desires. Also there must be some Cornerite who would like to write to her. Her address will be sent to applicants on receipt of stamped and self directed envelope.

* *

Infant's Clothes Needed.

"Here I come to offer and to ask favors. If any member of the Corner has any silk and velvet pieces for quilts to give away I would be glad to get them, and in return I would be happy to do crochet work for the giver. Also if any one has infants' clothes which are no longer needed I would be thankful for a few, as I expect to become a mother this summer and our slender income is not sufficient to enable us to prepare for the coming of this little stranger as I would like to do. The overflow of the river swept this country last winter and we were among the unfortunate ones who suffered from it. This accounts for our present distress. "Mrs. N. C. R."

The cheery note of the writer of this letter indicates that she has not lost her courage, whatever else the river swept away. I hope there may be numerous Cornerites who will feel inclined to aid her from their stores and who will write to me promptly for her address, inclosing stamp.

* *

Wants of a Small Invalid.

"I have a little girl 9 years old who is an invalid from nervous trouble. She would like to receive dolls, toys, or cards from those who have them to spare and would be most grateful for them. I would like to exchange a set of twelve French waxed rose favors of any color for ten yards of good percaline or ten yards of bleached muslin. E. V. L."

I trust the wish of the little girl may be gratified and that the exchange the mother desires may be arranged as well. The personal letter accompanying the one for publication asked me to do something beyond my power. I have nothing to do with the department of work to which the correspondent refers and must therefore regretfully tell her I cannot assist her in the manner she wishes.

* *

Reading Matter to Give.

"I have on hand many interesting magazines and papers I would mail to parties wishing them, and also interesting magazines with useful stories for a Sunday school class. C. P."

Offers of this kind are always welcome, and I hope that the requests for the reading matter referred to may be accompanied by stamped and self-addressed envelope.

* *

Substitute for Butter.

"I want to add my mite to the Helping Hand department, from which I have received so much benefit. Here is a recipe for preparing beef suet as a substitute for butter in making cakes, cookies, rolls, etc.: Cut fresh beef suet into small pieces, add to every pound of suet one cup of sweet milk, or, better still, sweet cream. Bake in a moderate oven until the fat can be pressed out. When the fat begins to cool beat to a light cream. When prepared in this way it will keep sweet indefinitely and has a rich, nutty flavor. C. E. Y."

This is gratefully received and should prove of value to housekeepers.

An Exchange and a Suggestion.

"I am a constant reader of the Corner and obtain much benefit from it. Here is an exchange and a suggestion. If any one of the Cornerites has any kind of silk or silky like goods, satin or ribbon scraps, one inch square and larger, or scraps of cotton goods, I should like to have them, and for half a pound or more of them I will send in return ten or twelve copies of classical and sheet music. Now, to those who have gardens with tender plants up, such as English peas, lettuce, or onions, and are pestered with the sparrows picking the leaves off, this may prove beneficial: Take common grocery twine or cord; tie pieces together long enough to reach across the garden, then cut long strips of paper about two or three inches wide. Tie the strips on to the cord about a foot apart; then stretch this twine a half foot above your plants so that the paper strips may dangle and flutter when there is a breeze. The effect is to keep the birds away from the sprouts. Much of the destruction of the tender plants is done by the pesky sparrows and the smaller herbivorous creatures are made to bear all the blame. "Mrs. J. C. M."

I am sure all garden lovers will welcome this common sense mode of frightening away birds from their plants. The suggestion is especially valuable at this time and deserves to be repaid by the contribution of the pieces such as are asked, even without the return offered in the line of music. I shall hope to receive applications for the name and address of this correspondent.

The perspiration exudes in increased quantities, carrying with it waste, poisonous germ matter, which, unless removed, promptly clogs the pores and irritates the scalp. The difficulty of keeping the hair and scalp sweet and clean in the summer only renders the use of NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE more imperative.

There is nothing that will give greater comfort on a hot day than an application of HERPICIDE. It induces a sense of coolness and cleanliness besides imparting health and strength to the hair. One's personal charm and attractiveness is enhanced by the increased gloss and beauty of the hair due to the intelligent use of HERPICIDE, society's best known scalp prophylactic.

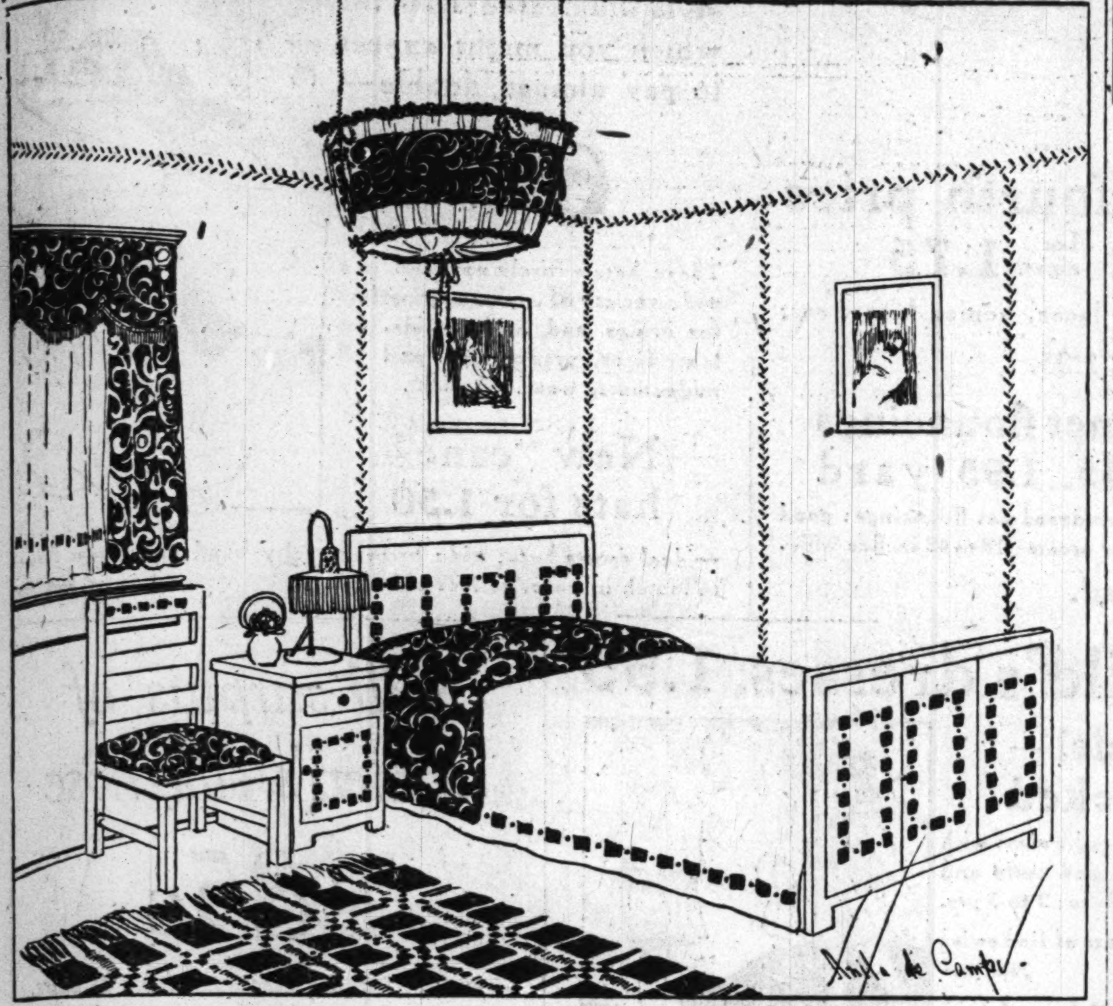
The Home Harmonious

A Girl's Room in Summer

Anita de Campi



Miss de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to interior decorations. Address your letter to Miss Anita de Campi, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. Inclose a stamped, addressed envelope if you wish a personal reply.

WHEN the girl of the house—the grammar school girl—is going to spend her vacation at home, her own room becomes an important factor in her scheme of happiness for the summer months. Now, that room is going to be not merely a place to sleep in, as it has been during the school term, but a place to live much of her time in as well.

Wouldn't it be nice to do it over so that it will be charming for the whole summer? It will, of course, have to be in some style that will inspire neatness, and the wise mother will stipulate in doing the redecorating that daughter shall keep the room in order herself.

There is more than one practical advantage in this plan. It will give the child an occupation of which the closing of school has deprived her. There is really nothing that makes one so downright discontented as idleness. Resting is all very good if it doesn't develop into lazing, which is abominable.

The girl who takes upon herself the duty of keeping her own room in order acquires methodical habits of neatness that will serve her through life. She will also learn through the actual experience of manual labor a perfectly humane consideration for the domestics employed to do that work for her later in life.

There is no question but that habitual neatness in one's surroundings minimizes labor, and it is impossible to be neat with an accumulation of trashy articles scattered all about the place. "These things are souvenirs," the girl will say, "and I care for them."

Well, then, let us begin by providing a pleasing receptacle for what looks to the casual observer like trash, but is to the owner "treasure trove." Have, first of all, a treasure box. This may be a plain pine box with a hinged lid. I have seen one made out of an ordinary beer box, ornamented by the owner with painted motifs or a covering of chintz.

* *

Into the box will be thrown dance invitations, favors, banners, buttons, programs, anything, everything that so many girls tack up on their walls or mirrors or strew over their mantel, shelves, and draperies. The box will be fitted with a padlock, and the contents disclosed to intimate girl friends on rare occasions. It will be called a memory box, and if it is a really good piece of furniture it may later become a hope chest, and later yet—but it is too early in life to speculate on that.

If the box cannot for some reason be obtained, a drawer with a special lock and key will answer. That, at any rate, disposes for the moment of all miscellaneous small dust catching baubles.

The next item to be whipped into line is the photograph. Buy an artists' sketch folio and cover it with printed linen, chintz, or cretonne—a remnant of material used in the room. Fill the folio with loose sheets of gray art paper cut a trifle smaller than the folio, paste your photographs on these loose sheets, and you will have a collection easily handled, convenient to show, and the pictures will be kept nice and clean. This they would not be if they were left standing about unframed.

Keep things put away. That is the secret of neatness. No room can be kept tidy without a scrap basket in it, and that item, sad to say, is sometimes overlooked.

All a far sounds a bit like a lecture, but now I am going to tell you about a girl's room that is just finished and that is really lovely. Last year the odd lot of furniture used in this room had been painted a dull turquoise. The wall paper was a light gray and white stripe. The brown painted floor had a large, old rug on it. The woodwork was Mississippi pine and the tiles in the mantel yellow.

The Wilton rug was too badly worn to be used again. Mother had found at a sale two rugs made of strips of felt—navy blue, light Wedgwood blue, and white, woven into a plaid. These were extremely inexpensive and warranted to wash, and so she bought a large and a small one, only to find, when they arrived, that the light Wedgwood blue in the rug and the turquoise blue of the furniture were quite impossible together.

Now, it is a well known fact that any two colors can be made to harmonize by the addition of other colors judiciously chosen. So we selected for this room a beautiful printed linen. It was on a white ground, and we painted the woodwork white, and it showed in the design leaves of turquoise, sage, and Wedgwood blue—touches of navy blue and flowers in brilliant yellow, with bright orange veins and edges. The finding of this particular linen was a stroke of luck. It seemed to have been made for the room, as if it were comprised all of the other erstwhile inharmonious colors in the room.

The brown floor was painted navy blue and the lovely linen was repeated at focal points in the room. It was expensive, and for that reason could not be used too lavishly. Instead of making a whole bedspread of it, a bolster throw was used—a simple breadth, edged with fringe, and tucked over and under the pillows, hanging free at the ends. Then a spread was made of Wedgwood blue denim, with a neat trim of navy blue and white checks, with an orange dot in the middle of each white check. This border was stenciled on [it could have been embroidered or appliqued], and the stencil was repeated as a decoration on the head and foot board of the bed, on the chairs and other furniture.

The cushion and lambrequins were of stamped linen. The ugly electrolier in the middle of the room was of white silk with a wide linen band made into it, as shown in the sketch. It was lined with yellow and finished with a navy blue ruching, and suspended from four hooks in the ceiling by navy silk cords and tassels.

The girl herself offered a cunning suggestion when she saw that but half a yard of linen remained and she wanted a dresser cover of it. Her dresser had an adjustable glass top, and so she cut out some of the flowers and arranged them on the dresser top, placing the glass back over them. They looked as though they were painted there. Then she removed her mirror, grouped a few more flowers toward one side on it, and before putting it back in the frame, asked to have a piece of plain glass fitted over it, to hold the flowers in place and keep them clean.

The effect was striking. It would be hard to find a room more attractively girlish than this one. The pictures were taken from a gift book—a poem exquisitely illustrated in color, matted and framed in white enamel. They were charmingly unified, appropriate to the girl's age, and betokened fine personal taste.

Answers to Inquiries.

R. B.: I should advise your getting either silk or sunfast in a soft stripe of blue and yellowish tan. I do not believe that you would like cretonne with your Chinese rug. The two styles of ornamental design would be too clashing.

* *

L. H.: Paper your hall in a self-colored tan paper. Certainly you can get a black bench for your piano. Do not use a stool. Paper your bedroom in light yellow striped paper, and use chintz for your curtains. Use delicate warm gray in the room with the blue and white furniture. Use old blue in your living room. Grass cloth would be good.

* *

MRS. A. E.: Draperies in doorways which are supplied with doors are not popular, the doors themselves being deemed sufficient. Between the light brown room and light blue room, if you try mixing paint in both of these colors together, you will get the right shade to use for your draperies. It will be a sort of greenish gray like the burr of chestnuts. A folding sofa would be better in your dining room than a sanitary couch.

* *

R. M. B.: If possible throw your living and dining room in one, using a good gateleg table, and dispense with the formal dining room set. Have several Windsor chairs, one or two rush bottom chairs, a good sized davenport, and one or two upholstered pieces. Use cottage furniture in your bedroom. Have a plain deal table in the kitchen and paint your woodwork in some light color and also paint one wooden chair and stool to match the woodwork.

* *

D. C.: With the scheme that you have, could you not have a dull gray stone fireplace instead of the red brick? Have a soft shade of green for your rug in the dining room. Your choice of colors for the living room is excellent. Let the breakfast room be the same and liven it with a border of paper printed to match the chintz that you will use in there. Your colors are well chosen. Let the hall be a delicate gray green.

Plant Rooms.

EVERY woman who loves flowers and desires to make the home as attractive as possible by their cheerful and refining influence during the long winter months some day wants to have a room in which to grow plants—a room made expressly for their use.

She knows, from experience, that it is impossible to grow flowers as well in the living room as they can be grown in places where it is possible to meet their requirements more fully than one can hope to where the conditions are all against them.

I wish I could prevail on every person who is building a new home to omit bay windows and substitute for them a little plant room. It ought to open off the living room, and be so connected with the latter by glass doors that the plants in it can be seen by the family at all times.

In such a room water can be used freely, to counteract the dryness which characterizes the air of the living room as a general thing. In it the temperature can be regulated to suit the needs of the plants and insects can be fought without subjecting the occupants of the home to an ordeal almost as disagreeable as that which the enemy is expected to undergo.

* *

In such a room it is possible to grow many plants which one cannot hope to succeed with in the window garden that is part of the living room. A room of this kind will afford the woman who loves flowers far more pleasure than her parlor, no matter how attractively it may be furnished.

It is not worth while for me, in this connection, to suggest plans for such an addition to the home, for this part of the work logically belongs to the man who plans the building. Tell him what you want, and let him make his plans accordingly. Simply insist on its walls being glass, as far as it is possible to make them so, with a glass roof.

If he is not familiar with plants and their requirements he will probably consult some one who is and who knows how a room expressly for their use should be fashioned, and the knowledge thus gained will govern him in its construction.

A good many changes will be made in many homes during the summer and fall. If there is a porch or veranda on the east or south sides of the house that can be dispensed with, let me suggest that it be made over into a plant room. This can be done, in most instances without a great deal of trouble and expense.

Have it inclosed with glass, using as large panes as possible, as you want all the light it is possible to get, and as little woodwork as you can get along with, as the more woodwork there is the less light there will be.

* *

If the house is heated with a furnace extend a pipe from the basement or cellar in which the furnace is located and let it open into the middle of the plant room floor. Hot air is not considered as the best method of heating rooms containing plants, but much of its objectionable quality can be overcome by keeping a vessel of water constantly evaporating on the register.

In winter storm windows should be put on to afford extra protection from cold. Ventilation should be arranged for by admitting fresh air at the bottom, through a pipe that can be closed when a sufficient amount of fresh air has been supplied, and another pipe in the roof through which the vitiated air can be allowed to escape. This should be so arranged that it can be closed when the air in the room has reached a certain temperature, as, if left open, much of the heat in the room will pass off through it.

In a room of this kind, made out of an old veranda or porch, one can regulate conditions in such a manner as to secure results that can never be gained when plants are grown in the living room. The air can be kept moist enough to prevent the red spider from doing harm.

Dust can be kept from settling on the plants, and they will get a far greater amount of sunshine and light than any bay window ever affords. The arguments in favor of a plant room are many, and need not be dwelt on here, as every woman will understand what they are, and will be ready to put them before the man of the family if he shows a disposition to gratify her long cherished dream of a little home conservatory.

Took Another Car.

I attended a dance this winter and drove to the dance in an automobile. We stopped directly in front of the hall, and left the machine standing in that position.

We danced until nearly the last number and left to avoid the rush in the check room. When we entered the car and I had started the motor, a young man came running out and yelled, "Hey, where are you going with that car?" And in the same breath told his chum to call the police. A crowd immediately gathered, and to my astonishment I had entered a car identical with my own which had been pushed ahead to accommodate other autoists.

After much explaining and pleading, I was released amid the roars of the crowd.

Uncle Ebb's Debut.

I was having a party one day, and my old uncle happened in. He was tired and wanted to retire. Well, he went to bed and was sleeping when one of the guests started to sing the "Midnight Fire Alarm." The first time Uncle Ebb heard the cry "Fire! Fire!" it startled him, and he rose to his feet. He listened, half awake, and heard it again; then jumped, grabbed his hat and shoes, and ran downstairs into the room where the people were enjoying themselves, crying, "Where's the fire?" Embarrassed? Well, I should say I was! Not only myself but many of the guests as well.

He Went to Sleep.

Last Saturday night I was forced by the sickness of a friend to put in twelve hours driving a taxi. As I had been working all day, I was pretty well tired out by Sunday morning. I slept a few hours and then went to fill a 2 o'clock date with a girl friend. We went to a show, and after returning home sat in the porch swing for a while. I was so sleepy that I knew I ought to go home, but it was so comfortable there in the cool swing that I couldn't get up enough "pep" to leave.

The next thing I remember I seemed to be in Mexico with the army. It was hot, and we were not fighting hard only an occasional shot being fired. Then we mounted and trotted over some rough roads for a while, when I was suddenly seized and bound to my horse by the natives. The horse was then given a slap that sent him galloping over the roughest piece of ground I had ever ridden on, while they looked on and laughed.

This shakeup awoke me. I found myself tied hand and foot to the swing, while all the neighbors and especially some of my young boy friends, were laughing at me from their porches. And they kept on enjoying the spectacle during the half hour it took me to loosen the ropes.

That night I caught one of the boys, and he confessed that they had seen that I was asleep, and after the girl left in disgust, had shaken the swing, pounded the porch, and even shot off fire crackers under the seat to wake me up; and, failing in this, had tied me up and given the swing such a hard shake that I finally woke up.

Sneezed on Her.

The most embarrassing moment of my life was several years ago when, as a guest at a dinner of Mrs. W., one of the most aristocratic society leaders in New England, I was introduced by the charming hostess to her mother, a highly cultured, most venerable lady, who for many years had been an invalid and attended the dinner in an invalid chair. Desiring to express my sincere veneration to the sufferer, I bowed over her hand with the intention of kissing same. In that moment I felt an irresistible itching in my nostrils, and before I could control myself I had sneezed on the lady's hand instead of pressing a kiss thereon!

She Clutched His Trousers.

A girl friend and I had dropped into a crowded movie theater. The play was an intensely exciting five reel, and we had arrived during the climax. As the play nearly approached the scene we had first witnessed, I absently felt for my cloak, which hung over the back of my seat—still keeping my eye on the screen. The tension relaxed. I became aware that my coat was caught on something—several pulls proving ineffectual. I turned around to see what the trouble was and was confronted by a red faced young man. In my hand I grasped a goodly supply of his trouser leg at the knee. Was I embarrassed? I saw nothing for a block!

They Weren't for Him.

It occurred at a recital a short time ago, at which I played a violin solo. After having completed my work successfully I was informed by some one in the rear of the stage that a bouquet of flowers was awaiting me without. Imagine my keen disappointment when the usher explained to me, and before the audience, that the bouquet was not for me, but that, through some negligence, the flowers were intended for the next number on the program.

"Knocking" in Public.

One day a friend and I went to a dressing room to wash our faces and hands. One part of the dressing room was curtained off for the wash stands. When we came in the room we saw no one and heard no sounds from behind the curtained section, and so naturally we supposed that no one besides ourselves was in the room.

Loitering a few moments outside the curtains we saw a book, evidently belonging to some one who had been there and forgotten it. Looking on the fly leaf we saw the owner's name. "O, I know who that is, don't you?" said my friend. After replying in the affirmative I said: "It is that awful red headed girl at the Central school. Do you remember when she visited our school with another girl as awful looking as she is, and——"

Just then I stopped short and gasped in amazement, for who should walk out from between the curtains but the owner of the book herself. What made it harder still to bear was the fact that she was so good natured. I wished for the ground to open and swallow me.

PIMPLES ON FACE ITCHING INTENSE

Began Getting Bigger. Large, Hard and Very Red. Scattered Over Face. Had to Scratch.

HEALED BY CUTICURA SOAP AND OINTMENT

"I noticed that my face was covered with pimples which began getting bigger. They were large and hard and were very red and there were so many festered at a time that I had to squeeze them out and they formed like a boil under the skin. They scattered all over my face and the itching was so intense that I had to scratch my face so much it bled.

"The trouble lasted about a month and I used —— tablets, but they did not do any good. I noticed a Cuticura Soap and Ointment advertisement so I thought I would try them. The next day I saw the pimples were going away and I used two cakes of Cuticura Soap and three boxes of Cuticura Ointment and I was healed." Take Hair Out Not Off the Skin

It is useless to remove hair from the surface of the skin. This result is all that can be accomplished with pastes, rub-on preparations and imitations of De Miracle. To rob hair of its vitality you must attack it under the skin as well as on the skin. De Miracle, the original liquid depilatory, does this by absorption. It alone contains certain ingredients which give it the power to devitalize hair. Well-groomed women always use De Miracle for removing hair from limbs and under arms. Buy De Miracle by name and you will get the only depilatory that has ever been endorsed by reputable physicians, surgeons, dermatologists, medical journals and prominent magazines. In $1.00 and $2.00 bottles. If your dealer will not supply you, buy a bottle at The Public Drug Co., Buck & Rayner's six stores, or direct, postpaid, in plain wrapper. De Miracle Chemical Co., Dept. "A sure remedy for this most humiliating and distressing affliction." Genuine magazines of the highest character endorse only De Miracle. Beware of so-called endorsements of bogus magazines which are used to exploit the sale of questionable depilatories.

There is nothing more beautiful than a bride, surrounded by billowing tulle, gowned in glistening white, in the romantic month of June. June brides were never lovelier than they are this year. Mrs. Orville Wetmore was formerly Miss Bernice Johnson, Mrs. Leo F. Keiler was Miss Irene Bergerman, Mrs. August Loesing Miss Lillian Gielow, Mrs. Arthur Sylvester Littlefield Miss Katherine Clark, and Mrs. Walter L. Bott Miss Nellie Coleman.

Chicago's June Weather Spoils Garden Parties.

By Mme. X.

POLITICS, politics, politics! What an orgy it was this last week! Rumors of candidates, platforms, reconciliations, and amalgamations filled the air. There were two cries louder than any others: "National preparedness" and "Votes for women."

If chastening be any measure of divine love the Lord certainly loved the suffragists, who were gathered in Chicago. Little was spared them in the way of tests of their devotion to their cause. The ball and garden party Tuesday evening refused to be drowned or in any way squelched. Every one turned up and most people braved the sogginess of the garden part of the entertainment by witnessing the intrepid Ukrainsky and Pavley dancing in the waterlogged canvas pavilion and listening to Ratan Devi, the very voice of the gloomy elements, as she crooned Hindoo melodies accompanying herself on a tambourah.

Mrs. John Carpenter was the dea ex machina of the garden arrangements, which, had the weather been up to standard, would have been altogether charming and unique. She has a genius for original, artistic, and chic entertainments.

But it is safe to say that it will be many a long year before any one will attempt again a garden fête of any kind in May or June in Chicago. There has never so far as written history goes been a happy one here. Some years ago Mrs. Harold McCormick undertook a garden party in the same inclosure as that which was the scene of Tuesday's semi-tragedy. The coldest of cold nor'easters came from over the lake and blew the party to pieces. People still shiver when they think of it.

Entertains Visiting Suffragists.

One of the most interesting of the week's big social events was Mrs. Cyrus H. McCormick's dinner to seventy visiting suffragists. Mr. McCormick and young Cyrus McCormick were the only men present.

The company was divided into groups of six at small tables spread in the beautiful tapestried drawing room of the Huron street residence. At a table at the further end of the room, near the fine old Italian fireplace, Mrs. McCormick herself presided, for the occasion was a formal function. On her right was that most eminent of suffragists, Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, a truly impressive figure. On the hostess' left was Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, active president of the National Woman Suffrage association; Dr. Shaw is its honorary president.

Speeches were made—and rattling good ones too—by Dr. Shaw, Mrs. Catt, Miss Alice Stone Blackwell, Mrs. Cyrus H. McCormick, Mrs. Normal Whitehouse, Mrs. James W. Morrisson, and Mrs. William Johnston, the mother of suffrage in Kansas.

The scene was a brilliant one. The room is one of the most beautiful salons in the west. Its old Venetian woodwork and its fine Spanish tapestries, both of the seventeenth century, came from countries and epochs very different from ours today. The tapestries, according to letters and documents accompanying them, were shipped from Flemish looms by sea to a Spanish grandee living on one of the Balearic islands off the coast of Spain. To judge from the fresh colors of the tapestries they must have been hung in a hermetically sealed room. They show no trace of time or sun, or dust.

From their home in these little known isles they came direct to East Huron street, Chicago, where they now adorn the walls of a windowless room. The amber tinted skylight overhead lets no rays of the sun imperil their hues.

The green-blue Venetian panels, cornices, portals, and mantel set off the tapestries admirably. Both hangings and woodwork are products of a civilization where women were—and still are, for that matter—on a very different footing from American women of the twentieth century.

March in Spite of Rain.

Seldom was there a braver spectacle than the 5,000 suffragists who Wednesday afternoon marched in Michigan avenue from Randolph street to the Coliseum in a beating, relentless, wind driven rain. Most of them were too proud to carry umbrellas—and of all kinds of pride that seemed to them at that moment the proudest pride.

Miss Suzette Ryerson was a striking figure as she headed the line of march bearing aloft a heavy national flag. Tall, starry eyed, beautiful of carriage, she gave at the outset a gallant air to the parade.

This impression was further carried out by Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank marshal of the whole affair, who also walked alone, head erect, shoulders back. The elements had dealt a body blow to her work of weeks. The 25,000 who had promised to march had melted to a little over 5,000, but it is safe to say that that 5,000 made more effect on the spectators than five times that number on a fine day would have done.

Certainly no one could have looked at Mrs. H. M. Wilmarth, walking as one of Mrs. Fairbank's honorary aids, umbrellaless in the driving downpour, unmindful of her 81 years, and not felt a thrill. Beside her trudged another veteran suffragist, Mrs. Katherine Waugh McCulloch, who had neglected to supply herself with a suffrage hat, and whose rose trimmed headgear dripped sadly as she footed it with Mrs. Julius Rosenwald, Miss Mary McDowell, Mrs. Wilmarth, and others.

Mrs. Howard Linn and Miss Mary Waller had a hard time with their mottoed banner, which, even with the help of Mrs. John Carpenter and Mrs. Jack Winterbotham, threatened to get away from them.

Other aids in this first division who furled their umbrellas and faced the full fury of the downpour were Mrs. Joseph Winterbotham, Mrs. Augustus Peabody, Mrs. J. M. Patterson, Mrs. Charles Hamill, Mrs. Joseph Fish, Mrs. Morrill Dunn, Mrs. Kayser, Miss Edith Wyatt, Mrs. Dunlap Smith, Mrs. Bert Taylor, Mrs. George Packard, and Miss Grace Abbott.

When the main part of the cortege piled into the Coliseum at the end of the parade the little group of antis were at that moment urging the resolutions committee of the Republican convention not to indorse suffrage. Well, those antis looked so dry and hard and neat to the bedraggled multitude that the b. m. was sorry for them. It is safe to say that Mrs. Dodge and her lieutenants couldn't get 5,000 antis to walk a mile and a half in a pouring rain to testify to their faith.

The 15,000 who failed to materialize for the parade were mostly from outlying and suburban districts or from among those whose means were too restricted to permit them to ruin their clothes or imperil their health by undertaking what was a severe ordeal.

* *

Beauty Squad All There.

It is worthy of note that Mrs. George Higginson's flying wedge, or beauty squad, came bravely up to the test, though to most of them suffrage is not a burning issue. Mrs. Hobart Chatfield-Taylor was at her post at the point of the wedge, while behind her came Mrs. Morris Johnston, Mrs. Honoré Palmer, Mrs. James W. Thorne, Mrs. John Borden, Mrs. Cyrus McCormick III., Mrs. Adolph Borie, Mrs. William G. Hibbard Jr., Mrs. Percy Hammond, Mrs. George Rublee, Miss Helen Birch, Miss Louise Herrick, Miss Mary Newberry, Miss Adela Barratt, and the rest of the twenty-five.

All held their heads high in air and carried umbrellas furled. Their white gowns were stained with ink from rain soaked insignia and smeared with yellow from their scarfs, but little they cared. Only two of this brigade dropped out.

The hero of the whole affair was Kellogg Fairbank, who, in dripping tarpaulins, went up and down the line, directing, organizing, encouraging, lending a hand here with a bucking banner, rescuing a hat there, and generally pulling the whole show together. And all this in spite of the fact that from the outset he was not in sympathy with the parade.

The elemens gave a final kick to suffrage when mist, drizzle, and wind were visited on the reception the Illinois equal suffragists gave on Thursday afternoon in the assembly hall of the new municipal pier. If there is one requisite for this spot it is fine weather. But few suffragists were daunted or kept from attendnig this reception. By that time water seemed to be their native element.

Attend Convention Sessions.

Of course society's chief diversion during the week was attending the sessions of the two conventions, the Republican and the Progressive, which it did faithfully, usually preceding this with luncheon at the Blackstone, where every one from out of town was to be found.

Full with fate as these sessions were, they yet seemed like some great national game, something akin to the gladiatorial contests in ancient Rome or a bullfight in Spain. The huge concourse of spectators encircling the arena applauded, laughed, roared, perhaps not so loudly as their Latin prototypes, but still with the same sense of looking on at a match of skill, brains, and brawn.

Fred Upham's was the imperial box where were gathered some of the élite of the land, but not all by any means. They were scattered all over the place.

Miss Anne Morgan was one of the convention fans who had to leave it before it was over. Her niece, Miss Helen Hamilton's, marriage yesterday to Arthur Woods, New York's popular police commissioner, at Tuxedo, obliged Miss Morgan to depart on Friday, having had only two days of the excitement of the great powwow.

She, like her brother-in-law, Herbert Satterlee, is an ardent Rooseveltian and went everywhere with a bagful (it was full, that is, when she started out) of T. R. buttons which she distributed to other Teddyites.

Miss Patten of Washington and her sister, Mrs. Corbin, who were rooting for Root, pressed on their friends gay badges for their candidate.

Mrs. Potter Palmer gave a small semi-impromptu tea last Monday afternoon in her charming picture gallery, where many of the guests sported these Root badges.

There were a number of out of town people there on this occasion, among whom were Mrs. Frederick Grant (who assisted Mrs. Palmer in receiving), Mrs. Hope Slater of Washington (who was lamenting the nonarrival of her trunks due to our express company strike), Mrs. Corbin, Miss Patten, Miss Anne Morgan, Mrs. Arthur Willert, Mrs. Charles Deering, and Gen. Barry.

Mrs. Palmer's two sons, their wives, and two of her grandchildren were also there. The house looked charming with plants, flowers, and the pictures, statues, furniture, and "objets d'art" for which it has long been noted.

Judsons Go to Baltimore.

The departure soon of Col. and Mrs. William V. Judson is a real blow to Chicago society. The colonel has been ordered to Baltimore and they both leave us lamenting—the lamentations being mutual. In their two years' stay they have made for themselves a real place here. Both are fond of gayety. The colonel is a popular partner at bridge and in the dance. He has had a more than usually varied life, his most interesting experience probably being his sojourn with the Russians during the Children's Day Function to Be a Patriotic Tea.

By Hazel Whitaker.

"EVERY broken home is a broken link in the chain of civilization" is the exceedingly fitting motto of the Children's Day association, and to be able to say, after less than eight years of work, that its rosiest dream has come true, is proof enough that many "broken links" have been repaired by this truly executive organization. For it was this association and its able president, Mrs. L. L. Funk, who paved the way for the law of 1911 which gives state aid to dependent mothers, called "the funds to parents act."

Most of the work of this group of 100 women is so serious that they seldom take time for play, but just once a year the rule is broken, and this year their social afternoon is to be a "Patriotic tea," held on June 24 at the red room of the Hotel La Salle.

Interest on this day will be centered about a group of school children who will be chosen to represent every nationality in the public schools, a Chicago "melting pot." The 11 year old American host, Master Paul Walter, will be assisted in receiving by little Miss Patty Eastman, aged 10. The mothers of these children are active members of the association, Mrs. Walter being a member of the executive committee and Mrs. Eastman chairman of the ways and means committee.

John D. Shoop, superintendent of schools, will represent the children of the schools, and other national speakers yet to be chosen will give addresses. There will be music in plenty and tea in the bargain. The subject for general discussion will be that of a national children's day, the hope still to be accomplished by this organization, and which it feels should be about June 16. Mrs. Harris W. Huehl is general chairman of the affair, Mrs. Hugo Du Brock first vice chairman, and Mrs. Robert M. Eastman second vice chairman. The president Mrs. Funk, will deliver the address of welcome and introduce the speakers.

In May, 1902, the Children's Day association was started for the express purpose of furnishing immediate financial relief and service, to be used at the Juvenile court in order to prevent the breaking up of the home and the separation of the children from their mothers. To raise this fund "tag day" first came into existence. As time went on this emergency work developed into the permanent pensioning of many mothers and into the paying for the board of infants under a year of age, for whom there is no institutional provision in Chicago.

In 1914 a public bureau of information and guidance was established as an educational movement for the benefit of the many who do not know where to turn for help, whether it be material relief or advice. This experiment proved so conclusively the need of such a central bureau that out of it grew the "Chicago Central Council of Social Agencies," now composed of representatives of over 200 charitable and civic societies, who collectively are carrying out the policies of the association, which is working in hearty coöperation.

◆

The officers recently elected for 1916-'17 are: President, Mrs. L. L. Funk; first vice president, Mrs. Hugo Du Brock; second vice president, Mrs. Harris W. Huehl; treasurer, Mrs. Inez Rogers Dearch; recording secretary, Mrs. H. A. Fisher; corresponding secretary, Miss Pauline Kelly.

The executive committee is to be appointed later.

Americans with British Relatives Feel War's Blight

By Mme. Y.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—News from the war belt every day reminds us in America that we have become closely associated in recent years with the aristocracy of England. A certain set here had the war and its horrors borne in upon them just the other day when word came from Egypt that Lieut. Col. the Hon. Charles John Coventry of the British forces there, had been taken a prisoner by the Turks. The Hon. Mrs. Coventry was Miss Lily Whitehouse of this city and Newport. Two other sons of the ninth Earl of Coventry married American women. Viscount Deerhurst, heir to the title, married the daughter of Mrs. Charles W. Bonyinge of San Francisco, and the Hon. Henry Thomas Coventry is married to a daughter of the late Col. Lawrence Kipp of New York and a niece of Jacob Lorillard, who died in London not long ago.

It hardly seems possible to the many friends of the Duke and Duchess of Manchester that sixteen years had gone by since Miss Helen Zimmerman of Cincinnati became the wife of the peer. These friends were reminded of the passing of the years recently however, when they learned that the son of this couple, Lord Mandeville, had passed his qualifying examination for cadetship in the British navy and had entered the royal naval college at Osborne, on the Isle of Wight. They say that he is a charming looking boy, earnest and of the open faced frankness of his father.

Recovers from Long Illness.

Mrs. Richard Stevens, one of the most beautiful women of the four hundred, is welcomed back into the smart set again. She has undergone a long and serious illness that has caused great anxiety to her family and friends. Now she is about again, a little thinner, a little less richly colored, a little languid, but scarcely less beautiful or less exquisitely dressed. Mrs. Stevens, readers will remember, was one year voted by all odds the best dressed women at Newport. In another season she shared honors with Mrs. Lorillard Spencer Jr.

Mrs. Stevens proclaimed her return to health by giving a dinner and dance at Manor House, her place at Castle Point, Hoboken, N. J. It was for her daughter, Miss Elsie Stevens, who is no less beautiful than her mother. Often these two are taken for sisters.

The dinner was served in the large hall of the house. Seated with Mr. and Mrs. Steves were Mrs. John R. Drexel, Mrs. John Jacob Astor, Mr. and Mrs. Nelson O'Shaughnessy, and Mrs. Robert Stevens. The other guests were sixty friends of the daughter of the house.

The family will start soon for their home at Bernardsville, N. J., where they will pass the season. During the summer Mrs. Stevens and Miss Elsie will join the Newport colony for a time. No young girl is more popular in this exclusive circle than the dark haired, large eyed, slender debutante. Next season the family expect to have a summer home at Newport.

Joins Long Island Colony.

Reginald Vanderbilt has joined the north shore colony of Long island for his summer residence. He has leased for the season the P. M. Lanehart place at Elm Point, overlooking the sound, near Great Neck. It is one of the most attractive estates in the vicinity, and was formerly owned by William Astor Chanler. Mr. Lanehart will occupy a new cottage which he has just completed. It is in the Laneville section, near the William K. Vanderbilt Jr.'s.

As is known, Reginald Vanderbilt has one of the largest and most elaborate farms at Newport. It is not on the ocean drive, but over where the land is fertile and the trees fine. He has every convenience there for himself and his horses, but just now the place does not mean anything pleasant to him. One of its greatest attractions is forever gone. Reginald and his brother, Alfred, were devotedly fond of each other. Alfred had the twin farm of Reginald adjoining his. When he came down to take his ill fated passage on the Lusitania, he was residing with his wife and two little sons on that Newport estate. Reginald has never had the heart for the place since then any more than Mrs. Alfred has had.

Of course, Mrs. Alfred was compelled to move out owing to the fact that Alfred left the estate to his eldest son, whose mother is Mrs. French Vanderbilt. But quite aside from this fact, Mrs. Alfred would not have cared to stay. She passed the first summer of her widowhood at Lenox. She was so charmed with the quiet repose of the place, that she and her mother-in-law, Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt Sr., were so taken with its rustic charm as a place for the little children to grow up in that she has decided to build on Erskine park the Westinghouse estate, a part of which she purchased about three months ago. She has been there recently directing activities, and meanwhile will pass the summer in Ventfort hall, which she has leased for two years.

Lenox Misses Sunday Chat.

The fashionable residents of Lenox are lamenting the passing of one of their favorite practices. In all the stateliness of their Sunday costuming they have been accustomed to come in limousine, in racing car, and electric runabout, in dignified victoria and jaunty dogcart, along the oiled road, to their tiny rural postoffice. Orders from Washington recently proclaimed that the mail should no longer be distributed on the Sabbath, and this occasion, so much a social feature of the week, where friend met friend and chatted about neighborly affairs, will be no more.

Curiously enough Newport has been put into trim for her summer colony before the nearby places are all in shape. Perhaps this is the case because it is more of a formal affair to get the big palaces in order at the remote resort.

At any rate, plans for the summer are fast nearing completion hereabouts. On sunshiny days the roads leading out of New York to the nearby fashionable colonies are alive with motors loaded down with household articles. It is quite the ordinary thing now for folks to move from town to country in their motors. Three or four servants usually occupy the space in the car which is now taken up with dog trunks and bandboxes. After several fleeting trips of servants the owners and their families motor down to their country houses to find them open and in trim for the season.

Children's Day Observed in the Churches Today.

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

CHILDREN'S day services will be held today in the churches of nearly all of the denominations. The day is of special significance in the Methodist churches, as it marks the fiftieth anniversary of the first observance of Children's day.

The Universalists claim the credit of having originated the idea of observing in the churches a flower Sunday in June. The use of flowers in decoration and the recognition of the season which marks the return of the flowers and birds is still prevalent.

The Methodist Episcopal church, however, was the first denomination to give the Children's day official church sanction and to utilize it for a definite propaganda in behalf of Christian education. In 1866 the day was inaugurated as a part of the celebration of the first century of American Methodism.

The money given annually has been devoted to helping young men and women in securing a higher education in some of the Christian schools. The average yearly amount of the money received from the Children's day fund is $140,000. The total number of students helped from the establishment of the fund is 22,984.

The federal council of the Churches of Christ in America, representing over thirty denominations, has sent out an appeal in behalf of the children of Europe who are suffering on account of the war, with the suggestion that a portion of the money contributed at the Children's day services be donated to their relief.

A part of the appeal reads:

"Do you realize that the children in these stricken lands are hungry and half naked; that this exposes them to disease and death; that children, pitifully thin little girls and boys, are dying by the thousands in hovels, beneath hedges, on mountain sides, huddled in the ruins of once beautiful homes.

"No stronger foundation could be laid for peace among the maturing generation in all lands than for American children to save the lives of the suffering children of all nations now.

"The millions of little boys and girls in the Sunday schools of America could add many days to the lives of their little brothers and sisters who have nothing to do with the war and help to recreate a happier world."

Unless the money is sent through the churches or other relief societies it may be sent to the Fund for Starving Children, 70 Fifth avenue, New York.

Beginning today the North Congregational church of Englewood, Fifty-ninth and South La Salle streets, will celebrate for a week its thirtieth anniversary. There will be special services every night. On Wednesday evening a thanksgiving service will be held. Thursday evening will be home coming night, when former members and pastors will return. The Rev. John Johns is pastor.

Archbishop G. W. Mundelein will dedicate next Sunday the new Bohemian St. Procopius seminary at Lisle, Ill. It is expected that about 2,000 Bohemians from Chicago will attend. There will be three special trains leaving the Union station for Lisle Sunday morning, starting at 8:15, 8:45, and 9:15. The seminary was erected at a cost of $200,000 and will be devoted to the education of priests who will work among the Bohemian people.

The People's church, of which the Rev. Preston Bradley is pastor, will hold its last service before the summer vacation today at 11 o'clock. The service is held in the Wilson Avenue theater. The subject will be "The Value of an Ideal" and will be given to the graduates of the various classes in the work of the year.

Twenty-seven young men were graduated Wednesday evening from the Chicago Theological seminary. It was the fifty-eighth anniversary of the seminary and the last which will be held on the west side, the seminary having removed from 19 South Ashland avenue to the campus of the University of Chicago, where it will occupy a part of the new Divinity building, the ground for which was broken on Tuesday.

Coney Island Opens Season with Its Usual Fanfaronade.

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK. — [Special correspondence.]—Along about the first Sunday in June New York City editors begin combing their staffs to find the young man newly come to journalism who has never written a story of the formal opening of Coney Island. The greener he is, the more imaginative, the better. For the old hands are utterly useless on a Coney assignment.

The cub sees 60,000 or 100,000 "merrymakers" jammed into the Bowery and along Surf avenue jostling and joshing each other over the hot and soft asphalt pavements and it inspires his pen. The booths are new to him. The hoarse voiced barkers are men of original wit. Luna park is a "fairyland" and Dreamland beach, taken over by the city and conducted as a great municipal bathing place, a tribute to the civic virtues of the greatest city in the world.

He sees in Steeplechase, that wonderful glass inclosed acreage wherein thousands of persons pay money for the privilege of amusing themselves, such a riot of fun prevailing from noon till midnight as he never saw before, and his fresh and eager and youthful mind uncovers a dozen or more colorful human interest stories that make good reading.

But seemingly he can only do it once. Send him back the next spring or even to cover the "Mardi Gras" during the chill closing days of the fall, and he comes back with no more than the most commonplace account of the estimated number present and the usual story of arrests for rowdyism and similar nuisances.

The fairyland has meantime even to him become a shabby, even squalid collection of shacks patched here and there by owners with no talent for carpentering; a street lined with open faced saloons, cheap moving picture shows, sideshows, and booths retailing Charley Chaplin dolls and "preparedness" hats. A Bowery thick with jabbering hyphenates bringing their continental Sunday into active being, drinking huge glasses of foaming beer in family and friendly groups; arguing much, fighting occasionally, but having for the most part a good time.

The fresh mind sees the working of the melting pot in these conglomerate masses and he catches an added feature this year in the appearance of many Mexican families in the crowd, well to do citizens of the southern republic evidently taking a vacation far from home during the current unpleasantness; father and mother and a host of children, frequently accompanied by an Indian nurse.

But the blasé one who has grown cold on Coney and come to hate it as a city's cheap and tawdry sideshow, filled with more freaks than patrons, passes it all by with a sneer and reports to his office that there was the usual mess present acting in the usual silly way.

To be cheated at Coney is an interesting experience to the jolly first timer but a cause for increased resentment and an invitation to fight to the other. A vociferous person in Luna was urging a crowd of gaping individuals to be sure and see "Stella" before they left the park. They could see a very good picture of "Stella" above their heads—a picture taken early on a hot day, when she was wearing no more than a covering of tulle and an expression of extreme weariness. It was the old, old lure to the prurient and the curious, than which we sometimes believe there are no others. Gradually the crowd drifted in to see "Stella." What they saw was a stereopticon exhibition, with a shapely young woman in white tights serving as a background, an exhibition that is as old and about as novel as that of the Empire State express running sixty miles an hour in the movies. "Stella's" screen show ran seven minutes and the crowd was dismissed. The old timers, come again to be buncoed, emerged wearing various expressions of disgust. But the youngsters and the tourists were laughing merrily at the fun of being fooled.

Much was being made of an "aerial night attack" by a noisy young man who claimed to have been in one. There before the startled gaze of the beholder, he promised, the city would lie asleep, unmindful of the danger that lurked in yonder clouds. Suddenly, from out the mists, would appear the Zeppelins, the fighting battleplanes, the anti-aircraft guns, and all the rest of it. It was something to be seen and not forgotten, and if the ladies and gentlemen would now pass into the theater they would stop to thank him as they passed out.

A hundred or more took him at his word. The sleeping city was there, even as he had promised—a cardboard panorama with lighted windows and towers backed by a changing sky. Night came on, and from the side of the stage a pickled Zeppelin, or at least a Zeppelin resembling a pickle in the darkness; a flash of light above, another in the city below, an exploding bomb; the sudden appearance of tiny shafts of light from many searchlights centered on the Zep; the crashing of bombs, the flashing of guns, a busted pickle, a bright red glow in the city—and it was all over.

No one passing out thanked the young man, but several looked as though they would be willing to. Their viewpoint was fresh. They had not seen the San Francisco fire and the Mount Pelee earthquake and the rest of the exhibits that were, in fact, duplicates of this one. And so probably to them it was well worth the dime it cost.

There is one new show on the island this year. It is called a "national preparedness exhibit," and comes, we believe, from the San Francisco exposition. Partly financed by the government, it is, as usual, rather a cheap exhibit of battleship models, surrounded by booths retailing funny hats and soda water, "ice tea" and moving picture exhibits.

One gentleman whose command of the English language is far from certain spends his time urging passers-by to come and take a look through the periscope of a submarine. Three of these extend through the roof, and for a nickel you can squint through the eyepiece and see the towers of the gates of Luna, or, turning the periscope, view one of the shabby backyards, full of tin cans and discarded sections of papier mache used in the shows of yesteryear.

◆

At Steeplechase park the Coney-worn veteran finds nothing new. Same old toboggan down which the ladies slide and scream when their skirts encircle their necks and their lingerie preferences become known to the world. Same old human pool table, with grinning youngsters sliding down a chute onto a series of revolving disks to be eventually cast into the gutter alongside. Same old funny entrance, with more ladies venturing across wabbly floors, grabbing first their hats and then their skirts, shot aloft by shafts of air, yelling like fiends, and threatening between breaths to sue the management. Same old punchbowl, with a tangled human mass heaped in its center trying to get out. Same old steeplechase itself, with always a hundred or more patrons waiting for a chance to ride the wooden horses. Same old dancing floor and swimming pool, roller skating section, and toy section "for the little ones."

But the new chap sees a lot worth recording here. For one thing, some one reminded him that this scientifically managed resort, where the entrance fee of 50 cents includes a try at all the fun games, is owned by thousands of people, who subscribed to its first issue of stock—$5 a share, including free admissions for a year. This stock now pays annual dividends of 10 per cent.

The new short skirt and silk stocking fad among the shop girls offers him a chance for comparison with the old days, for now the girls intent on sliding down toboggan hire bifurcated clown suits to cover their frocks, pull their short skirts above their knees inside their bloomers, and have the time of their lives. To see forty or fifty of them romping from one device to another, their usually fat legs—for so is the New York shop girl constructed—topped by their gayly colored dominoes, is to imagine for a minute that a musical comedy company has broken loose in the very center of Coney and that a most pleasant time is assured for the rest of the evening.

The young fellow catches an idea for a human interest note, too, in the fact that though all these girls wear silk stockings they are silk only part way, making it possible for the least of them to put her best foot forward, even with high white shoes, and defiantly invite the casual comparison of captious street critics.

The ancient crab wonders why Coney Island never has been sanely exploited. Being the most famous of American resorts, why has not some syndicate of capitalists not undertaken to clean it up, and to make it in fact as well as in fancy a wonderful playground, with clean new buildings and well conducted shops and sideshows. Surely it would pay. Any resort that can entertain the crowds year after year that Coney does must be something of a mint in the matter of profits.

But the eager newcomer passes the shabby background and catches only the spirit of the resort, which is gay and free to the point of sociable excess. It is the playground of a great city's common people, but it is mostly built in a dirty back yard and run by men who would never think of cleaning up a dirty back yard until forced by the law to do so.

The attorneys for the Charles Frohman company, Inc., have requested that we correct a statement made in this column some two weeks ago that at the time of the adjudication of Charles Frohman's estate it was discovered there was a considerable sum of money owing to Miss Maude Adams. This money, so the Broadway gossips had it, Miss Adams had agreed to deduct from the profits of her own tour. The further intimation that it would surprise no one should Miss Adams, in time, decide that she preferred to have her tours directed by Mr. Frohman's former aide, John D. Williams, who is now in business for himself, seems to have given added offense. Neither statement, the attorneys insist, has any foundation in fact. Our informant was one close to the persons and, we reasonably assumed, to the facts in the case. Evidently he was mistaken.

William A. Brady of the World Film corporation is offering $5,000 in prizes to be awarded to those who present interesting stories, ideas, or scenarios which he selects for making photoplays. The contest will close at 6 p. m. on Sept. 15. The prizes will be awarded Jan. 1, 1917. The first prize will be $1,000; the second, $700; the third, $650. The stories taking fourth, fifth, sixth, and seventh place each will receive $500, $400, $300, and $200 respectively. Says Mr. Brady: "You need not submit a technically perfect scenario, such as are prepared by experts. You may submit merely the story in narrative form. Of course finished scenarios by professional writers will be welcomed. Please avoid stories of the underworld and of war. I want clean, wholesome stories for the entire family to see and enjoy."

SWEDISH EXHIBIT COMING.

ON July 11 the exhibition of contemporary Swedish art which was first shown at the Panama-Pacific exhibition and which is now making a circuit of the leading art museums of the country will open at the Art Institute.

Sweden through the artist's eye is what the exhibit will show us and the country-wide attention which has been rivted upon it is more than fulfilling the prophecies which were made for it before its arrival. The circuit opened at the Brooklyn museum and was marked by an extraordinary attendance, recalling to mind the popular appeal of Sorolla's early exhibitions in New York.

For those lovers of dates and periods I might mention that it was about forty years ago, some authorities give 1880 as the exact date, when the newer ideas in art took definite form in Sweden. Among painters of that nationality there was a vigorous revolt against the established academic ascendancy of the years that had gone before and a determined return to native scenes and subjects, a return, by the way, which proved the real salvation of national Swedish art. It was but a part of the general Swedish awakening to consciousness which made itself felt along practically every line of endeavor at that time.

Now the art of those painters is a tribute to the soul of Sweden herself, a beautiful laudation to the spirit and genius of the country.

This collection, which we shall see here shortly, is one of the finest assortments of paintings in the field of landscape art. Swedish painting is for the most part a salutary, wholesome product displaying a pantheistic adoration of nature and natural phenomena, and each part of Sweden has adopted a special interpreter that she may through him make herself known to the world.

Few people can resist the charm of Sundborn's vivid, sparkling water colors or the magnitude of Anselm's snow scenes, nor the universality of sympathy shown in Larson's family life paintings which has won for him the name of being Sweden's leading intimist. Lovers of birds and animal life will take delight in the canvases of Liljefors, and since Sweden is preëminently a peasant nation no artist of any country is depicting more wonderfully the peasant type and country scene than Anders Zorn.

This is the week when the annual exhibit of the work of the art students of the institute will be given and when there will graduate from the Art Institute school those students who have completed their allotted term of work. There is an unusually large graduating class this year.

There probably has never been a time in the history of the world when society offered so many different fields of endeavor and so many generous rewards for energy given along all artistic lines. It is an age of innumerable opportunities artistically, which has, sadly enough, not been the case for many years, and there is no excuse for genius to starve since talent is so much in demand.

◆

The practical is not wholly antagonistic to the ideal, and the trained artistic impulse these days has almost infinite opportunities to construct what the world wants and what the world needs. Mural decoration is one of the new art interests of the day, and a splendid field for the artist of talent. It is considered, indeed, by some to be the future Mecca of painters and painting. Commercial art offers a wide variety of chances. There is the enormous field of advertising, which brings into play every iota of originality and inventive faculty, and there are all the different branches of designing, which call for much artistic appreciation and an endless number of ideas.

From a practical viewpoint it would be hard to choose from out of the past a year that one would prefer to graduate in than this one. For never was the interrelation between good art and a living more definitely glimpsed.

News and Gossip of the Theater.

NUMEROUS "regular" players, who have sought hot weather employment in the form of reëngagements to act for the films, are being turned down. The list includes some de facto stars, men and women. Not only have very few of them made good at all proportionately to the money given them by the film makers, but also they have proved social failures by the not too rigid standards of those born to the celluloid. The latter, with their directors, resent the attitude of superiority assumed by the speaking players. One woman star, impatient under the coaching of the film director, stopped the proceedings long enough to say to him, in the presence of his stock company of movie players: "My dear sir, I am certain that, as soon as they fire you from this business, you will be sure of a good income as an assistant bartender! Now, I must insist that you permit me to act this part as I think proper." He did as she requested. When the finished film was exhibited the public was unable to identify the advertised star. The to the manor born filmers had, with the director's unspoken sanction, combined to spoil every scene in which she appeared. Much the same punishment was meted out to a popular musical comedy actor who on his first day in the studio, was at pains to tell the camera broke players that he was in Los Angeles really for a lark, and thought it bully that the film makers should be willing to pay him $1,500 a week to kill time. His every scene in three different picture plays was killed by a member of the stock company, a player who had always been "in pictures," and who doubtless would die of fright if asked to speak a line on the stage.

◆

Willard Mack, who on paper would seem to be the current Lope de Vega of the American theater, names another of his plays "Her Market Value." Miss Florence Reed is to have the chief part in Mr. Mack's "King! Queen! Jack!"

◆

Louis K. Anspacher, whose "The Unchastened Woman" was a success this season in New York City, has written another, which he calls "That Day."

◆

Shakespeare, Othello, Iago, Julius Caesar, Cleopatra, Antony, and Henry VIII. are in "The Follies of 1916," produced last Tuesday night in Atlantic City. The settings are again Urban's—ten of them. Bert Williams has a scene based on the high cost of gasoline.

◆

The London Era, for decades an authority of the English stage and British sports, carries an editorial rebuking as cowards the English actors now in the United States. The editor advises "all loyal British and Irish stage professionals" to see to it that the "slackers now in America" do not obtain post-bellum engagements when they return home.

◆

Arnold Bennett is writing a play for the use of Miss Doris Keane, who is still acting "Romance" in London. Also she is in possession of a new play by Edward Sheldon.

◆

Miss Mary Garden, so far from remaining in the United States to act for the films, has already taken ship for Paris. She said, while in Chicago last week, that her engagement of eight performances next winter in the Auditorium would be comprehended within the last four weeks of the grand opera season. Her wages, $2,000 a performance, represents a material increase over what she received when she last sung in Chicago.

◆

Mme. Pavlowa is to dance for at least fifteen weeks next season in the New York Hippodrome under a special arrangement between her manager, Mr. Rabinoff, and Mr. Dillingham, who operates that big showhouse. Mr. Rabinoff will continue his venture with the opera company, now called the Boston National, and will not drop the ballet feature.

◆

Richard Bennett is to have the principal man's part in the Hattons' "Upstairs and Down," soon to be tried out in Los Angeles.

◆

The song hit of "A World of Pleasure," "Pretty Baby," is to be used in "The Passing Show of 1916" in the New York Winter Garden. The psalm was put into the current piece in the Palace Music hall on the eve of the Chicago opening.

◆

Miss Frances Demarest, an alumna of the La Salle Opera house in the Singer régime, is to be made into a star in a play without music.

◆

Denis Eadie is acting, in London, the title part of "Disraeli." The author, Louis N. Parker, vowed, after viewing the changes which turned the play from a failure to a success in the original Chicago performances, in 1911, that he would never permit "Disraeli" to be acted in its new form in London.

◆

Miss Gertie Millar, for some years London's pet soubrette in musical comedy, is coming over next season in an English revue called "Bric-a-Brac."

◆

Henry Miller is to try out three new plays this summer in San Francisco—one for the use of Miss Ruth Chatterton next season and one for his own purposes. Bruce McRae is to be with him in the experiments. Mr. Miller will incidentally revive "The Great Divide."

◆

In addition to presenting "Romance" nearly 800 times in London, Miss Doris Keane is building up a new repertoire. During her London season she produced two new plays, "Catherine the Great," by Miles Malleson, and "Ollaya," a Spanish play by E. Temple Thurston, the novelist. She also has a comedy by Edward Sheldon, and Arnold Bennett is writing a play for her.

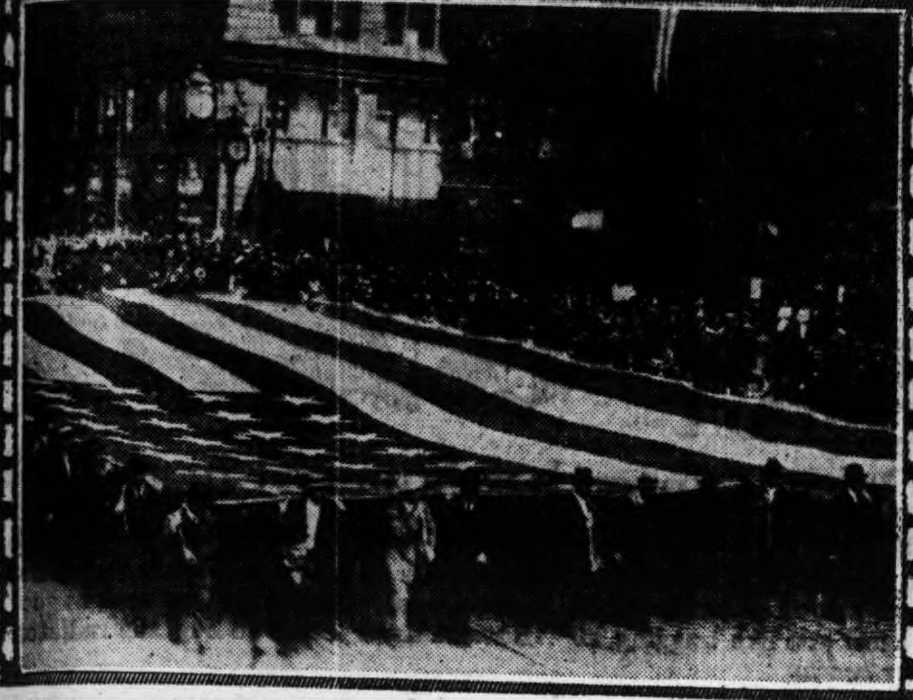
AMBITIOUS CHICAGO WOMEN never let a morning pass without a careful reading of THE TRIBUNE. They know they can't afford to.

The Selig-Tribune—Bi-Weekly.

The World's Greatest News Film.

In the two issues this week are shown:

Number 46



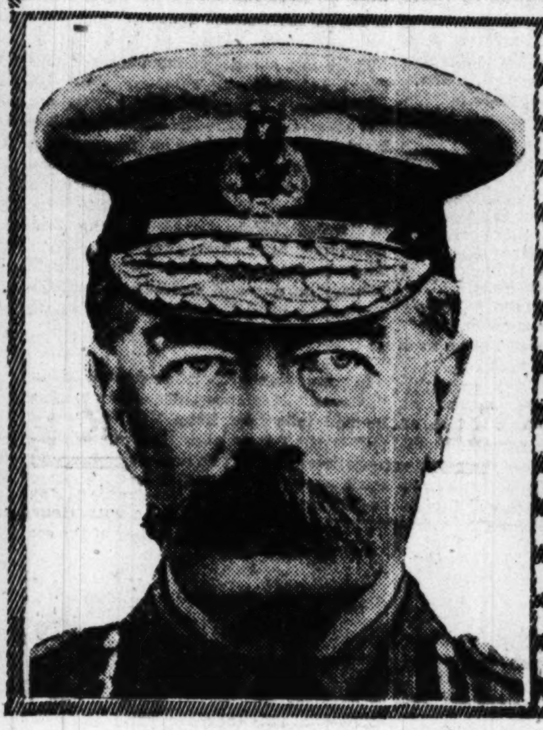
CHICAGO'S PREPAREDNESS PARADE.

Patriotic men, women—and children—numbering thousands, marched shoulder to shoulder from morning until night through the streets of Chicago in the cause of preparedness. The film gives you a marvelous view of the parade in progress, Mayor Thompson and the reviewing stand and the massed crowds of spectators.

FASHIONS!

Some mighty pretty girls demonstrate styles in gowns and bathing suits—mostly bathing suits—at the Fashion Show at Madison Square Garden, New York. Many of the styles are pretty; many odd and some—O, O! At that you won't want to miss the sight of any of them.

Number 47



"CLOSE-UP" OF LORD KITCHENER.

The tragic death of "England's greatest soldier" is a subject that has been on the lips of the world since it occurred. The Selig-Tribune happened to have a number of feet of film taken not long ago and in this issue you see Lord Kitchener "close up" and as he appeared when reviewing his troops.

FOR THE SAFETY OF THE N
LET THE WOMEN HAV
FOR THE HAND THAT R

THE COURAGE OF THEIR CONVICTIONS

—made five thousand suffragists parade sturdily through a pouring rain in Chicago, bearing their dripping banners proudly aloft. For a mile and a half they marched to the Coliseum, where members of the resolutions committee were meeting to consider their cause. It's a stirring sight.

The Latest News from Movie Land.

BY MAE TINEE.

JACK LIVINGSTON of the Morosco Photoplay company is heading a movement for the formation of a company of militia composed of motion picture actors. His great-grandfather was one of the signers of "The Declaration of Independence."

Nell Shipman of the Vitagraph company is a happy girl these days, for her father and mother have moved to California from their home in Seattle, Wash., just to be near her. Miss Shipman has leased a bungalow in Hollywood for them.

Mary Miles Minter has gone to the American company. She will be directed by James Kirkwood. Allan Forrest is another American recruit.

Whenever Pauline Frederick finds a fit of temperament coming on she takes to the Maine woods and with one hunting costume, one rifle, two dogs, and all the time in the world at her disposal, proceeds to shoo said fit away.

Elliot Dexter, husband of Miss Marie Doro, has joined the Oliver Morosco Photoplay company. His wife continues with Lasky. O, no, that doesn't mean a separation of any kind. The studios concerned are close together.

In taking a picture the other day, Burton Grassey and Cleo Madison were compelled to have an encounter. So realistic was it that Mr. Grassey declares that he still bears marks of the brusies received from the beautiful Cleo.

Nothing Puzzling About This

If you're a Willard owner, you know what these figures mean. If you're not, you ought to know.

There's nothing remarkable about 85% of the makers of electrically equipped cars using Willard Batteries, quality considered.

And 800,000 Willard equipped cars may not be significant to you.

But 700 Willard Service Stations do mean a great deal to every car owner who wants the most expert attention possible. Have you learned our value to you?

TABLOID BOOK REVIEW

Last week's best sellers in a leading Chicago book store:

WAR.

"Kitchener's Mob" (Houghton-Mifflin), by Harry B. Hall.

FICTION.

"Nan of Music Mountain" (Scribner) by Frank Spearman.

"Seventeen" (Harper), by Booth Tarkington.

"Under the Country Sky" (Doubleday-Page), by Grace Richmond.

"Cappy Ricks" (Fly), by Peter B. Kyne.

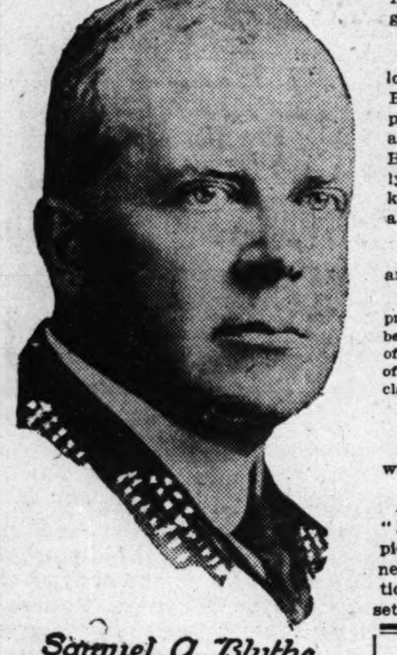
"The Daredevil" (Reilly & Britton), by Maria Thompson Daviess.

"The Proof of the Pudding" (Houghton-Mifflin) by Meredith Nicholson.

NONFICTION.

"Eat and Grow Thin" (Dutton), by Vance Thompson.

BLYTHE A FAST WRITER.



Samuel G. Blythe

SAMUEL G. BLYTHE took a few minutes off the other day from the whirl of the political merry go round and sat down for a chat about "A Western Warwick" (Doran), which is the latest book from his pen, which must be like Anteus, if pens can be like giants, so much more vigorous does it become with each contact with paper. That's really no simile at all, though, because Mr. Blythe doesn't have anything to do with a pen. He uses the good old fashioned rapid fire typewriter way of writing.

"I just sit down and do this," he said, hitting an imaginary typewriter with the first two fingers of each hand in the untutored way that newspaper folk always type. "If you know what you're going to say—and you do after fifty years in the newspaper business—you can keep on pounding, and before you know it you've got ten thousand words done in a day. Sometimes I write the first paragraph of an article or the first chapter of a book over fifty times before I can get it right, but after that's done it's all clear sailin'."

"These authors who loaf around two or three years on one book must have a pretty easy life. I've always had too much to do to spend more than a couple of months on a book. 'Western Warwick,'" he said in answer to my question, "was written right here in this hotel. Last year my publishers wired me, 'Where's that novel you promised us?' I didn't have anything special to do, so I stayed here in Chicago in a room looking out on the lake on the tenth floor and wrote it. I worked all day of every day on it. I'd had it in my mind for three or four years, so there wasn't much planning to do about it.

"It's just the result of years of writing political stuff. I can't do anything else but write, and it's my job, and I haven't any illusions about my stuff being the great American novel or anything like that. It's workmanlike, and seems to be popular enough in serial and to sell when it's in book form, but I can't talk about my art and all that stuff."

He's one of the most dynamic and at the same time gentle authors that I have ever pursued in search of news for the Tabloidites. "My address is Washington, New York, and care of Pullman cars," he said. "I have a typewriter planted in San Francisco, Boston, New Orleans, New York, Washington, and here. I went over to the war the first few months, then around the world, to China and Japan, then back to Washington for a few weeks, and then down to Mexico. I haven't any home, you see."

He is the real cosmopolite, though intensely American in action and speech, with his r's pronounced and his g's omitted, and his pleasant, unflurried manner. I thought that he would be frock coated and pompous, if not in actual sartory at least in his attitude toward life, for he has probably sat beside the mighty in their uncomfortable seats oftener than any living writer, but he wasn't pompous, and he wasn't even middle aged—just the sort that you always hope a man is going o be, but that he almost never is.

Harry A. Fanck, author of "A Vagabond Journey Around the World" [Century], has just returned from a four years' tramp through South America. He has done almost everything—been a newsboy, a blacksmith's helper, a bill poster, a box office assistant, a carriage trimmer, a tire welder, a clerk and porter, a waiter, a traveling salesman, a railroad worker, a carpenter, a farmer, and a teacher of modern languages at several schools. Though he had had frequent experiences as a hobo, his first real vagabond journey came after his freshman year at Ann Arbor. He went to England on a cattle boat with $3 in his pocket, walked to London and Brighton, where he got a job as a stevedore, and made his way to Paris to see the exposition of 1900. He then beat his way back home. He says, with a flash of vivid memory in his eye, that during this expedition he livel chiefly on raw turnips.

The Emerald isle used to be blue. That's why Francis o [little o, that's right] Sullivan Tighe, known to readers as Francis Sullivan, says his "The Portion of a Champion" Scribners], as Irish a tale as you could find anywhere, is bound in blue. Somebody thought it was a good joke on him. Nope, says Mr. Sullivan, blue's what I wanted, because blue, not green, was really the original national color of Ireland, as may be seen in the "British Royal Standard," where Ireland is represented by a harp on a blue ground.

It was hinted in the privacy of the Tabloid not long ago that "Where the Path Breaks," by "Capt. Charles de Crespigny," was really by that artist of sobs and passions, Florence Barclay. Mrs. Barclay has written—whether indignantly or pleased at the accusation I dinna ken—to her American publishers making a complete disclaimer of its authorship.

Ruth Kedzie Wood is well known as a writer of delightful travel books.

Anne Shannon Monroe, author of "Happy Valley" (McClurg), a tale of pioneer life in Oregon, is herself of pioneer stock. Some time before the revolution her ancestors came from Scotland to settle in Virginia and Maryland. A generation later some venturesome spirits of the family went to the middle west, the frontier states of those days. The eighties found the branch of the family to which Miss Monroe belongs in the territory of Washington. As a child she rode all over the brown hills and sagebrush of the Yakima country.

There is a strange coincidence, confides the J. B. Lippincott company, about its publishing T. Everett Harre's "Behold the Woman." The publisher rejected Harre's first book, which was written when he was 10 years of age, three years after he began writing fiction. Not such a coincidence. Edna Ferber said, I think in "Dawn O'Hara," "Already the best magazines are refusing my stuff daily." That might be the state of anybody's literary career, and almost any publishing house, picked out at random, would have refused our first book.

In that altogether delectable book "Nights" (Lippincott) Elizabeth Robins Pennell tells how Elihu Vedder made a part of the Roman nights she celebrates—there were nights in Venice, London, and Paris as well. "He had recently finished the illustrations for the Rubaiyat and he would tell us the history of every design and of every model or pot in it. He exulted in the stroke of genius by which he had invented a composition or a pose. I have heard him describe again and again how he drew the flight of a spirit from a model outstretched and flopping up and down on a feather bed laid upon the studio floor until she almost fainted from fatigue, while he worked from a hammock slung just above." You haven't forgotten the glorious evolution of that scene if you have seen Vedder's wonderful Rubaiyat.

"Destiny" (Watt), by Charles Neville Buck, has a device against sneaking a look at the last chapter which is clever. The last chapter—or it may be two; I obeyed the injunction—has a paper seal about it with the command not to break the seal until you have read what has gone before.

Rex Beach, whose latest is "The Crimson Gardenia" (Harper), returned not long ago from Panama with the cheerful suggestion that "if a fair sized battle cruiser took a couple of shots at the forts defending the terminal of the canal it would be all off with the defenses."

Announcing Change of Policy

Owing to demand for seats, "Cousin Jim," Chicago's Society Film, is to be held over for second week showing at The Strand.

The public has taken such great interest in this unique photoplay that The Strand has decided to deviate from its rigid policy of showing a picture no longer than seven consecutive days. In order that everybody may have the opportunity of seeing this film, every scene of which was taken right here in Chicago, Lake Forest and Winnetka, and every one in the cast a member of Chicago's exclusive society set, "Cousin Jim" will be shown all this week at The Strand.

The Casino give their share—25% of the net profits of "Cousin Jim"—toward the establishment in Chicago of a base hospital for sick and wounded soldiers and sailors.

You will marvel at the excellence of the photography, the ease with which these society people carry out the action of the play. The Chicago newspapers are unanimous in their opinion that "Cousin Jim" is a pleasant diversion from the usual photoplay.

"Cousin Jim" is truly a trip through Chicago's most exclusive clubs. For you see Chicago's "400" dance in the Blackstone Crystal Ballroom; see society leaders "at home" at Onwentsia, the playground of Chicago's millionaires; see the beautiful interiors of the famous Indian Hill and the cozy Casino Clubs; and scores of scenes taken in the homes and favorite haunts of Chicago's "400."

A Guarantee of Comfort

Yes, Daisy, winter has lingered in the lap of spring, just as Beatrice Fairfax says, but the cold days have been warm days in the flats heated by Kewanee Firebox Boilers. One romantic lady in a flat on the South Side says, "That boiler has been so good to us that I feel just like hugging it." But she never cared to hug the radiator, and she never had to.

Landlords of flats have learned that the Kewanee Firebox Boiler holds their tenants for them, and they warm up every time they hear its name. More than half the joy of living in a flat is derived from that boiler, and it has more to do with the renting of a flat than any other one or two or three things. It used to be that no one knew anything about the boiler, but now the word "Kewanee" is better known than Charles Dickens, William Makepeace Thackeray or Joe Tinker.

A little attention to the material things of life will form the connecting link between "comfort now and then" and "comfort all the time." The great big material thing in flat life is the heating boiler. If its name is Kewanee, you needn't look any farther. If it is some other name, you've still got some distance to go.

Drop a line to The Old Man Behind the Boiler and drink of his knowledge for the benefit of yourself, your children, your cousins, aunts and everyone that is yours.

The Standard of Value and Quality

BACK of every really worth while achievement there is always an idea or guiding principle. Men must think before they can produce.

With Paige it was "The Standard of Value and Quality".

Long before this phrase was actually expressed, Paige Engineers and Paige Designers were intent upon the production of an automobile that would offer the utmost of motoring luxury at minimum cost to the owner.

At a result, we, today, have the Paige Fairfield "Six-46"—a greater car and a finer car than that little group of pioneers ever dreamed of.

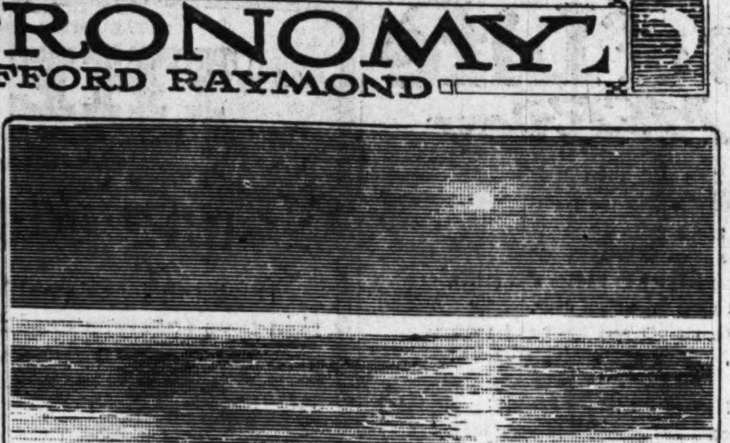
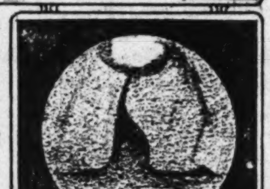
ASTRONOMY

by CLIFFORD RAYMOND



SCENE IN THE POLAR CAP OF MARS DRAWN BY S.F. MAXWELL



MARS AND ITS POLAR CAP

MARS.

MARS will soon move from the constellation of Leo into the constellation of Virgo, and will remain visible in the evening sky.

In the constellation of Leo it is in the neighborhood, seemingly, of the great sun Regulus. Regulus is at the end of a conspicuous grouping of stars known as the Sickle. If one draws a line through the pointers of the Big Dipper, the two stars in the outer edge of the bowl, and away from the pole star, it will end, at 40 degrees, a little to the west of this conspicuous group in which Regulus predominates.

The planet Mars is found in the neighborhood of Regulus, and even to the uninformed it generally identifies itself by its red aspect. In a small telescope, such as an amateur astronomer usually mounts in the back yard or other convenient point for observation, the polar cap of Mars, such as is drawn imaginatively by Mr. Maxwell for the larger of the above illustrations, can be seen. The smaller drawing reveals what the telescope will show a perceptive observer. The untrained eyes using a telescope may not see. Perception is another thing. It requires the ability to distinguish when the eyes have been given the ability to see.

Popularly Mars is accepted as a planet of possible habitation. Astronomers do not concern themselves with this hypothesis. It is speculative, and must remain so. Science seeks demonstrable facts, but popularly there need be no apology for consideration of the possibility of life on Mars. It is the most tremendous possibility that life here could consider, although it is difficult to imagine how the establishment of the fact could affect earthly life.

If Mars be inhabited, the snow caps are all important in that life, so far as we understand conditions which surround the planet. What it needs is water. It presents other conditions which life, as we know it, needs for existence. Water it is insufficiently provided with. The polar caps appear in the winter and disappear in the summer of the Martian year. As they disappear the channels observable on the planet's surface not only appear in more definite form, but they show the colors of vegetation as if a green world might be coming to life to offer subsistence for whatever living things existed.

The soil of Mars is yellow or ochre red. The whole surface is a flat plain, broken only by low depressions, which, wherever there is any water, support a scant vegetation.

In the winter of each hemisphere much of the water condenses like snow or thick hoar frost. Large tracts of land about the pole are completely covered. These white "polar caps" are the first thing that a perceptive observer sees upon looking at Mars with a telescope. They gleam out blindingly white on the yellow ochre soil of the planet.

◆

When spring begins the snows melt slowly back, and as they retreat, shallow ponds and marshes are left. These appear a deep indigo blue in the telescope. It is a significant fact that the "canals" all emanate from these polar marshes, and do not begin to brighten up until the water has appeared. In the tropical and temperate regions it is warm enough for vegetation to grow by April, but it is not until the last of May, when the water released from the icy polar caps comes down the canals, that a touch of green appears.

The Martian year is 687 days long, or a month and a half less than two of our years. Twelve months of fifty-seven days each, with fifty-eight or fifty-nine for February, would make a fair calendar. The day is only twenty-four minutes longer than our own day. Mars is much more like the earth in climate than it is different. And, unless science is mistaken, the evolution of the earth will some day render it, too, a desert planet like Mars is today.

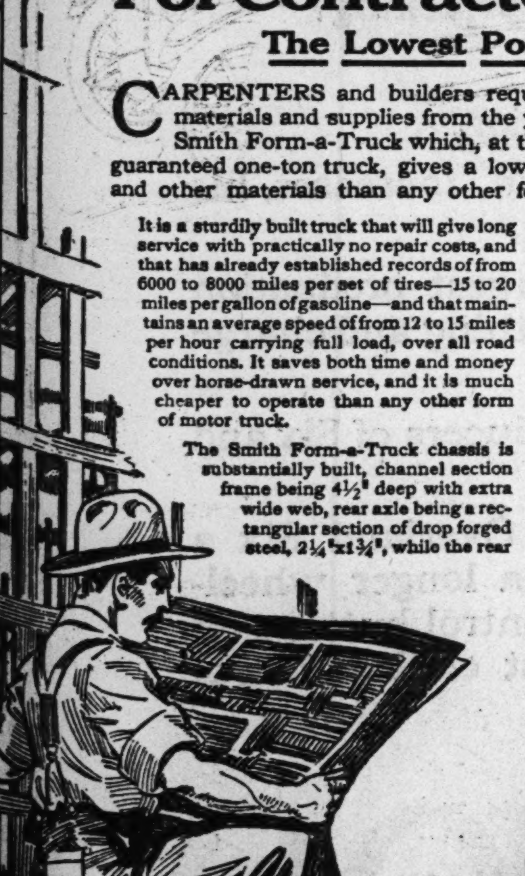
$350 and a Ford makes a guaranteed One Ton Truck

For Contractors and Builders

The Lowest Possible Hauling Cost

CARPENTERS and builders require a low cost of transportation for hauling materials and supplies from the yards or cars to their construction work. The Smith Form-a-Truck which, at the low price of $350 and a Ford makes a fully guaranteed one-ton truck, gives a lower cost per ton mile for hauling lumber, steel and other materials than any other form of truck service.



It is a sturdily built truck that will give long service with practically no repair costs, and that has already established records of from 6000 to 8000 miles per set of tires—15 to 20 miles per gallon of gasoline—and that maintains an average speed of from 12 to 15 miles per hour carrying full load, over all road conditions. It saves both time and money over horse-drawn service, and it is much cheaper to operate than any other form of motor truck.

The Smith Form-a-Truck chassis is substantially built, channel section frame being 4½" deep with extra wide web, rear axle being a rectangular section of drop forged steel, 2¼"x1¾", while the rear wheels are the wood artillery truck type with twelve heavy spokes and with Firestone solid rubber tires 3½"x32". When this Smith Form-a-Truck chassis is fitted over the Ford frame it increases the wheelbase to 125", giving a nine-foot loading space. The rear axle of the Ford becomes a jackshaft for the chain drive system, and you get a motor truck that embodies real engineering design.

It costs less to buy a Smith Form-a-Truck with a Ford chassis than it does to buy one-horse-drawn wagon and the team of horses required to haul it. And the Smith Form-a-Truck will do the work of three horse-drawn trucks of equal capacity.

We are prepared to make immediate deliveries.

The Smith Form-a-Truck can be installed on any Ford chassis in a few hours by two men.

Figure in the cost of a Smith Form-a-Truck equipment on the next big job you figure. You can write off your entire investment in a year and still charge less for hauling than you would with any other form of service, and at the end of the year your Smith Form-a-Truck equipment will be ready for several years more of hard work. This is real money saving for you.

Call on us today or telephone. Let us send you our book, "It Solves Your Delivery Problem." Use the coupon below.

PROPORTIONS

IN hut happiness there is willingness to accept proportions. Life has difficulty in establishing them and maintaining them because they seem destructive to egotism, to the kindly illusion of grandeur which makes the individual too important to be inconsiderable or unconsidered.

Change is a natural shock to illusion, when it is violent, and even when it is gentle it will oppress postmeridian life unless experience has brought acceptance. We know the wild rose petals cannot be enduring and remain charming. Their value is in evanescence.

To be saddened by what gives value to the thing that pleases is a contradiction in emotion that cannot be allowed in hut happiness, which, if it be anything worth while, is a happiness of acceptance. A sense of proportion is the sound basis of happiness. It accepts the relation of the song of the wood thrush and the petal of the wild rose to eternity and it can think of distances expressible only in light years. The individual thus acceptive stands undismayed as a midge in vastness.

Intelligence comprehends the vastness, pleasure finds itself in proximate things, in intimate acres and a period embraced by life. The relation of these acres and the ephemerality of this period can be understood and they remain scented by sweet clover, filled with wild roses, and all important to the individual for the time being sentient.

May I ask you to publish the best and most direct route from Lansing, Mich., to Beloit, Wis.?

E. H. HUME, Lansing, Mich.

Go to Battle Creek, 51.4 miles, and then through Kalamazoo to South Bend, 92.7 miles; Laporte, Valparaiso, Hobart, Hammond, South Chicago to Chicago, 101 miles; Elgin, Rockford, Roscoe to Beloit, 106 miles.

Please publish the best automobile route from Springfield, Ill., to Sioux Falls, S. D. Also give the distance and the character of the roads. If not too much trouble, would also like the route from St. Louis, Mo., to Sioux Falls.

JOHN JACKSON, Springfield, Ill.

Go through Farmington to Galesburg, 135.2 miles; then through Monmouth to Burlington, Ia., 48.4 miles. From Burlington go through Ottumwa, 178 miles; Creston, Omaha, 111.2 miles; Sioux City, 102.1 miles, to Sioux Falls, 95.1 miles. Most of the roads consist of good dragged dirt, and are fine in good weather. In going from St. Louis to Sioux Falls, pass through Hannibal to Quincy, 151.4 miles, and thence through Keokuk to Burlington, 79.8 miles. At this point pick up the route already outlined.

Will you please publish the best route from Chicago to Peoria, Ill.?

O. M. S., Chicago.

From Chicago followed the Starved Rock trail as far as Ottawa. Go out Washington boulevard to Marengo avenue, where you will find a telephone pole marked with yellow and white bands and the words "Ottawa-Starved Rock Trail." Follow these markings through Naperville, Aurora, Plano, Sandwich, Somonauk, Wedron, and Sulphur Lick to Ottawa, 89.7 miles. From Ottawa go through Lowell, Tonica, Mount Palatine, Magnolia, Varna, La Rose, Washburn, Lowpoint, Cazenovia, Metamora, and Washington to Peoria, 76.1 miles. The roads average good, and consist mostly of gravel, with the exception of good dragged dirt between Tonica and Washington.

Will you please publish in your column of questions and answers the most advisable route to take in going from Fort Wayne, Ind., to Quincy, Ill.?

B. N. N., Decatur, Ind.

Go through Peru, Logansport, and Delphi to Lafayette, 182.8 miles; Champaign, 92.5 miles; Decatur, 57 miles; Springfield, 40.7 miles; Beardstown, to Quincy, 119.9 miles.

Would one bringing an automobile from the country and driving it about Chicago for one or two weeks be obliged to pay the city wheel tax? If so, what would it cost and where should it be paid?

W. E. BECKER, Polo, Ill.

If your car is properly licensed under the Illinois state laws, it will not be necessary for you to pay the Chicago wheel tax in order to drive about the city.

Will you advise me as to the best routes from Aurora to Hammond, Aurora to Lafayette, and Lafayette to Decatur? Please also publish the distance between cities named.

WINNIFRED STALEY, Aurora, Ill.

Although somewhat longer, I would advise you to first drive to Chicago over the Starved Rock trail, through Naperville and Maywood, 40.2 miles; then proceed to Hammond via Michigan avenue, Garfield boulevard, Washington park, Midway, Jackson park, and South Chicago, 21.7 miles. In going from Aurora to Lafayette, pass through Joliet, 24.2 miles; Kankakee, 37.6 miles; Loda, 48.7 miles; to Lafayette, 70 miles. The Lafayette route takes one through Champaign, 92.5 miles; Tuscola, 23.7 miles; to Lafayette, 40.8 miles.

Please route me from Burlington, Ia., to Watervliet, Mich., over the shortest and best way without going through Chicago.

A. L. PEEL, Burlington, Ia.

The distance is 362.8 miles, divided as follows: Galesburg, 48.4 miles; Princeton, 67.4 miles; La Salle, 21.9 miles; Ottawa, 16.2 miles; Joliet, 48.9 miles; Valparaiso, 53.4 miles; Laporte, 22.7 miles; Michigan City, 12 miles; St. Joseph, 45.5 miles; Watervliet, 34.4 miles.

Owing to the large volume of inquiries for automobile routes and the relatively small amount of space in which to answer them, readers wishing immediate replies are advised to inclose a 2 cent stamp with inquiries so they may be answered by mail. Only routes and answers to questions of general interest will be published.

I notice you speak of the Mercedes as a German car. Is that correct? In common with several others, I thought it a French product and made by a concern in Paris.

H. D. M.

The Mercedes is a German car, although the name is Spanish. It was named in honor of a Spanish woman who married the president of the Mercedes company. The victory of a Mercedes in the 1909 French grand prix was so obnoxious to the French that the classic was abandoned for two years.

Will you please give me the best route from Chicago to Columbus, O.? Some people advise me to go via Indianapolis and others say to go via South Bend, Fort Wayne, Van Wert, and Lima. Which route would you advise?

J. M. BROWN, Chicago.

The route via South Bend, Fort Wayne, and Lima, is generally considered the best and shortest route to Columbus.

Please publish in your column the best route to Manitowoc, Wis.

LOUIS STASTNY, Chicago.

Proceed through Evanston, Waukegan, Kenosha, Racine, Milwaukee, 90.5 miles; Sheboygan, Manitowoc, 84.7 miles.

Will you kindly publish the best automobile route from Iron River, Mich., to Mt. Pleasant, Mich., together with the mileage?

A. J. POHLAND, Iron River, Mich.

If you make the entire trip by automobile it will be necessary to make almost a complete circuit of Lake Michigan, going down the west shore and up the east shore. I would advise you to drive through Iron Mountain to Escanaba or Menominee and then ship your car by boat to Charlevoix or Frankfort. If you follow this plan drive through Traverse City, Garfield, Cadillac, Lucas, McBain, Avondale, Sears, Barryton, Sherman City, Weidman, and Beal City to Mount Pleasant, which is 178.9 miles from Traverse City. You should purchase a copy of the Automobile Blue Book, volume 4, which shows details of all routes in the middle west.

Upon finishing a long and hard automobile trip recently, during which I was compelled to use the low gear a great deal in pulling through sand and up steep grades, I found that the car ran poorly and have been unable to get it going right since. I have been told that I did not use enough oil. Could that have caused the trouble with my motor? One thing I notice is that my car has not anywhere near the power it had before I made the trip in question.

C. M. G., St. Paul, Minn.

It is more than likely that your trouble arose through improper lubrication. One of the most important things to see to while on a hard trip such as you refer to is that there is plenty of oil in the crankcase. When the engine runs for any length of time with no oil the cylinder walls become scratched or "scored," causing poor compression and loss of power. A scored cylinder can only be remedied by reboring, and as this is a delicate job, it should be done only by an expert who has a special reboring or regrinding machine installed. When you get your car in shape again, do not fail to use lubricating oil freely—in fact too much is better than too little.

Pslams of Life

"DELIVER ALL PACKAGES AT THE REAR."

Ev'ry day a pert procession beats it gaily o'er the lea
And with accuracy unfailing finds a terminus in me,
Ev'ry day its many members like the magi with their gifts
Congregate with burdened buzzums, congregate in hordes and drifts,
Beat upon my outer casement, pound upon my oaken door,
Yowl and yelp and squawk and yodel, ululate and howl and roar,
Waking me from dreamless slumbers, waking me to sleep no more!

If I open to their knocking comes a Hun with honeyed speech.
"Gaze," says he in liquid accents, "gaze and see—it's in your reach!
Here it is, that wondrous dewdab—it's the greatest aid to man:
It will dye and sweep the carpets, it will open any can,
It will cure your corns and bunions and eradicate the itch,
Shine your shoes and hang your curtains, tune pianos concert pitch,
One slim dime will buy this marvel, yea, this super-wonder which . . ."

But before he can continue I have rapped him on the ruff
And another fills the vacancy and here's HIS line of stuff:
"I am selling at a bargain hand embroidried oyster shells,
They are used for hulling berries, they are good for digging wells,
You can also fry or stew them, you can even serve them raw
Or en casserole, au gratin, caveat emptor, or éclat!
They are good for framing pictures, picking teeth, or shelling beans
And they only cost a trifle—they're within a pauper's means . . ."
It is here I kick him earnestly upon his shiny jeans.

But still they come with real estate and fish and soap and books,
And rugs and lace and tablecloths and skillets, eyes and hooks,
And submarines and artichokes and pins and dogs and cheese,
Insurance, aprons, underwear, and almanacs and peas,
They come throughout the summer day and far into the night,
In color yellow, black, and brown and sorrel, gray, and white,
And they beat upon my casement and they pound upon my door
And they howl and squawk and ululate and wail and whine and roar . . .
I used to sleep a little bit, but now I sleep no more!

Production and Price

Do the great variety of Sixes and the fluctuating prices seem confusing and perplexing?

Let's reason it out.

What controls price? Production.

As a manufacturer's production increases, his production cost, per car, decreases.

Therefore the plant with the largest production is in a position to give more of everything and charge less for it.

We are the world's largest producers of Six and Four Cylinder Automobiles.

Consequently you get in the Overland Six a larger and more powerful motor—a longer wheelbase—the convenience of electric control buttons on the steering column and an almost endless list of other comforts and refinements.

—yet what is the price?

Not $1200 or $1300 but $1145.

And when it comes to a Six Cylinder performance, remember the Overland Six is the star of them all.

One ride will convince you.

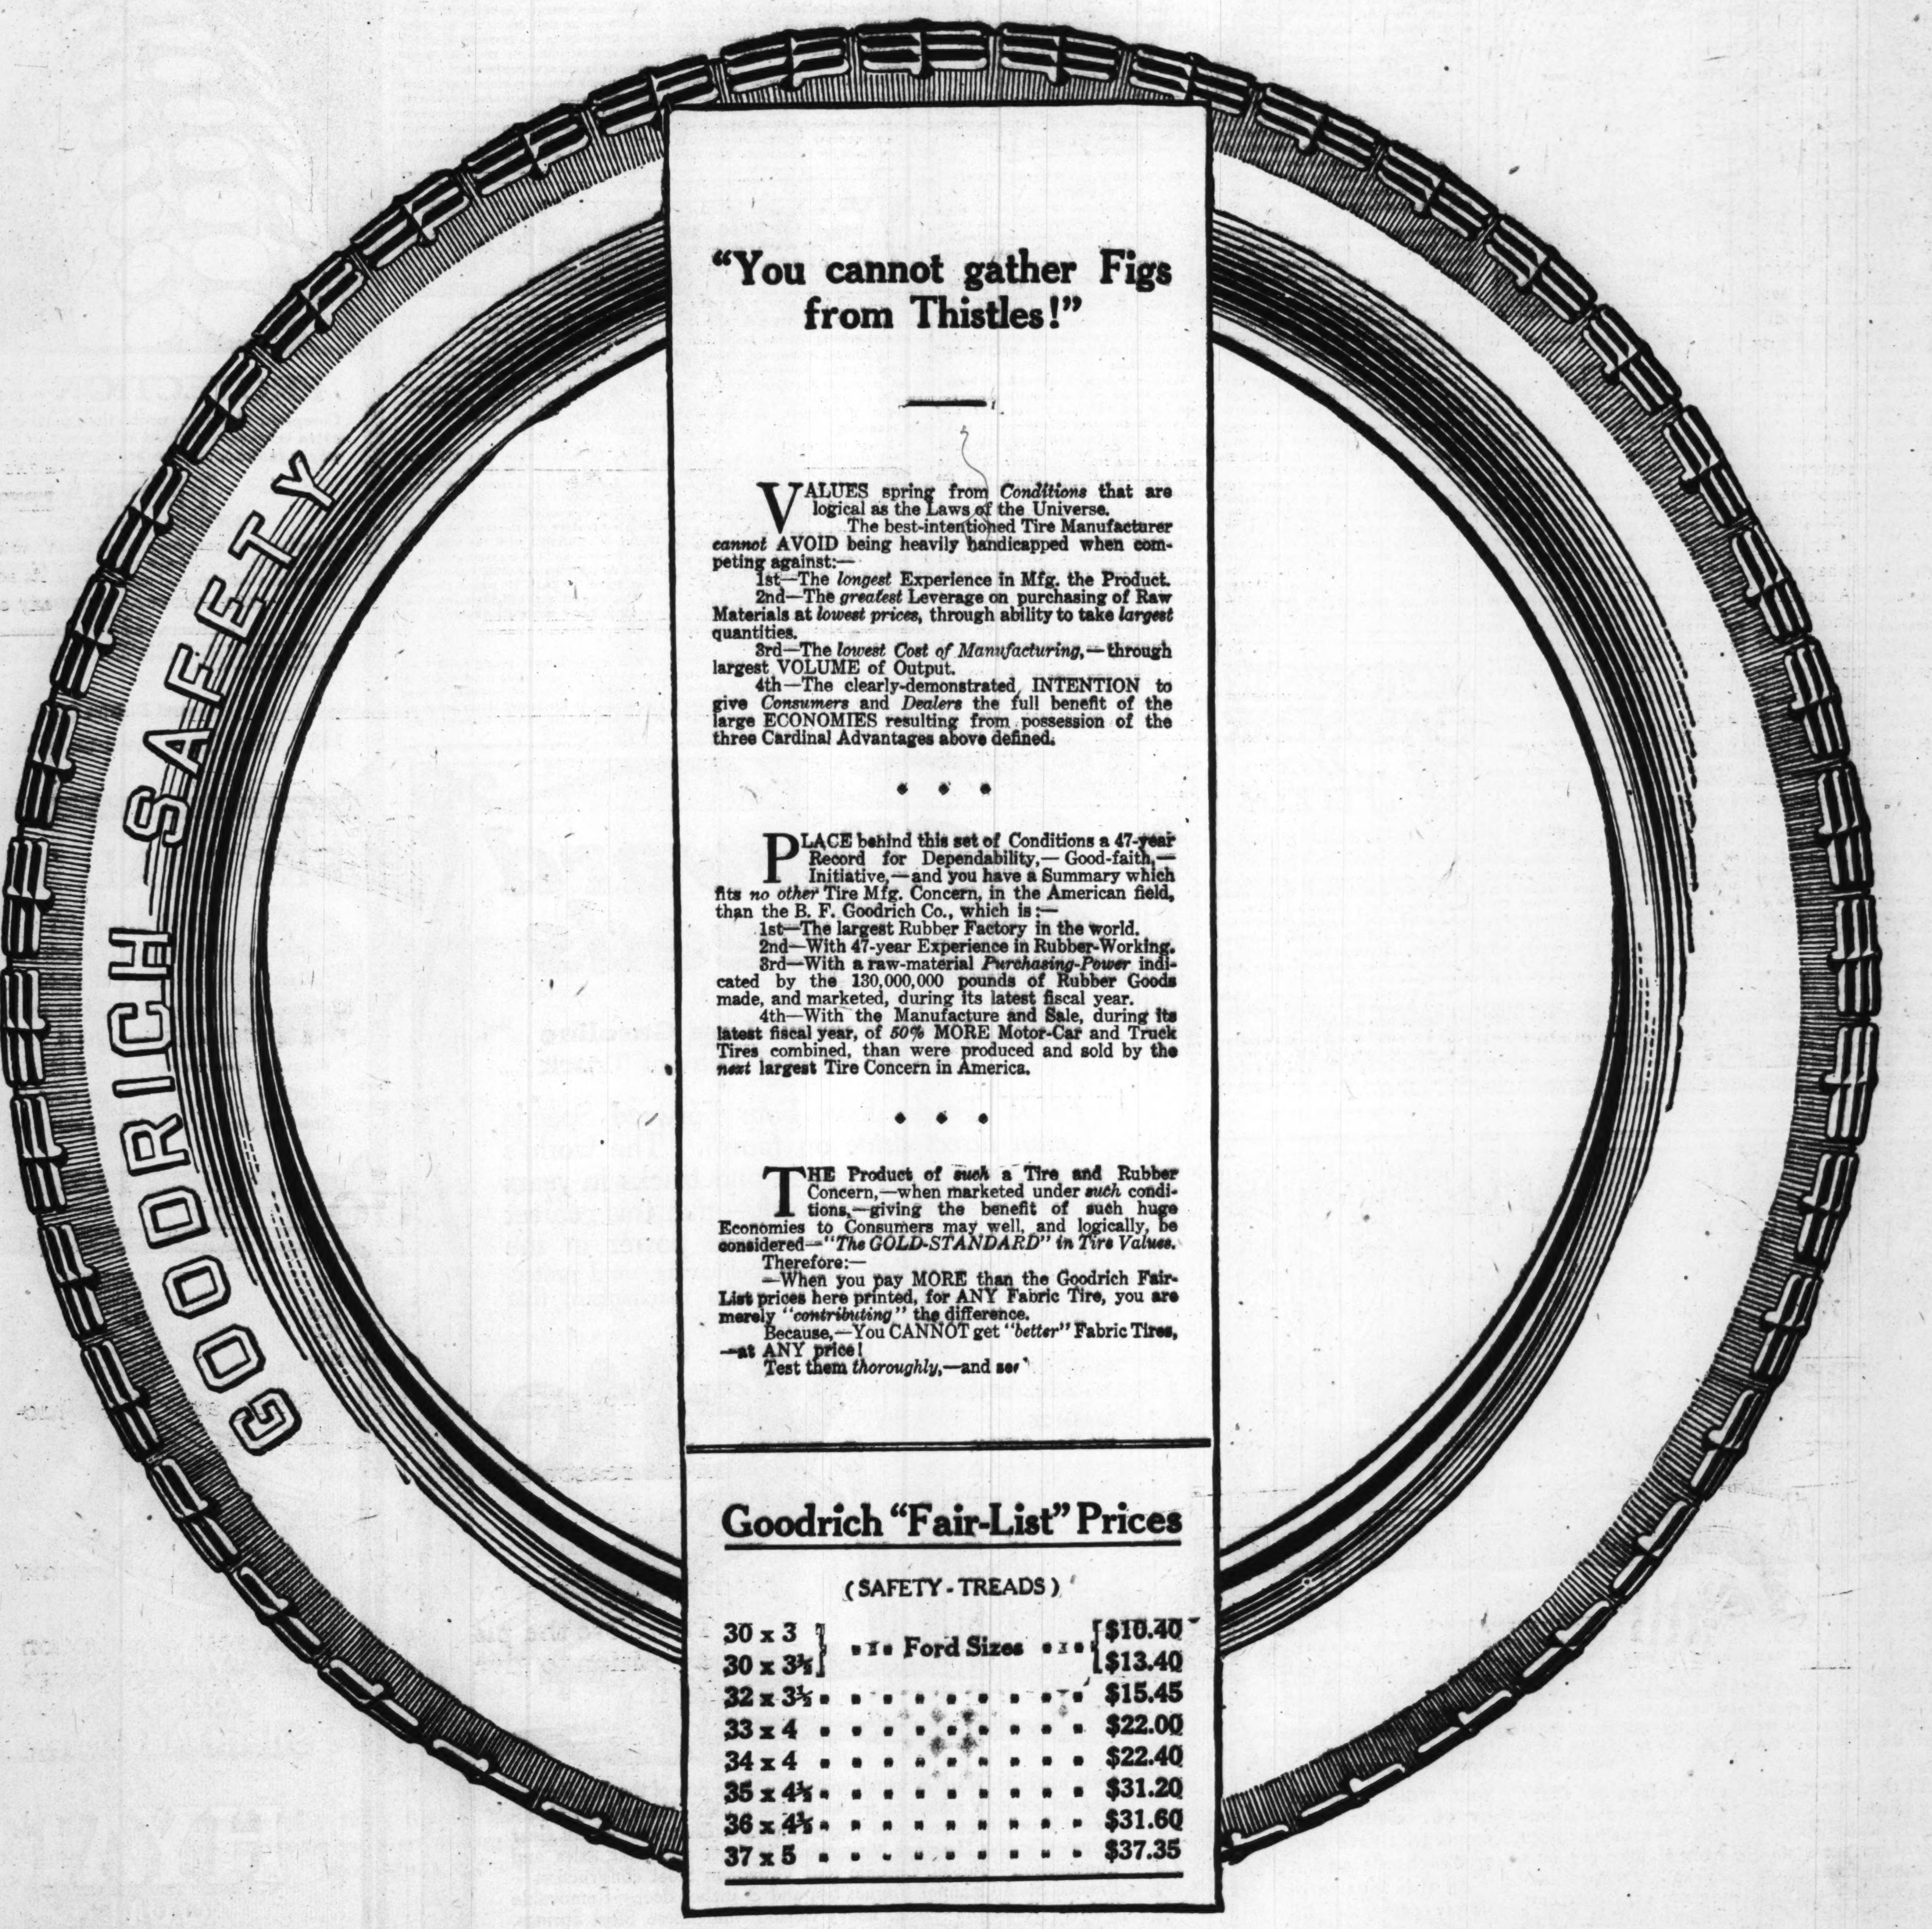
The "Gold-Standard"—in Tires



"You cannot gather Figs from Thistles!"

VALUES spring from Conditions that are logical as the Laws of the Universe.

The best-intentioned Tire Manufacturer cannot AVOID being heavily handicapped when competing against:—

1st—The longest Experience in Mfg. the Product.

2nd—The greatest Leverage on purchasing of Raw Materials at lowest prices, through ability to take largest quantities.

3rd—The lowest Cost of Manufacturing,—through largest VOLUME of Output.

4th—The clearly-demonstrated INTENTION to give Consumers and Dealers the full benefit of the large ECONOMIES resulting from possession of the three Cardinal Advantages above defined.

• • •

PLACE behind this set of Conditions a 47-year Record for Dependability,—Good-faith,—Initiative,—and you have a Summary which fits no other Tire Mfg. Concern, in the American field, than the B. F. Goodrich Co., which is:—

1st—The largest Rubber Factory in the world.

2nd—With 47-year Experience in Rubber-Working.

3rd—With a raw-material Purchasing-Power indicated by the 130,000,000 pounds of Rubber Goods made, and marketed, during its latest fiscal year.

4th—With the Manufacture and Sale, during its latest fiscal year, of 50% MORE Motor-Car and Truck Tires combined, than were produced and sold by the next largest Tire Concern in America.

• • •

THE Product of such a Tire and Rubber Concern,—when marketed under such conditions,—giving the benefit of such huge Economies to Consumers may well, and logically, be considered—"The GOLD-STANDARD" in Tire Values.

Therefore:—

—When you pay MORE than the Goodrich Fair-List prices here printed, for ANY Fabric Tire, you are merely "contributing" the difference.

Because,—You CANNOT get "better" Fabric Tires,—at ANY price!

Test them thoroughly,—and see!

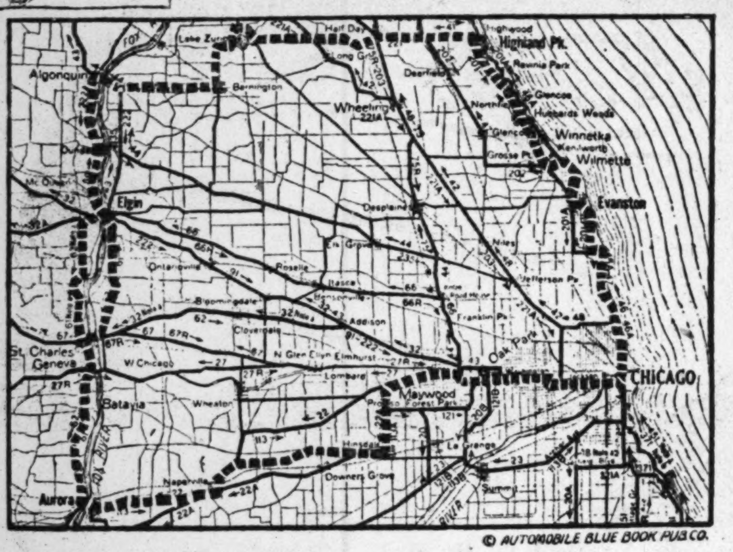
Where Shall We Drive To-Day?



© AUTOMOBILE BLUE BOOK PUB. CO.

CHICAGO TO HIGHLAND PARK, ALGONQUIN, AURORA, AND RETURN.

(Data furnished by the Automobile Blue Book Touring bureau.)

WITH the exceedingly heavy rains in the last week, motorists should be careful in selecting their route to keep to the gravel or hard roads as far as possible and even avoid old gravel. The weather is most unseasonable and resembles what we had a year ago, although it is to be hoped that we will not have such a continuously wet season as we had in June, 1915.

Another thing to be taken into account in estimating conditions is that this year we had a much better May than last and most of the roads were in a mid-summer condition before this heavy rain set in, so that it will take exceedingly heavy travel to put them in bad shape.

The following trip suggestion for today is made with a view of its being particularly suitable to those who simply wish a Sunday trip, not getting a long distance from Chicago at any point; in fact, as noted from the map, the farthest away is about forty miles, so that at various points it can be materially shortened if desired.

Another thing that must be taken into account in arranging trips now is to avoid the many roads which are closed because of improvements. Supt. of Highways Quinlan reports that within another week or two practically every stretch of road that is under contract for this year will be closed. In a later issue of THE TRIBUNE will be given a map showing in detail the sections closed and how to avoid them in every instance.

◆

Leaving Chicago, it is suggested that you go up the north shore, following Sheridan road all the way to Rogers Park and Evanston into the southern edge of Wilmette. Here, after you cross the new viaduct over the sanitary canal, bear left in Central street, leaving the shore; go due west in Central street to the first large school on the right and turn right in Tenth street, going straight north to Chestnut street. This is practically the end of the street, as the road ahead is dirt.

Here turn left, shortly curving right into the edge of Kenilworth; go north through Kenilworth with two or three right and left turns, but with main travel all the way and properly marked with signs, coming out on the north edge of Kenilworth at the new brick road at Indian Hill station. Here bear right on the brick following along railroad, go straight into Winnetka to the far side of park; here turn left, going up slight grade, cross the railroad at business center, and immediately after railroad turn right on brick, following along tracks to end of street at North avenue. Here turn left and continue on brick to end of road in northwest corner of Winnetka, and turn right. Go straight north, same becoming Vernon avenue, Glencoe. Go straight through Glencoe, running into Green Bay road on northwest corner of town. Keep straight ahead on numerous stretches of concrete, coming into Highland Park at Central street.

Keep ahead across Central street, shortly coming along Northwestern tracks again, and go ahead until you can see Highwood station ahead on right; here turn left and go straight west into Half Day. At four corners at roadhouses jog left across bridge, taking first right; go almost due west on fairly good road to Lake Zurich. At four corners at business center turn right and follow road around shore of lake, keeping to the left until on the west side of lake; here take the first road to the right, going through the woods, and at foot of short grade take the first left up grade, go to the end of the road, turn right, and take first left straight into Barrington, cross railroad in Barrington, and take the main road due west into Algonquin.

At four corners just after passing the river above the dam in Algonquin turn left in Main street and go south on river road along the west side of the Fox river. This is one of the most beautiful stretches of roads with fine views in this section. Go through the western edge of Carpentersville and Dundee, coming into Elgin in State street.

In Elgin you are offered the option of going across the river to the east side and following the east side road as shown on map, but in this case we believe that the shorter and more direct route is just as good. We suggest keeping straight ahead in State street through the western section of Elgin, following trolley within sight of Fox river all the way directly into St. Charles. At Main street turn left two blocks to Second street, where turn right and go straight into Geneva. Take up Lincoln highway at this point and keep ahead on west side of Fox river straight to Aurora. Practically all the roads from Geneva to Aurora are now concrete. Pass through western edge of Batavia, coming into Aurora in Lake street.

At Downer place turn left, cross the Fox river bridge, keep straight ahead across Broadway and railroad, running up slight grade to Lincoln avenue, turn left two blocks to New York street, where turn right and go straight east out of Aurora, following Starved Rock trail marking through Naperville until just after crossing the bridge over railroad on northeastern side of Naperville.

Immediately beyond this bridge bear right and follow this road straight through northern edge of Downers Grove, coming into small town of Fullersburg, which is really almost a part of Hinsdale on the north side. At store in Fullersburg turn left and go straight north on fairly good macadam about four miles to the Butterfield road; here turn right, taking up Starved Rock trail markings again; follow same direct all the way into the city, passing through Maywood and coming into the city in Madison street. At Marengo avenue turn left one block, then right into Washington boulevard, which is followed into Garfield park, then into the heart of the city in Jackson boulevard.

Dramatis Personae of the Speed Spectacle.

NO. 9—JOSEF CHRISTIAENS, SUNBEAM.

FROM Belgium, the cockpit of Europe, comes the only foreign race driver that has crossed the Atlantic for an American campaign this year. He is Josef Christiaens, who has been put in charge of two cars by the Sunbeam company of England. This is his second invasion of the United States, for in 1914 he brought the Excelsior to Indianapolis for the annual international sweepstakes and took sixth money in the 500 mile classic.

Christiaens' bulky frame and fair complexion stamp him as a north countryman. In his build and his temperament he is unlike the other foreign drivers who have won applause and prize money in this country, for he has few of the characteristics of the excitable, daring Frenchmen that made speed history at Indianapolis in 1913 and 1914.

The Belgian is slow, methodical, and careful. A skilled engineer, he knows too much about automobiles to abuse them. Being of a phlegmatic temperament, he takes no chances in a race. The saving of his car, not the winning of the purse, is uppermost in his mind during the heat of battle when it is customary for the average driver to open the throttle to the last notch regardless of the consequences.

Christiaens is old in the service of Mercury. In the early days of the sport he was the head of the Darracq racing department and later was chief engineer for the Vivinus company of Belgium, designing and constructing automobiles and aviation motors. The Belgian also is an aviator, being the seventh European to receive his license and the first birdman to fly in the presence of the Russian czar. At one time he was associated with Henri Farnam.

The winning of the Coupe de Liedekerck, the Belgian speed classic, in 1909 is Christiaens' most notable achievement. He also has competed in two French grand prix, finishing sixth in 1912 and eighth in 1913, and holds the Brooklands' fifty mile record of 102 miles per hour.

With only twenty minutes of sleep, Christiaens in 1913 drove an Excelsior from Brussels to St. Petersburg, a distance of 2,000 miles, in fifty-one hours losing six hours at the customs.

Christiaens refuses to discuss the European war, shaking his head negatively when asked what were his experiences in the drive of the German troops through Belgium and in his rumored participation in the hostilities as an army aviator.

One of the debutants of automobile row is the Maypole Motor Sales company, formed recently to distribute the Sanford truck in Illinois, Wisconsin, Iowa, and northern Indiana. Salesrooms have been opened at 2642-44 Michigan avenue. The members of the company are W. T., W. J., and G. M. Maypole, the latter being sales manager.

It may surprise many people to know that in addition to tires for autos, trucks bicycles, motorcycles, carriages, etc., the great Goodrich factories produce over 20 000 other articles manufactued with rubber. "We wish people had the time to let us lead them through the mazes of our giant institution and show them all the making of the other products which comprise our regular line," says H. J. Morehead of the B. F. Goodrich company. "An important line is inner tubes for automobiles. Next come the water bottles and all the various sundries for the surgeon, dentist, stationer, etc. Then there are the sporting goods—tennis balls, golf balls, hand balls, baseball centers body protectors, gun recoil pads, billiard cushions, etc. Then there's the big hard rubber department with all the hard rubber products—of particular interest the battery jars, 10,000 of them a day, from the little pocket lighting batteries to the huge affairs that make possible the under water propulsion of the submarine. Another important item is our waterrpoof clothing department, where the famous 'Double Duty' coats are made."

Again the King conquers in a high gear test. Within a fortnight this eight cylinder motor car has had three phenomenal accomplishments added to its laurels as a result of its wonderful high gear ability. The latest feature was the climb up Mount Wilson in California with the high gear level removed and the transmission gears sealed so that the car could travel on no other speed but high. It was engineered by C. A. English of the English Motor Car company, Los Angeles distributor for the King.

Perhaps the largest single order ever given by a Chicago motor truck dealer in the ordinary course of business is that just placed by the James Motor company for twenty 1½ ton Denby trucks for immediate delivery.

Buffalo Bill and Daniel Boone—

Buffalo Bill and Daniel Boone were a couple of good old scouts. They followed the trail by the light of the moon, they knew their whereabouts!

But they lived in a day when the country was rough—there weren't any turnpikes to worry, today as you travel you try to unravel the highways that urge you to hurry.

What you need is a chap who will put on his cap and guide you from morning to night—who will show you a hundred new trips for each day, who will know when a sign-post is right.

I'll steer you to comfort and excellent food, to the roads that are really alluring. I'm the fellow for you if you say "I am through with this blind-folded method of touring!"

LET the Automobile Blue Book save you all the miles of useless wear and tear now wasted on wrong roads—save you from eating cold, badly cooked meals and from getting poor hotel accommodations.

Two dollars and a half invested in this book now may save you hundreds in wasted gas during the season—hours in tedious delays on every trip, days of discomfort and even hardship. Each volume contains 250 to 300 maps showing routes, city streets for automobiles, and an average of 40,000 miles of detailed road directions—including mileages, landmarks, railroads, cautions at dangerous places—in fact the complete information you want. It is a word picture of your route prepared by our eight road scouts who have covered each mile in a car.

All this wealth of simply-presented information is obtainable for $2.50—the price of a theatre ticket. Buy your copy at any book shop, automobile supply store, news-stand; or send $2.50 direct to us—mailed prepaid.

You will find me sold at bookshops and at news-stands in hotels. You can call me from department stores and I'll be there with bells. But if it's more convenient, perhaps you'll find it so, just send along your private check—Two fifty—see below.

GOSSIP OF THE AUTO TRADE.

"Two hundred and one Reo dealers and buyers came to the factory at Lansing in one week and drove their cars away," says R. C. Rueschaw. "Fifteen to twenty dealers a day is the average, and most of them, of course, come from our own state, Michigan. The best thing about these 'drive aways' is that they are invariably followed by orders, and then some more orders," added the Reo sales manager.

What's to be the limit in the number of automobile cylinders? Less than two years ago the eight cylinder motor car was unheard of. Now eights are common and two of the oldest and most reliable auto manufacturers have been building successful twelve cylinder cars during the last year. "The increase has stopped now with twelve cylinders," says George M. Dickson, general manager of the company building National twelve cylinder cars. "There is no doubt but that the six cylinder motor was, and still is, a decided success," continued Mr. Dickson, "and that the same reasons that led engineers to adopt the six also led them to attain perfected results from a twelve which is the epitome of all cylinder efforts since the beginning of motor car engineering."

Sales are pretty good when a dealer cannot even keep a demonstrating car. Taking the demonstrating cars to fill orders of consumers has been done several times by the A. G. Faulkner company, distributor in southern California for the Marmon 34. "We haven't been able to keep any single car for a demonstrator for more than two weeks," said Mr. Faulkner. "Not that we wanted to sell them, because a demonstrating car on hand constantly is a paying investment, but our customers have been so insistent on delivery that they would not wait and literally forced us to give up the demonstrators. This condition is not caused by a shortage of cars, but is due to the extraordinary demand for the new Marmon. The factory is working night and day on a greatly increased schedule and meeting delivery dates."

California, it is said, is the motor wise state of the union—the best educated in the merits of the various makes of cars. The number of sales in California is taken by the motor world as indicative of the true merit of an automobile, so manufacturers watch the results carefully. To determine accurately the number of Saxon motor cars now in the coast state a check of the license registration was taken recently by the Saxon Motor Car company. It was then compared with the check of a year ago, and with rather astonishing results. May 1, 1915, the Saxon car ranked thirty-second in numerical strength among the cars in California of all makes. Today it stands in fifth place. In the last year the gain made by the Saxon in the state pulled it from near the bottom of the list to a top place position. Low initial cost, economy of upkeep, and the qualities of a high priced car are the three things which its makers credit for its success. Its economy of operation—the six cylinder in many cases making better than twenty miles to the gallon and the four cylinder making thirty miles—has demonstrated this feature.

The Yellowstone Trail association has announced its extension from Chicago to the Atlantic coast at Plymouth, Mass. The route is as follows: From Chicago to Hammond, Ind.; Hammond to Fort Wayne, Ind., via Valparaiso, Plymouth, Warsaw, Pierceton, and Columbia City; Fort Wayne to Akron, O., via Hicksville, Fremont, Bowling Green, Napoleon, and Norwalk; Akron to Kingston, N. Y., via Warren, O., Franklin and Oil City, Pa.; Olean, Hornell, Elmira, Binghamton, and Unadilla, N. Y.; Kingston to Plymouth, Mass., via Salisbury, Norfolk, Hartford, and Putnam, Conn.; Providence, R. I. Taunton and Middleboro, Mass. This alignment of towns was selected by the Yellowstone trail only after long study of the situation and a personal investigation of the roads. The work of marking the new road with the official mark of the Yellowstone trail will be begun at once.

The new Premier Motor corporation of Indianapolis, according to dependable information, is rounding into final shape a car destined to create a veritable sales furor. While details as to just what the car is to be are withheld, it is known to contain new features, equaling in interest the electric starter. The car will have a wheel base of 125½ inches and carrying all its accessories and as regular equipment will, it is said, sell under $1,700.

"Transcontinental touring is a real recreation, unless you are going after a record; then it becomes a real work," says Bobby Hammond, who became holder of the transcontinental record when he drove his Empire car into New York, completing the trip across the country in 6 days, 10 hours, 58 minutes. "It may seem fine to get into a car at San Francisco with New York only about 2,400 miles away, but there are all kinds of hardships ahead of a driver if he attempts to do it in fast time. There isn't a road condition which will not be found on this trip. On my record breaking trip in the Empire I was fortunate in point of weather until I reached Ohio. From Canton on I don't believe there was a minute it was not raining. It was on the last stretch that I had my only serious accident, colliding with another car."

A Studebaker six climbed the famous Giant's Despair mountain, near Wilkes-Barre, Pa., recently, and made the entire ascent in high gear. Giant's Despair is known as one of the steepest mountains up which a road runs and has long furnished a test for any car endeavoring to climb it, even in low gear. Upon reaching the summit of Giant's Despair it was found that in spite of the strain that naturally was put upon the Studebaker in making the pitch in high gear, the radiator was not heated up and the motor was just as snappy as at the start. An interesting feature of the journey was that the driver of the car several times during the run, as if to demonstrate that there was always a lot of "pep" under the hood, would raise his foot off of the accelerator pedal and start over again. This was in contrast to the usual method of hill climbing with the throttle wide open all the time.

Quality First

I Have a 3400 r. p. m. Ready This Minute For You

This certainly is a great year for selling cars. Most everybody has had success. Some more than others, as is always the case.

Chalmers sales are running 900 per cent ahead of last year all over the United States. Mr. Chalmers' foresight in doubly providing against a shortage of materials has won a great contest.

It has enabled the Chalmers plant to keep on building cars when one or two have shut down or others have had to cut down on allotments to their dealers.

Here it is June and the great Chalmers plant is running day and night, three shifts, turning out more cars than ever before.

How long can Chalmers keep filling the demand?

I don't know. I know only this: the plant is turning out about 125 a day; Chalmers dealers are selling about 425 a day.

The only reason I or any other dealer can supply a car now is because during December, January and February the Chalmers plant worked day and night like Trojans and built about 125 cars a day when the dealers were selling probably only about 80. Soon these 425-a-day sales are going to eat up the surplus made during the Winter months.

I got a letter a few days ago from the Chalmers plant which simply said: "We have on hand orders asking for immediate shipment of cars whose value is in excess of $8,000,000."

I need not narrate the rest of the note which was so obviously subtle that I got the telegraph operators on the job right off.

I'm making my promises on delivery from day to day. I've got cars or can get them now. This may not hold good tomorrow.

Next week I shall cut my promises down still more. Remember, there are only two things that I concern myself with these days. One is to get you to take one ride in a 3400 r. p. m. Chalmers if you have not done so already. That's all I want. The car speaks in a language you'll understand.

The other thing is simply one of mathematics: If the Chalmers factory can turn out 125 cars a day and Chalmers dealers all over the United States are selling 425 a day, how long will the supply last?

Price still unchanged—$1090 Detroit.

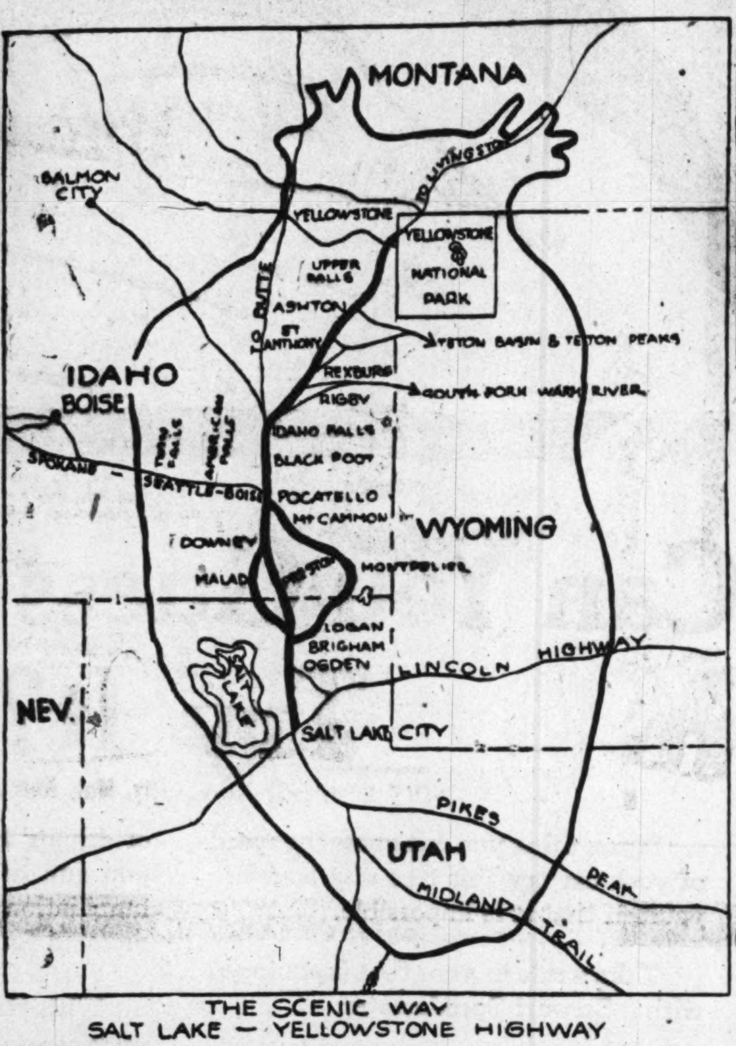
Salt Lake-Yellowstone Highway Through Utah.

TURBULENT MOUNTAIN STREAM CROSSED BY IDAHO HIGHWAY



THE SCENIC WAY
SALT LAKE — YELLOWSTONE HIGHWAY

SUMMIT OF THE GRAND TETONS

By C. C. Dietrich.

THE Salt Lake-Yellowstone highway branches from the Lincoln highway at Salt Lake City and Ogden, and runs in a general northerly direction through seventeen counties of Utah and Idaho to the Yellowstone entrance of the national park in Montana. At Brigham City, Utah, the highway divides into three sections, one passing through Garland, Malad, and Malad valley; one through Logan, Preston, and Cache valley, both converging at Downey, Idaho, and one through Logan, Logan cañon, Bear Lake valley, and Montpelier, Idaho, joining with the other two in the Portneuf cañon at McCammon, Idaho, twenty-five miles south of Pocatello, and continuing as one trunk highway to Yellowstone.

The auto traffic of the United States, and more particularly that coming over the Lincoln highway east or west and off the Pike's Peak and Grand cañon routes and Midland trail, is taken by this highway at Salt Lake and Ogden and carried to Pocatello, the junction point of the Idaho-Pacific state trunk highway leading west through the valley of the Snake river, from which highway, in turn, lead other highways to northern and central Idaho and the entire northwest.

From Pocatello the tourist proceeds on this highway to Yellowstone park, and at different points along this section of the route other highways lead off to connect with other trunk highways and to local fishing, hunting, and scenic sections and agricultural districts. Conversely, traffic from the national park off any of the northern routes is picked up at Yellowstone and taken over the Salt Lake-Yellowstone highway to the junction with the routes at Ogden and Salt Lake, and at Pocatello and other points going west.

The Salt Lake-Yellowstone highway is the connecting link over which the autoist travels to and from Yellowstone park and the Lincoln highway into Idaho and to the entire northwest, and vice versa, and without which Idaho, the "Gem of the Mountains," presenting the greatest panorama of natural scenery and agricultural development of the west, would be cut off from the rapidly increasing auto travel of the continent.

◆

Along the highway from Great Salt lake to Yellowstone, through Utah and Idaho, there are so many objects of interest that the tourist finds himself in much the same predicament as the small boy at a three ring circus. There is so much to see that it cannot all be taken in with the human eye.

From Salt Lake City through Ogden, past Ogden and Weber cañons, the long white road leads to Brigham City through intensively cultivated farm and orchard land which hugs the base of the snow capped Wasatch range and gently declines to the great lake shimmering to the west—then over the mountain streams and great green stretches of the Cache and Malad valleys, that climb clear into the foothills of the adjoining mountain ranges, a beautiful landscape of city and village and fertile farm land, crisscrossed with the never ending irrigation streams—or by way of the great, deep Bear lake and the fertile fields of Bear lake valley, until the picturesque drive through Portneuf cañon, along the river, and by waterfall and beaver dam, farmhouse and dairy ranch, between the great, high mountains and towering, abrupt lava phalanxes brings you into Pocatello.

Off to the north again you are taken. To the west and north, as far as the eye can reach lies the great expanse of open country once known as the Snake River desert, and now the richest and most fertile body of agricultural land in the northwest, the Great Valley of the Snake. Here you pass through the Fort Hall Indian reservation, past the large Indian schools, and cross the Blackfoot river into Blackfoot.

From this point to Ashton, through Shelley, Idaho Falls, Rigby, Rexburg, and St. Anthony, you ride along the old trail of Capt. Bonneville, alongside the right of way of the Oregon Short line, through the center of a vast green and white carpet of orchard, pea, lucerne, and potato blossom in the upper Snake River valley, the granary of Idaho.

To the right the majestic Tetons pierce the cloud, and to the west the Sawtooths form a background for one of the prettiest pictures of the ride. Clear into the forests of the mountainside the famous "dry farms" are seen, every now and then the highway skirts the broad Snake, and finally you dip down into Warm river canon, cross Warm river, ascend the divide, and look down into the canons of Snake river and Warm river—two strips of white foam, leaping to their junction just below on the way to the Pacific.

From this point, thousands of feet on an easy grade above the great valley below, the glass brings up a never to be forgotten sight as you turn around for one more look before entering the forest, for at Warm river the highway enters the Targhee national forest. Two miles from the top of the divide, along the highway and a half mile to the west, are the renowned two upper falls of the Snake, reached by a first class road. Down into and out of Bear gulch and fifteen more miles brings you out into Island park, "the playground of Idaho."

It is here that Mrs. Harriman and her sons, Judge Trude of Chicago on the Shotgun ranches, and thousands of others who own and maintain clubhouses, summer places, and temporary camps transform the hot days and sweltering nights of the east into a cool, refreshing, and healthful existence.

Winding past rocky ledge, through dense wood interspersed with flower and grass grown open meadow and park, over Buffalo river, and across the Snake river at Flat Rock, the highway finally reaches Henry's Lake flat. A mile and a half to the east, at the foot of a huge bluff, the north, or Henry's, fork of Snake river bubbles forth from the ground in great springs, immediately forming a large stream, which is joined a short distance below by the outlet of Henry's lake, the lake itself being located twelve miles above and a stone's throw to the left as the highway turns to ascend the Targhee pass, or cañon.

Five miles more and the Montana-Idaho divide has been easily negotiated and a downhill stretch of eight miles, through Dwelles, the old western entrance to the park, over Grayling creek, with a beautiful winding drive of a few miles through the heavy Montana forests, puts you down at the edge of tourist land, Yellowstone, Mont., the western entrance to the national park.

Studebaker

Then say to the Salesman:
"Why is your price $250 higher than Studebaker's?"

You will find that any other car that gives as much as a SERIES 17 Studebaker, either 6-cylinder or 4-cylinder, is priced from $250 to $400 HIGHER.

Ask the salesman WHY—remembering that back of Studebaker lies the judgment of Detroit, the city that knows how cars are made—and of California, the State that knows how cars PERFORM.

In the year of 1915, both Detroit and California registrations showed Studebaker cars far in the lead of any car selling at over $500. Detroit with so many of its residents closely associated with the manufacture of cars, O. K.'s the mechanical side of the car. California, with more miles of good roads and more days of good weather than any other State, O. K.'s the car's performance on the roads.

When such a car, with such endorsement back of it, is priced $250 to $400 lower than any other cars that equal it, make them tell you why you have to pay more for those cars. Come in here and let us show you how much a Studebaker gives.

How Are the Roads?

THE heavy rains of the last week have worked havoc with the highways and motorists contemplating tours are advised to postpone their trips until the roads have a chance to dry. The following up to the minute reports were gathered by the road scouts of the Automobile Blue Book for exclusive publication in THE TRIBUNE:

ILLINOIS.

Galesburg to Quincy—This route, via Bushnell and Macomb, is reported in fair condition with the exception of mud holes in the vicinity of Macomb, where teams often are needed to pull cars out.

Effingham reports that the Old National trail from St. Louis to Terra Haute has not been seriously affected by recent rains and that the road is fairly good.

Effingham to Mattoon—The Egyptian trail is being repaired and dragged. The general condition of this route is fair.

Hannibal to Springfield—This route, via Jacksonville, is somewhat rough, but motorists are traveling over it.

INDIANA.

To avoid construction work now under way on the Lincoln highway, motorists are advised to go from South Bend to Toledo via Goshen, Ligonier, Bryan, and Wauseon.

Indianapolis to Dayton—On the Old National trail, the bridge entering Richmond will be closed all summer. For detour, at mileage 66, instead of turning left with branch trolley, keep straight ahead down steep grade and go across temporary bridge into Richmond.

Indianapolis to Champaign and Decatur—On this route, via Rockville and Newman, there is a bridge out at Bainbridge, but the detour is short and good.

IOWA.

The Lincoln highway through Marshalltown will be paved soon.

Des Moines reports all roads in good condition.

MICHIGAN.

Detroit to South Bend and Chicago—The best connection at the present time is the route that passes through Ypsilani, Coldwater, and Elkhart.

NEBRASKA.

North Platte to Julesburg, Colo.—This is a link of the Lincoln highway, and at Ogallala an eight mile stretch which was made almost impassable by heavy rains last season is being graded, dragged, and placed in first class condition.

Omaha reports roads muddy because of [illegible] recent rains, but drying fast.

OHIO.

Toledo to Lima—This section of the [illegible] highway is being torn up. Detour via [illegible] ford and Lime City. At Rossford [illegible] end of pavement; go straight through [illegible] to end of road; turn right and take [illegible] macadam to left. Go to end of road, [illegible] right, and immediately left. Go to end of [illegible] and turn right into Bowling Green.

WISCONSIN.

Lake Geneva reports all roads in [illegible] dition as a result of heavy rains.

Milwaukee reports all exits good. [illegible] waukee to Madison via Oconomowoc [illegible] is bad into Oconomowoc, but [illegible] pairs from the end of concrete to [illegible] house, a distance of five miles. This [illegible] of road will be closed until July 5.

THIS GETS A LAUGH FROM SOME IN VAUDEVILLE

MAJESTIC.

Bert Fitzgibbon:

"Well, Harry, I've got a riddle for you. There was a little dog with a crooked tail running down the street with no one behind him. Now, what was the little dog running down the street for?"

"I'm sure I don't know, Bert."

"Well, Harry, he was in a hurry. And, by the way, Harry, I got a great piece of news today, a welcome message from my old home town."

"What was the message, Bert?"

"It said: 'Come home; your tailor is dead!' Now I've got another story to tell you. It's about a policeman and another Irishman. The policeman arrested the Irishman on a corner, and as they were waiting for the wagon the Irishman's hat blew off. 'Let me go and get it. I'll come back,' begged the Irishman. The policeman laughed. 'G' wan,' he said. 'Me let you go and git yer hat? Not me! Ye'd never some back.' The Irishman insisted that he wouldn't run away. The officer shook his head. 'Sure,' he said, 'I wouldn't take the chance. You stand here and I'll go get it.'

"I have another story, Harry. It's about a little girl. Her mother gave her a pitcher and a nickel and sent her after some milk. Pretty soon the little girl came back and said she had broken the pitcher. 'I should beat you,' said her mother. 'But I won't this time.' So she gave her another pitcher and started her off. Pretty soon the little girl came back and said: 'Mother, I've broken the pitcher again.' Her mother looked at her and said: 'I should spank you good, but this time I'll forgive you.' So she gave her another pitcher.

"About fifteen minutes later the child came back with the same story and again her mother reprimanded her, gave her another one and sent her out again. Soon after the child returned and said: 'Mother, I did not break the pitcher, but I lost the nickel.' Her mother was angry and said: 'I should beat you, but I will not do it this time.' Thereupon she gave her another nickel and sent her out again. Two times after that the girl came back with neither pitcher nor nickel. 'I ought to spank you for that,' said her mother, who was a patient woman.

"Thereupon she gave the child another pitcher and another nickel and said: 'My dear, mother is very cross now, and if you come back again without either pitcher or nickel I'll kill you!'

"The little girl went out, but pretty soon she returned. 'I am sorry, mother,' she said, 'but I have lost the nickel and the pitcher, too.'"

"So her mother killed her."

◆

McVICKER'S.

Frear and Baggott.

"I went hunting down south and I accidentally rushed into a den of snakes, and, strange to say, not one of them bit me."

"How is that?"

"They were all rattled."

◆

"I saw you out driving the other day. That was a very spirited animal you had."

"The fastest in the world."

"What is his name?"

"Brains."

"Brains? I never heard of him."

"He always comes in ahead."

◆

MAJESTIC.

Gertrude Vanderbilt and George Moore:

"Well, general, how do you feel today?"

"I feel full."

"How full?"

"Awful."

◆

"Can you tell me what's good for hives?"

"Certainly—bees."

"Ha, ha! Where did you get that one?"

"O, I bought that one."

"You got stung. By the way, who was that little girl I saw you walking down the street with the other day?"

"O, she was a little hungry girl I met somewhere. I gave her $500 and told her to get herself a sandwich at the Kragstone hotel."

"Why didn't you make it a thousand so the poor girl could have some butter on her bread?"

◆

"So you're a soldier, eh? Salute me and come here and take these orders."

"Ha, I'm back on the old job again: 'What'll you have?' Would you like some golden soup?"

"Golden soup? What's that?"

"Fourteen carrots. And how will you have your eggs?"

"What do you mean?"

"Turned or looking at you."

◆

"Now I want you to return to your regiment the worst way."

"It shall be as you say; I'll go over the Clark street bridge."

The Reputation of the Maxwell

"WHAT is the bore and stroke of your motor," was asked a Maxwell owner not long ago.

"I don't know," he replied simply, "I don't buy cars on figures any more. I buy them on what they've done."

For this man, and for many others like him, it was enough that during the thirteen strenuous years the Maxwell record for performance, reliability and economy had swept it to the front.

Figures—engine speed figures, horse-power figures, wheel-base figures—they meant nothing to him. The name "Maxwell" carried more weight than all the technical description that could be offered.

Maxwell cars have achieved this great good will and this priceless position with the public only by their unequalled record of things done. What is said of an automobile in its specifications is one matter. What the car actually does in the hands of owners, year after year, is another matter.

The Maxwell car has won its position through sheer merit. It has set record after record in competition with cars of all prices and classes.

Everything considered, the Maxwell is the safe investment. It is a known, tried and proved product. It will serve you as it is serving and has served countless others.

Let us arrange for a demonstration today. You will be under no obligation. We want to give you a chance to convince yourself.

SALESMAN—STOCK.

You as a shrewd salesman can readily see the value of becoming identified with an institution producing modern necessities for which there is an almost unlimited demand.

In our line of business there are seven [7] firms manufacturing this line of goods, including ourselves. Of these seven [7] firms, we are the only one selling to the dealer exclusively. Our competitors have a habit of selling both, to the dealer and competitor. In other words, they go out and fight the dealer instead of protecting him.

We have connections with twenty [20] of the largest dealers in the country, to supply them with our line of goods with the understanding that they will buy from no one else. These dealers will give us about two hundred thousand [$200,000.00] dollars' worth of business the first year, and this will gradually increase from year to year.

The profits in this business range from seventy-five [75] to one hundred and fifty [150] per cent.

Our overhead expense is very low, for the simple reason that we have not a large advertising or selling expense. Have no high salaried officers, as each official is a practical and experienced man in the business, and has had years' of experience in this line of work.

No advances, but pay good commission. We are offering 7 per cent preferred guaranteed accumulative and give 50 per cent common as bonus.

Leads and an interest in the company will be given to the right men.

Save for Land

[Special Excursion Tuesday, June 20.]

"THE DOLLAR that goes farthest is the dollar that stays at home." The dollar you send to the store for vegetables or fruit, when you should be able to get them from your own land fresh for summer and preserve them for winter, is the dollar that goes away and stays away.

IF YOU CAN SAVE A LITTLE each month I can help you become independent. Just how I will do it is too much to print here, but if you will call at my offices I will explain it thoroughly to you. You will be surprised at the facilities I have built up with my large organization to aid, advise, and direct the settlers on my lands. When you call I will hand you my free 12-page illustrated book about the Swigart tract, and show you many views in my stereopticon room. If you are unable to call, then write, and I will mail you full information.

IT IS YOUR DUTY to post yourself right now about the opportunities I am offering if you have any idea of ever owning a farm. Let me show you how favorable my plan is to a man of limited means, or who is earning wages. I have something very much out of the ordinary to offer now.

SIZE UP THE SITUATION. After you have gotten my literature and learned the interesting and exceptional features of my proposition—it is different from any other—then come and see the crops of rye, oats, vetch, corn, wheat, alfalfa, beans, and potatoes. See the improvements and development going on. Look at orchards being started. Talk to the settlers. Forecast in your own mind what the future has in store for you in this tract, with new towns, good markets, several railroad and steamship lines, good schools, good roads, and great electric power dams being built. There are real opportunities in this district and it takes only a few dollars to get started on the right road. I have several thousand acres of excellent lands to choose from.

OUR NEXT EXCURSION TO MICHIGAN is Tuesday, June 20. Rate from Chicago to Wellston, my Michigan headquarters, and return, $12.50, which includes railroad fare, meals, and lodging. Railroad fare will be rebated on your land purchase. Good accommodations for both men and women. Automobiles and guides free. You return to Chicago at 7 a. m. Friday, June 23. Offices remain open Monday evening and Saturday afternoon.

George Swigart,
Owner,
1249-50 First National Bank Bldg., Chicago.

Class and Price

THERE IS MORE SATISFACTION IN OWNING A FAMOUS HIGH GRADE MAKE OF AUTOMOBILE THAN ANYTHING ELSE. IT'S SOMETHING TO BE PROUD OF; YOU NEVER HAVE TO APOLOGIZE FOR IT.

THERE IS MORE DISTINCTION, MORE CLASS, IN OWNING AN EXCHANGE LOCOMOBILE THAN A CHEAP NEW CAR THAT ISN'T NEW AFTER YOU HAVE HAD IT A WEEK. THE CLASS AND THE PRICE ARE BOTH WHAT YOU WANT.

Here Are Some Convincing Reasons:

Prices $1,450 upward, guaranteed.

Guaranteed by us, the makers, exactly the same as a new car.

There is no profit in it for us.

You run no risk whatever.

These cars have style, are in good taste.

They are right mechanically and every other way.

You do business with a Branch House established sixteen years, with a reputation for fair dealing.

You get a wide selection just now, but not later. Only a limited number of new cars, and thus only a few exchange cars. Not everybody can have them.

Call this week and avoid missing what you want. Open evenings until 9.

A REBUILT CADILLAC

It's a Safe Used Car to Buy

A rebuilt Cadillac is superior to any new car at the same price. They are the truest values on the street. By rebuilt we mean that the cars have been taken entirely apart, each part examined and, if necessary, replaced by a new part made at the Cadillac factory, the entire car repainted and refinished like new, all equipment put in first class condition—the whole car, in fact, carefully reconstructed until it is good as new in every detail.

We are as interested in the performance of these rebuilt cars as we are in new Cadillacs. In actual service value these cars are worth a great deal more than we ask for them, and we usually have a variety of body styles to select from. See them before you buy.

Investment Opportunity.

A Chicago company which has paid 10% yearly for past five years on a $100,000 capitalization, will sell limited amount of First Preferred Treasury Stock; the proceeds from which will be used in expanding their business.

They have exclusive leasing rights on a hardware specialty, one or more of which is now and always will be used on every building of every character erected in the world.

Conservative investors, large or small, here have a lifetime opportunity to secure large returns in way of dividends on savings which they may invest, with every possible assurance of security that goes with an investment in an old established, conservative, growing business.
The stock is now selling at $50 per share, par value, but with the expansion planned and additional resultant business it should double in value in less than a year.
Shares may be purchased in blocks of from two to one hundred, either for cash or on partial payment plan.

SHARP DECLINE IN WHEAT MART; SUPPORT SLACK

Outside Buying Demand Still Slow—Foreigners Ignore U. S. Crop Reports.

Prices for wheat were weak and lower yesterday, the action of the market being the reverse of that of the previous day. Prices finished 2⅝@3¼c lower, with general selling by local bulls and commission houses. Shorts covered freely the previous day, and with this demand lacking there was little support to the market, while offerings continued heavy throughout the day.

Outside speculators do not appear willing to buy wheat at this time in view of the indifference of foreign buyers, and for this reason the sensationally bullish crop news has had little effect. Foreigners evidently have enough wheat bought, with the assurance of big supplies for the next three months from Canada, to enable them to persist in their waiting attitude until it develops what the quality of the new crop of winter wheat will be.

Export Outlook Discouraging.

The seaboard reports were discouraging in the extreme. Bids were few and way out of line, while it was said the demand for wheat at the gulf was slow and recent sales made at unusually low prices for this time of the year. Local sales were only 5,000 bu and the market was easy relative to the futures. No. 2 red sold at as low as 1¾c under the July. Country offerings of wheat showed a material increase northwest and both Minenapolis and Duluth expect heavy receipts the next few weeks.

Winnipeg receipts show no signs of falling off materially, that market having 788 cars for the day, compared to 39 cars a year ago. Northwest points had 300 cars, against 168 cars a year ago. Primary receipts for the week were 5,021,000 bu, against 3,384,000 bu a year ago.

Crop advices were much more optimistic from the southwest. Le Count and Inglis sent in favorable reports from Kansas and Nebraska, respectively, claiming marked improvement. The Kansas whea is said to be filling well and the Nebraska wheat harvest will be considerably ahead of last year. With warm weather the crop in the southwest will ripen fast, according to reports.

Cables were unchanged, the sensational crop reports from this side falling flat in the English markets. Stocks abroad are heavy and increasing. The big Russian offensive with the successes claimed was regarded as a bearish influence, creating the possibility of an early peace with Austria. Clearances for the day were 795,000 bu.

Corn Heavy at Finish.

Corn was steady early, but weak later, the weakness in wheat with less demand from the shorts the factors. Prices finished ⅜c to ⅞@1c lower. Cash prices followed the futures, and there was less demand reported, the east not having followed the advance in this market. The country offerings were reported light here, but in the southwest country offerings were larger, and increased receipts are expected the coming week.

Showery conditions were predicted over Sunday, but the general crop condition is not generally regarded in a discouraging light, especially if the weather should be god the next few weeks. The acreage is believed to be the largest on record. Receipts were 58 cars and primary receipts were 447,000 bu, with 3,210,000 bu for the week, against 3,615,000 bu a year ago. Clearances for the day were 292,000 bu. Cables were 1d off. Commission houses were free sellers of corn.

Oats Show Easy Tone.

Oats followed the trend of other grains, but the September was relatively strong. Last prices showed declines of ⅛@½c, the July being especially heavy. Cash prices were easy and sales were only 75,000 bu. Receipts were 108 cars and primary receipts were 753,000 bu, against 414,000 bu a year ago. For the week primary arrivals were 4,953,000 bu, against 2,653,000 bu a year ago. Clearances were 489,000 bu.

Provisions were easier, but there was no aggressive selling while there was considerable buying of ribs led by Cross-Roy-Saunders. Hately led the selling of lard. It is expected hog receipts will be larger the coming week. The demand for lard is not quite so urgent. Hog prices at the yards were not much changed, and receipts were 13,000, with 42,000 the estimate for Monday and 140,000 for the coming week. Liverpool prices were unchanged for meats and 1s lower for cash lard. Receipts in the west the last week were 495,000, compared to 506,200 a year ago.

Steady Market for Rye.

Rye was steady with No. 2 selling at 98c. Receipts were 2 cars.

Barley ruled steady. Malting was quoted 72@80c, with sales at 76@78c; feed was quotable, 60@68c and sold 60@66c; mixing was quoted, 66@68c and sold at 68c; screenings were quotable, 45@58c, with sales at 50@56c. Receipts, 14 cars.

Timothy seed held steady. September, $8.00 asked, and cash lots, $5.50@8.50. Clover seed was unchanged with cash lots $8.00@14.00.

Duluth flax closed 3½@c lower. Cash on track, $1.81; July, $1.82; September, $1.82½, and November, $1.78. Receipts, none. Minneapolis was 5c lower with cash on track, $1.80@1.84; receipts were 8 cars. Winnipeg closed 3⅝@3¾c lower. July, $1.60¾ and October, $1.62⅛. Receipts, 18 cars.

NEWS AND GOSSIP OF BOARD OF TRADE

From a cash standpoint the wheat market appears to be in a decidedly weak position. No. 2 red sold from July price to 1¾c under yesterday and all grades were easier, No. 1 northern being 7@8c over, compared to 7½@9½c over a day or so ago. Exporters said that while some business had been worked via the gulf within the last day or so, it was at extremely low prices. New York wired that the export news was discouraging, bids being few with prices way out of line. The crop news from this side has not influenced any change in the attitude of foreigners. Country sales in the northwest are larger, and bigger receipts are expected at both Minneapolis and Duluth, while there is no material let-up in the arrivals at Winnipeg. Cash corn and oats followed the futures, and the shipping demand was slow.

Sentiment was as bearish last night as it was bullish the day before. The effect of the bullish government report was soon over, and the absence of any export demand of consequence again became the main factor. Generally favorable weather was reported over the belt. The fact that outside buying support was so discouragingly small in view of the bullish crop report proved an unsettling factor. The bulge of Friday was caused mainly by the covering of shorts and buying by local bulls. When the bulls tried to support the market they were swamped by steady selling by commission houses, while the buying outside of that by holders of bids and shorts was inadequate to help the bull leaders. Public buying evidently needs a more efficacious tonic than the reiteration of crop damage reports.

Corn shippers said the eastern buyers of corn had not followed the recent advance in corn prices, and that bids were 2@3c out of line. The shipping demand generally is quiet, although there was some buying by local interests and with receipts light this has tended to keep cash prices relatively stronger than the futures. Southwest reports indicated a considerable increase in country offerings of corn and receipts are expected to be larger. On the other hand, Illinois reports indicated there would be a small movement until after harvest.

C. H. Thayer had the following in regard to South Dakota crop conditions: "It is estimated the acreage planted will be 10 per cent short of last year on all kinds of grain. If the inclement weather continues we are going to have short crops. We need hot weather to make a good crop of corn in this section of the country."

It was understood yesterday that some corn in the Wabash elevator would be declared out of condition unless it was shipped out at once. The amount of corn involved was said to be moderate. There has been considerable delay in moving the corn on acount of the lack of cars.

The following gives the receipts and shipments of flour and grain from Chicago the last week:

	Receipts.	Shipments.
Flour, brls	135,000	140,000
Wheat, bu	594,000	241,000
Corn, bu	946,000	761,000
Oats, bu	2,454,000	2,269,000

Charles Sincere & Co. had advices from northwestern Illinois that the counties of Stephenson, Carroll, Jo Davies, and Ogle, famous for their big corn yields, are this year importing this grain, the last rcop being practically exhausted, with the prospects for new crop not encouraging.

The Russian successes on the eastern battle front against the Austrians have had some effect on wheat sentiment, the argument being made that if the victories of the Russians are confirmed it may hasten the end of the war.

Receipts inspected Saturday: Wheat, 38 cars; corn, 58 cars; oats, 108 cars; rye, 2 cars; barley, 14 cars. Hogs estimated for Monday, 42,000 head, and for all next week, 140,000 head.

Inglis wired Logan-Bryan that through the southwestern counties of Nebraska the wheat crop is promising. Indicated yields are for bigger crop than last year. Corn is short, but fields are clean.

Le Count wired Barrell from Newton, Kas., that wheat in Kansas was filling well. Weather ideal for crops, and if it turns hot the crop will ripen fast.

Minneapolis and Duluth both sent in reports of increased country selling of wheat, with increased number of consignment notices.

J. T. McLaughlin is bullish on December corn, figuring this month will feel the effect of crop damage more than the near months.

Low grades of wheat at Minneapolis were in good demand, with premiums a little higher. Low grades were slow sale.

Hog packing at Chicago from March 1 to date totals 1,858,0000, against 1,786,000 a year ago.

In some quarters the demand for lard for shipment was reported slower than recently.

Edward T. Cushing made application for membership on the board of trade.

Minneapolis wheat stocks increased 30,000 bu for one day.

Local sales were 5,000 bu wheat, 100,000 bu corn, and 75,000 bu oats.

Hogs met with a good demand at steady prices and the market closed strong to a shade higher than on Friday. Receipts were posted at 12,000 head, the bulk of which sold at $9.30@9.50, with tops at $9.60. The latter price was paid for prime heavyweights. Shippers were credited with purchases of only 1,500 head, but all the packers were liberal buyers and the supply left unsold at the finish was reduced to 1,500.

Final prices made hogs largely 25c lower than a week ago, while pigs showed a gain of 25c for the week. Receipts for six days were practically the same as those of the preceding week and only slightly smaller than for the same time last year. Shipments showed a moderate increase. The average price of all hogs here this week was $9.40, the lowest since last March, and compared with an average of $9.65 last week.

CATTLE.

Beef steer values closed the week at a net gain of 10@25c, as compared with the finish last week. Cows and heifers were up 15@25c, while calves made an advance of 50@75c. Stock and feeding steers were 15@25c higher than a week ago. All good to choice heavy steers were quoted at record figures for open market offerings, with the best at $11.30 and the bulk $9.25@10.65. Cows and heifers were back to the high level touched two weeks ago, and the general market for beef cattle was in an exceptionally strong position. Receipts this week showed a decrease and packers had little chance to add to their reserves, as cool weather resulted in an unusually brisk consumptive demand for this time of the year.

Cattle at seven markets for the week, 137,200, against 143,700 the preceding week, 111,000 a year ago, and 117,400 two years ago. Total for 1916 to date, 3,180,000, against 2,861,000 the same time in 1915.

SHEEP.

Irregularity marked the trade in live muttons this week, and prices closed with aged sheep unchanged, choice shorn lambs 35@50c higher, and spring lambs 25c lower than a week ago. Receipts for the week were about the same as those of the preceding period, but the quality was uneven and the supply included an excessive number of mediocre animals. Lambs toped at $11.85, with clipers at $10.50. Sheep reached $9.00 for the best and $7.25@8.00 for the bulk.

HEAVY FOREIGN SELLING HOLDS COPPERS DOWN

Shares Sell on 17 Cent Basis with Metal at 27 Cents; Predict More Activity.

It is pointed out that the action of the copper stocks on earnings, which have broken the record, and large dividends, have been disappointing to interests in the various companies, as well as Wall street in general.

Kennecott copper sold above the present price when shareholders were receiving nothing. Utah Copper is paying at the rate of $1.50 per share quarterly and $1.50 extra, but is selling lower than when dividends were one-half as much as now. Anaconda is expected to make a dividend declaration at the rate of $8 a share annually at the board meeting next month, but the stock fails to respond.

One Explanation Offered.

The head of one of the largest copper groups, when asked for an explanation, said: "This country has had to absorb close to $2,000,000,000 of foreign held securities, shares of new munitions companies shares of corporations such as Crucible Steel, stocks of scores of other companies introduced on the curb and stock exchange, and $1,000,000,000 or more of war loans sold in this country.

Had it been a normal market, money would have gone into the copper stocks, railroad and other old line securities, instead of the ordnance, motors, and so called war stocks in general. When the public gets tired of trading in highly speculative issues it may come back to the railroads and coppers. Copper shares are selling on a basis of about 17 cent copper. We are selling copper for 27 cents. Therefore, the excess profit of the copper industry over 17 cent copper is at the rate of more than $200,000,000 annually since this country is refining at the rate of 2,200,000,000 tons of copper per year.

Kellogg Switchboard and Supply Company continues in steady demand, selling at 260. Inland Steel changed hands at 362, closing at 363 bid, offered at 367. Goodyear Tire and Rubber common showed an advance of some 30 points to sales as high as 235, closing at 225 bid, offered at 230.

After a steady and general advance in public utility stocks, the market has shown more of an irregular tendency. Northern States Power common continued to advance, with sales from 79½ to 82. Ohio Cities Gas common, after an exchange of four shares of new stock for one of the old, has settled around 63, being equivalent to 252 for the old. Cities Service common had a reaction from around 290 to sales at 280, closing at 277 bid, offered at 280.

Western Power common was slightly stronger, advancing from 19 to 22¼, closing 22 to 23.

Toledo Traction, Light and Power preferred was in better demand, advancing to 84. Tennessee Railway, Light and Power common was traded in at 11⅝.

Prairie Pipe Making Record.

The Prairie Pipe Line company is expected to show the heaviest month's business on record for June. Indications are that earnings will be on an increasing scale throughout the summer, on acount of the steadily mounting production of the midcontinent field, which is now over 400,000 barrels per day, and the urgent demand for Kansas-Oklahoma crude from the eastern refineries.

Operating at full capacity the Prairie Pipe will not be able to take care of the output offered it in the new field. The company therefore plans, to start construction of a duplicate line in the Eldorado and Augusta, Kas., fields.

Prairie Pipe Line directors are expected to take dividend action about the middle of this month. The previous payment was 5 per cent and 5 per cent extra in April, which followed an initial dividend of 5 per cent in January.

Clean Out in General Motors.

Emery W. Clark has resigned as a director of the General Motors company. Mr. Clark's retirement, following that of Albert Straus and James J. Storrow, marks the withdrawal from the General Motors company of the banking interests with which the loan of 1910 was negotiated.

W. C. Durant, who has succeeded Charles W. Nash as president, has been in Detroit actively engaged in the affairs of the company.

Russia Wants Rails.

The Russian government is reported quietl trying to place orders for over 300,000 tons of steel rails for delivery in the closing quarter of 1916 and the first quarter of 1917.

It is, however, seriously questioned whether these orders will be placed, since rail mills are in nearly every case booked up until well into next year and it is thought improbable that capacity to roll so large a tonnage for export within the required time limit will be found.

Still After Shell Steel.

Inquiries for at least 200,000 tons of shell steel are said to be still in the market. As the buyers, which are the British and French governments, want delivery before the end of 1916, they are finding difficulty in getting bids.

Many steel men say that the only business that can now be considered must be for 1917 delivery, and the foreign purchasers are not inclined to buy so far ahead. Some steel companies are definitely out of the market for all their lines up to December, 1916.

More War Orders Predicted.

Signs of stiffening in the markets for explosive making bases are noted and the improvement is attributed to the prospects of large orders for such materials being placed here within the next few weeks. For some time the markets for the chemicals needed has been dormant, but of late a steady inflow of small orders has been reported.

Many of the contracts placed last year have renewal clauses, and it is felt that these will be exercised. A heavy buying movement is expected before the middle of July.

Chicago Bank Clearings.

Chicago bank clearings for the week ended June 10 were $353,388,787, showing a gain of 23.82 per cent over the same period last year.

Money and Exchange.

Money rates in Chicago steady at 3½@4 per cent on collateral, 3@4 per cent on commercial paper, and 4@4½ per cent over the counter. New York exchange sold at 15c discount. Chicago bank clearings were $55,513,907.

DRY GOODS.

NEW YORK, June 10.—There was some easing in print cloths and fine gray goods today, but cotton as a rule held firm. Knit goods were active. Wool goods for spring sold well. Jobbers reported a satisfactry week outside of wash goods and white goods.

Brevity Not Soul of Politics.

The most heartily applauded seconding speech was that of a North Dakota speaker, who surprised the tired delegates with "North Dakota seconds the nomination of Robert La Follette."

NEWS OF THE FINANCIAL WORLD

According to Pittsburgh steel interests, the suggestion of inevitable decline in steel prices is found in the fact that premiums for prompt delivery of finished steel are decreasing, with the possible exception of plate. This may be a forerunner of exhaustion of orders on the books of the smaller mills, something that occurs after three or four months, if new bookings are not made. It is thought the first test of the stability of steel prices will take place in August or September.

Bulls on United States Steel common are predicting the price will move up over 10 points before the next meeting of the directors and that it will sell at a new high record at the time of the next dividend scheduled to be declared on July 25. The showing of earnings for the June quarter will be made at that time.

It is announced the Tidewater Oil company probably will pay an extra dividend this year. The question has not been formally discussed by the board, but certain members are said to be in favor of such a distribution. The company's earnings are the best in its history. The present rate is 8 per cent.

Assents to the plan of readjustment of the Pittsburgh Coal company having been received from over 90 per cent of the preferred and 85 per cent of the common stock, the readjustment committee has declared the plan operative.

New York announced that a heavy tonnage of copper for immediate shipment has been purchased by agents for the allies. The transaction was closed within the last two days on the basis of current prices.

The advance in American Beet Sugar is credited to pool activity. It is said the buying has been by new interests and that the combination of sugar properties that will include the American Beet is under negotiation.

It is announced the American Shipbuilding company will build on Puget Sound a plant that will admit of the construction of fifteen vessels at one time. Five vessels already have been chartered to be built.

Gross earnings for the New York Air Brake company for May were $4,000,000 against $4,731,000 for the full year of 1915, and $3,186,000 for 1913, the best previous year.

There was deposited at the New York assay office $2,500,000 gold bars received from Ottawa, Canada, making a total of $44,500,000 imported on the present movement.

IN FOREIGN STOCK MARKETS

LONDON, June 10.—The continued scarcity of stock and a strong demand for home rails held the stock market in a buoyant condition today. The war loan, consols, and home rails were features, while Russian issues soared on the latest war news. Courtaulds, limited, at 5⅞ was the leading stock in the Industrial section. Copper shares were steady. A steady business was transacted in the American section under the mobilization scheme. The closing was firm. BAR SILVER—30¼d per oz. MONEY—3¾ per cent. Discount rates, short bills, 4 9-16@⅝ per cent; three months, 4 9-16@⅝ per cent.

COFFEE AND SUGAR.

NEW YORK, June 10.—COFFEE—The market for futures was less active today and fluctuations were irregular. Talk of a steadier tone in Brazil may have promoted a little scattered covering for over the week end, but after opening unchanged to 3 points higher prices eased off. December contracts sold at 8.38c early and March at 8.51c, later reacting to 8.35c and 8.47c under some further scattering liquidation and a little European selling. The close was net unchanged to 3 points lower. Sales, 12,750 bags; June, 7.99c; July, 8.05c; August, 8.11c; September, 8.19c; October, 8.24c; November, 8.29c; December, 8.34c; January, 8.38c; February, 8.42c; March, 8.47c; April, 8.52c; May, 8.57c. Spot coffee quiet; Rio 7s, 9½c; Santos 4s, 10⅝c. No change was reported in the cost and freight situation. The official cable reported an advance of 75 reis in Rio and of 1-16d in the rate of Rio exchange on London. Santos was unchanged. Brazilian port receipts, 20,000 bags; Jundiahy, 15,000. SUGAR—Raw; spot market closed 2@7 points net higher. Futures: July, 5.35c, closing 5.37c; September, 5.41@5.45c, closing 5.45c; December, 5.04@5.07c, closing 5.07c.

CHICAGO, June 10.—SUGAR—Following prices were quoted by wholesale dealers per 100 lbs: Cut loaf, H. & E., $9.08; powdered standard, $8.08; standard cane granulated, $7.80; beet granulated, $7.70; extra C, $7.55; canary, $7.15.

It's a Strenuous Life.

T. R.'s secretary, John McGrath, has a crop of short, scared hair which gives him the appearance of being in a state of perpetual astonishment.

The Pacific Mines Corporation has acquired the former properties of the Bagdad Chase Gold Mining Co. and the Roosevelt Mining Co., which are located about nine miles south of Ludlow Station, on the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad, in San Bernardino County, California.

Transportation to Ludlow is furnished by the Ludlow & Southern Railroad Co.

A line built and owned by the Pacific Mines Corporation

The properties, from which over $3,000,000 in gold, silver and copper has been produced to date, consist of 15 patented mining claims and several fractions, and other claims under location, comprising more than 300 acres of patented land besides the unpatented locations.

The property is completely equipped with hoists, compressors and all necessary equipment for mining, and is developed with three shafts and connected workings opening the vein for a length of 1,500 feet and to a depth of 300 feet vertically.

Shipments to the United Verde Smelter at Clarkdale, Arizona, at present amount to 100 tons a day under contract, but upon the completion of a new unit of the smelter, which will shortly be finished, shipments will be increased to 200 tons a day, with a corresponding increase in earnings.

On the present output the company is earning 25 per cent, and has done so during the past two years of operations.

THE NEXT DIVIDEND WILL BE PAID DURING THE MONTH OF JULY

Mr. Frank W. Royer, mining engineer, who is well known for his connection with many large enterprises in Mexico and the United States, and for his professional association with Mr. John Hays Hammond, who, with his son Harris Hammond, is a large owner in this company, has examined and reported on the property, and will have active charge of its operation.

TRADING LIGHT, NARROW.

New York, June 10.—The two hour session of the stock market today was superficial and perfunctory at best, all eyes being again directed toward Chicago. Trading was exceedingly light and narrow, with a mixture of advances and declines, specialties helping largely to hold up the recent level of averages.

New York Air Brake made an extreme gain of 6 points to 139, Texas company rose 5 to 196, and South Porto Rico Sugar 4 to the new record of 240, while United Fruit, Pacific Mail, Willys-Overland, and some of the war issues gained 1 to 2 points.

Rails Unimportant.

Rails were an unimportant factor, with slight heaviness in Reading, Chesapeake and Ohio, Southern Pacific, and Southern Railway preferred, which was neutralized by further advances in Colorado Southern and St. Louis Southwestern preferred issues.

Reviews of the mercantile agencies announced "recessions from past feverish activity" for the time being, although leading industries continue to exceed their production of previous years and wholesale distributon of general merchandise remains broad.

Dealings in bonds today were nominal and confined to better known issues. United States coupon 4s advanced ½, registered 4s ¾, and Pan-American 3s 1¼ per cent on call during the week.

Investors Need Representation.

Representatives of the national live stock interests had a session at the stock yards a few days ago to protest against a proposed increase in railroad freight rates. Representatives of labor unions have been in conference with railway managers in New York for ten days past in the effort to get a substantial increase in wages. These conferences are samples of similar meetings that are held in nearly every month of the year, and at which some body of citizens seeks to advance its own interests by getting more money or more service out of the railroads.

Nothing is more legitimate and proper than these efforts of various groups of people to get concessions that they believe to be just and fair. However, each group considers only its own interests, and if its demands may result in injury to some other body of citizens the latter ought to be represented, so that the final decision may do justice to all.

The group of people always unrepresented at these conferences is the investors. They are vitaly interested, for every advance in wages, if not compensated for by an advance in rates, will be at their expense. Railway managers, being the employés of the investors, are supposed to represent their interests, but usually cannot do so effectively because they fear the power of unions and of politicians more than they do that of stockholders.

The only practical way for the security holders to gain full consideration for their side of these questions is to be represented at conferences where the revenues or expenses of railways are at stake. Of course this could be done effectively only through a permanent organization, such as those maintained by the shippers and the employés. If the investors always had a representative ready to take part in such proceedings they would have an even chance with the others of getting a fair showing in the final decision. Being always unrepresented, is it any wonder that sometimes they are forgotten and their interests suffer severely?

Southwestern Gas and Electric.

H. W.—The Southwestern Gas and Electric company furnishes natural gas and electricity to Texarkana and Shreveport. It was formed in 1912, and its earnings increased at first. In 1915, owing partly to hard times and partly to local conditions, there was a decrease. Earnings in the twelve months ended May 31, 1915, were $980,511, compared with $1,033,575 in the calendar year 1914. Net in the year was $435,008, compared with $477,698. The interest on the $3,557,000 mortgage bonds was earned more than twice. The total interest charge, including that on $1,230,000 of debentures, was covered about one and three-fourths times. While the underlying bonds are well protected, the debentures are not at present so conservative. As the company is in the development stage, and has strong backing, there is little doubt that its position will improve.

Colorado-Yule Marble.

A. W. G.—There is no more than a nominal market for stock of the Colorado-Yule Marble company. The company has outstanding $2,000,000 6 per cent cumulative first preferred and $3,000,000 common, also $5,000,000 of second preferred, which was issued in 1910 as a 100 per cent stock dividend. A 3 per cent cash dividend was also paid on the preferred in 1910, and none has been reported since. There was a bonded debt of $2,500,000 and a floating debt of about $870,000, shown in the latest available balance sheet. The company has a large quarry, and a year ago had on hand contracts amounting to more than $1,300,000. First preferred shares have been offered for sale recently at 14 and second preferred at 5½.

Brief Answers.

M. L. H.—The Thomas Aeroplane company has plants at Ithaca, N. Y., with a capacity of 150 aeroplanes and about 200 engines yearly. It has $500,000 of preferred stock and 30,000 shares of common of no par value. No report of earnings in the past is available. Estimates of future earnings are $12 a year a share on common stock if 100 aeroplanes are manufactured and sold. Evidently the stock is highly speculative.

A. W. R.—The Clover Leaf Casualty company began business in 1912, with $100,000 capital and $20,045 surplus, succeeding an assessment company. It has had a steady increase of business and its loss ratio has been low, but the expense ratio has been high, so that underwriting operations have been unprofitable thus far. Last year the capital was increased to $125,000.

W. M. K., Paulding, O.—The statement that subscribers to a new issue of stock will receive about 55 per cent of their subscriptions means that subscriptions were nearly twice the amount of stock offered, and that each subscriber will get his proportionate share.

METALS.

NEW YORK, June 10.—COPPER market continued quiet. The more important producers are reported to be well sold ahead and to be maintaining quotations at about 29@29½c for October and later deliveries of electrolytic, but second hands are still said to be offering small lots at prices ranging about 27@28c for nearby and forward shipment. IRON unchanged.

AN event of much importance in connection with the present agitation regarding "padded" flat leases, the overlending and overbuilding in this field, was the action taken by the Chicago real estate board at its monthly meeting last week in instructing its apartment building committee to investigate the matter of the alleged "padded" leases and report at the next meeting of the board.

The fact that the board has taken cognizance of the growing complaints which recently have been voiced regarding the "padded" lease evil, and the serious effect it is likely to have on the flat investment market unless checked, augurs well for an abatement of the evil, to some considerable extent at least, provided the committee, which is composed of Adolph Kramer, John A. Carroll, Warner G. Baird, J. J. Harrington Jr., and Homer H. Schneider, make a determined effort to get at the actual facts in the matter.

Committee Has Power to Check Evil

The committee has it in its power to do much to restore the confidence of investors in this class of property, and it is hoped and believed the matter will be treated in the broad and thorough manner it deserves. It will mean much for the future of this market.

The matter was brought to the attention of the board by J. W. Hedenberg, who expressed the opinion the board should take some action in this matter, which at present is attracting so much attention in real estate circles.

President Urges Caution.

President Paul Steinbrecher, while of the opinion it was largely a matter of individual honesty on the part of brokers, agents, and owners, declared himself in favor of any plan which promised to put a stop to a growing evil. It is necessary to handle it with care, however, he said, in order to minimize the injury which the legitimate market interests might suffer and because of the tendency to overemphasize the extent of the evil there was danger of its being thought to be a common practice, whereas it is not.

Valentine H. Surghnor suggested as a remedy for the evil that the seller of apartment buildings be required to furnish a bond to the effect that the leases covering the various apartments are for just what they purport to be. He said he had successfully used it in his own business and believed it susceptible of general application.

Board's Action Is Commended.

The board is to be commended for the action it has taken in recognizing the public complaint which has been voiced so freely of late in regard to this matter, but it is to be regretted that it did not take some cognizance of those other twin evils which are doing much to injure the investment market for flat properties as well as securities based on this class of properly—namely: overbuilding and overlending.

Since the publication in this column a week ago of an article along these lines THE TRIBUNE has received a number of communications commending it strongly and urging that the agitation be continued until the evils complained of are materially abated. There is reason to believe the present agitation already has accomplished considerable in this direction, and with the real estate board under the aggressive leadership of President Steinbrecher, an active participant in the good work, a great benefit could be done both the market as well as the investing public.

The situation is by no means an alarming one, but largely because of the strength of the market and the marvelously rapid upbuilding of the city certain evil influences have been allowed to work into the market which should now be checked if a continued healthy market is to prevail.

May Building Runs High.

The May building figures, as well as those for the first five months of the current year, furnish the most convincing evidence of the overbuilding of the city. Thus, while for the five months of the year there has been an increase of 67 per cent over the corresponding period for 1915, May shows an increase of 73.45 per cent, showing a progressive increase.

What this means may be gathered from the fact that the total of the building figures for 1915 were, with one exception, the largest in the history of the city. That year was 1911, when there was so much building in the downtown district in order to take advantage of the old building ordinance permitting a height of 260 feet. The totals for that year were over $105,000,000, but this will be greatly exceeded by the operations of the present year if the present volume is anywhere near maintained.

Bulk in Apartments.

The interesting and disturbing feature of the situation is that the bulk of the building is of apartments. During 1915 the total of this class of building was practically $60,000,000 and constituted over 60 per cent of the total building of the city, as against about 35 per cent during years of normal building in this field.

For the five months of the present year it is not possible to secure the cost of the apartment buildings for which permits were issued, but the number issued tells its story, 2,216, as against 1,661 for the same period of 1915. If these operations continue unchecked 1916 will witness the construction of approximately $80,000,000 worth of apartment buildings.

Comment is unnecessary in the face of these figures.

ILLINOIS REAL ESTATE SOCIETY MEETS TUESDAY.

The first annual meeting of the Real Estate association of the state of Illinois is to be held at Chicago next Tuesday. The program includes addresses by Walter M. Provine of Taylorville, President Harrison B. Riley of the Chicago Title and Trust compapny; Lee J. Ninde, president of the Indiana State association, and Ben Faast, president of the association of the state of Wisconsin.

The object of the association is to unite brokers, agents, dealers, and owners of real estate in Illinois for the purpose of enforcing a high standard of ethics in the real estate profession and acting for the betterment and promotion of real estate interests. The constitutional amendment for revenue reform is being urged in an active campaign.

The first board of directors includes in addition to the above named men Walter G. Causey of Peoria; E. Orris Hart, Edward S. Judd, Newton B. Lauren, Paul Steinbrecher, and George H. Taylor of Chicago.

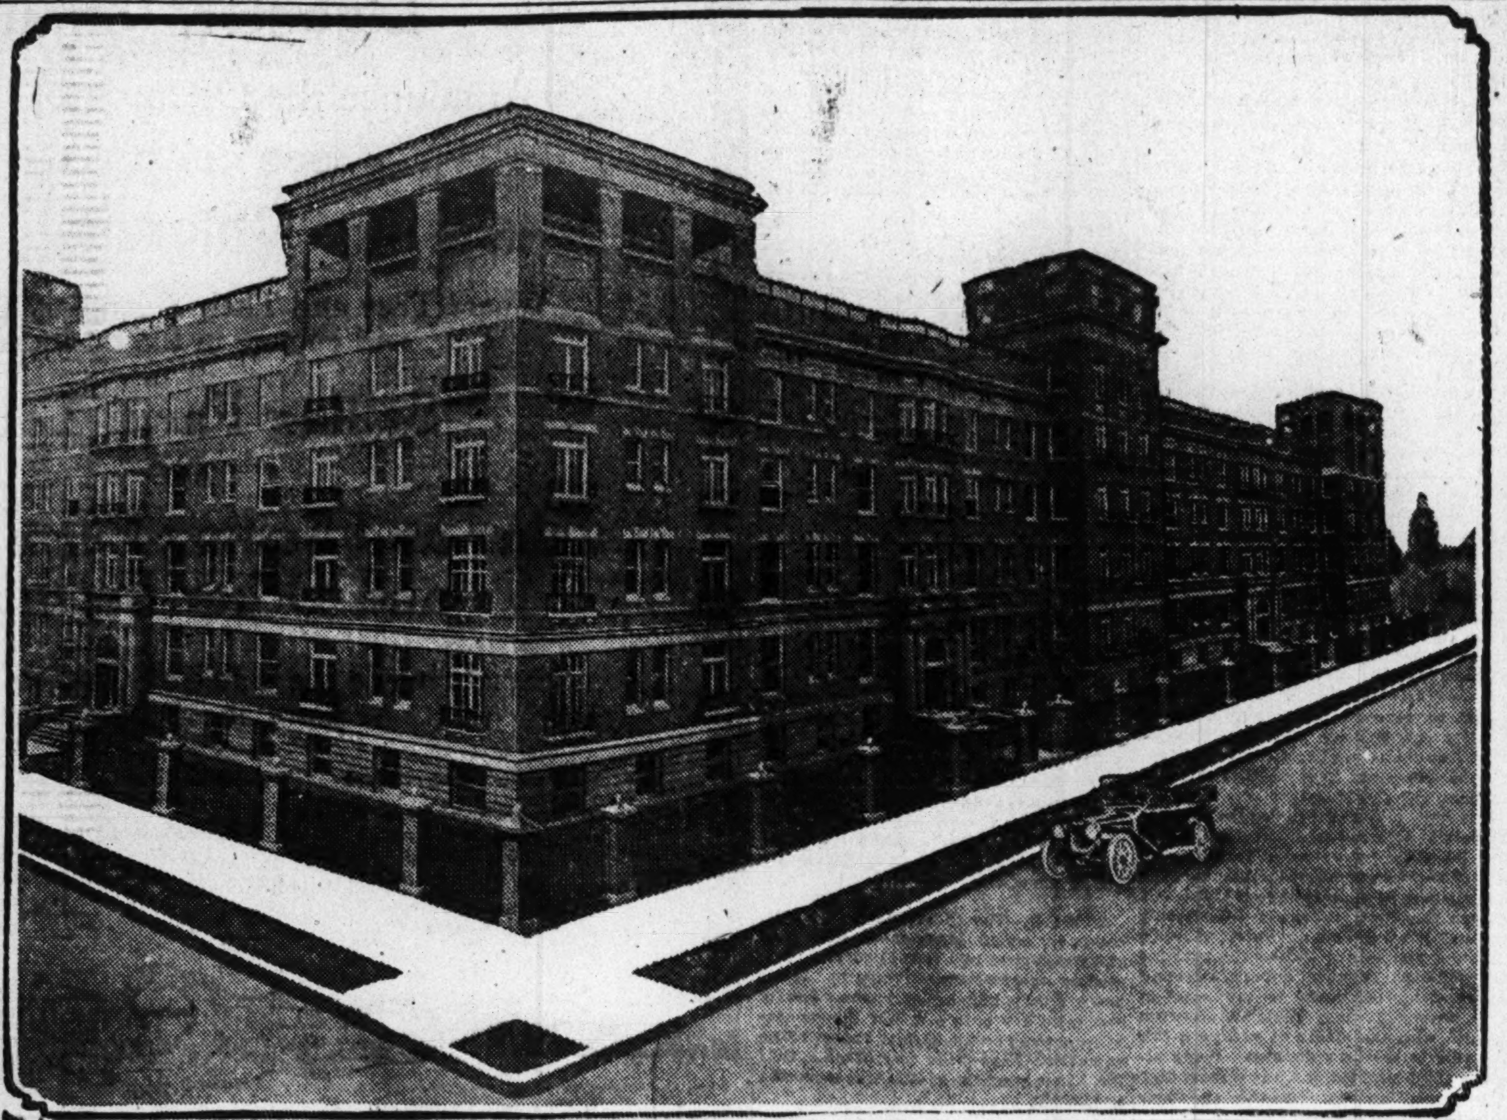
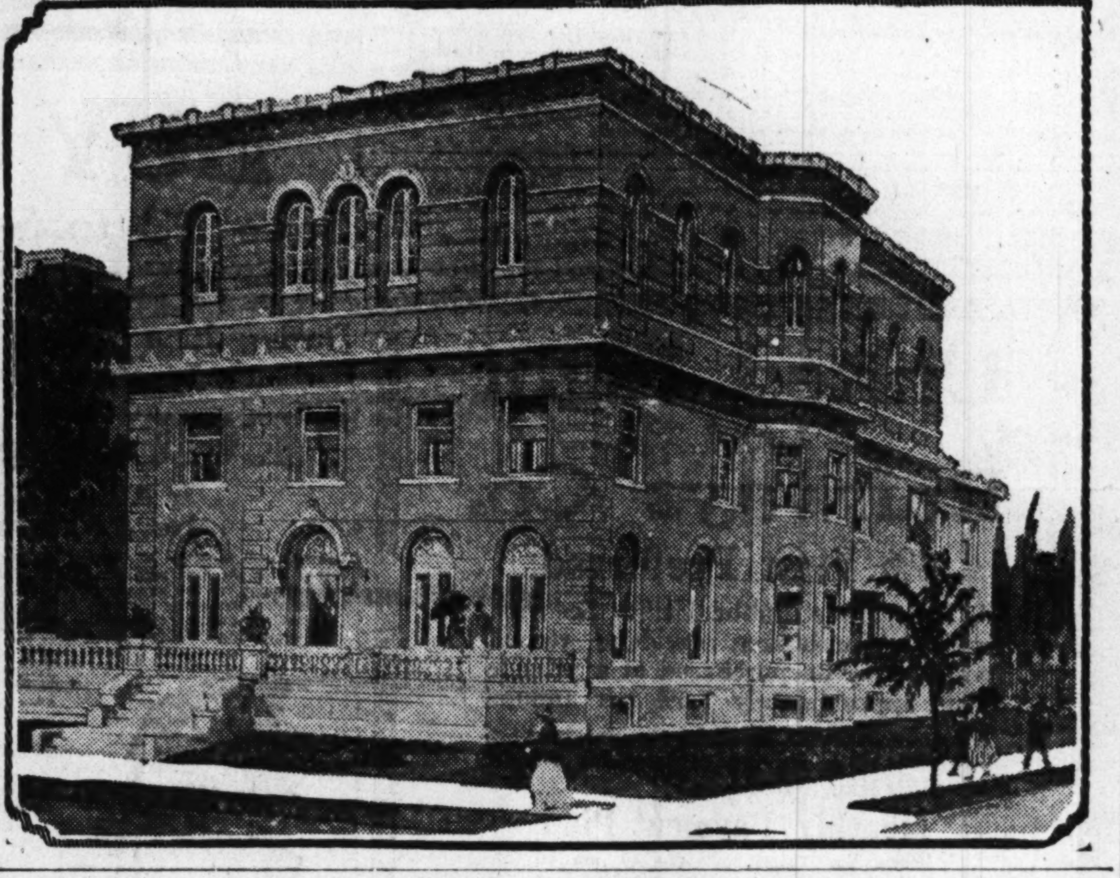
THE MARCH OF BUILDING

$275,000 Addition to Mercy Hospital to Be Opened Thursday Is Shown in Upper Picture. Below Is New Home of Bohemia Club.





THE new convent wing and addition to Mercy hospital to be opened to the public next Thursday is the third unit of the new Mercy hospital. It is built of red pressed brick with stone trimmings and is of the English renaissance type of architecture, corresponding with the two previous new wings. It has a frontage of 160 feet on Calumet avenue and cost $275,000. For the last seven years the work of extension and the replacing of the older buildings with the most modern type of hospital buildings has been carried on and it will take about seven years more to complete the entire scheme. The complete project will constitute one of the largest and most up to date hospitals in America. The latest addition consists of a convent wing with accommodations for sixty sisters and a hospital addition providing thirty private rooms, four wards de luxe, divided into two units of four beds each, and the entire fourth floor is devoted to maternity department. On the roof are the solariums and outdoor wards and roof gardens. The new Mercy hospital is being erected from the plans and under the supervision of Charles H. Prindeville.

The lower picture is that of the Bohemia club, the former residence of William Lorimer at Douglas boulevard and Lawndale avenue, as it will appear when the proposed $20,000 addition is completed. This will consist of a one story addition to the building, which the club purchased from Mr. Lorimer in 1912 for $30,000. The Ceska Beseda (Bohemia club) was organized in 1899, its present membership being about 250. The officers are: President, James M. Triner of the Triner Scale and Manufacturing company; vice president, Joseph Lopecky, Lawndale State bank; treasurer, Frank Novotny, manager Union Wholesale Liquor company; chairman finance committee, Hugo L. Pitte, civil service commissioner.

H. K. CHAPIN PURCHASER OF W. N. SELIG RESIDENCE.

According to a deed filed for record late in the week, Henry K. Chapin was the actual purchaser of the William N. Selig residence on Lake View avenue, 204 feet north of Fullerton parkway, and to which Attorney J. A. Verhoefen took title a short time ago. The lot fronts 87.5 feet with a maximum depth of 160 feet, and is improved with a handsome three story stone front dwelling, containing fourteen rooms. There is a garage in the rear. The deeds show the consideration to have been $69,000, made up of an incumbrance of $37,000, with $32,000 paid for the equity. W. G. Madsen of Cochran & McCluer and R. A. Connell were the brokers.

Paul Steinbrecher & Co. sold for Lucy P. and Dora Allen to Charles E. Kremer, the maritime lawyer, the three story stone front dwelling at 11424 North State Parkway for $20,000. Winston & Co. were associated in the transaction. It is the fourth residence sale that Steinbrecher & Co. have made in this block since the beginning of the year.

Strain on Flag.

It is an awful strain on the American flag and the English language. Every adjective, superlative, exclamation point, colon, dash, and period used was sent to the emergency hospital, and they were reported out of danger, but suffering horribly from shock.

SPALDING BROS.' LOOP PURCHASE WEEK'S LEADER

Buy Leasehold Interest in State Street and Will Erect a Mercantile Building.

The feature of a surprisingly good market considering the unfavorable weather conditions and the distractions incident to the national Republican convention was the purchase by James Walter Spalding of New York, president of A. G. Spalding & Bros., from Henry C. Lytton of the leasehold interest in the property at 211-215 South State street, 42½x144.9 feet, west front, 100 feet south of Adams street. The consideration is withheld, but in connection with the acquirement of the property Mr. Spalding gave a trust deed to the First Trust and Savings bank to secure a loan of $350,000, due Aug. 15, 1927, and bearing 5 per cent interest.

Spalding & Bros. a short time ago secured a twenty-five years' lease of the property and contemplated remodeling the present building on the property, but it is announced now they will raze the present building and erect a high grade five story mercantile building, the plans for which have been prepared by Mundie & Jensen.

Leased to Henry Siegel.

The fee of the north 20 feet is owned by John D. Jennings estate and the south 22½ feet by Bessie Beers Hansen. The north parcel was leased by Henry Siegel in 1899 for ninety-nine years at a net annual rent of $8,000 and the south 22½ feet at an annual rent of $12,000, making $20,000 for the two.

The leasehold interest in the two subsequently was acquired by Mr. Lytton. As the lease of the property to Spalding Bros. by Mr. Lytton provided for a net annual rent of $35,000 for the first ten years, $36,000 for the next ten, and $37,000 for the last five years, it will be seen that he has realized a handsome profit out of the transaction.

In addition to the rent Spalding & Bros. paid Mr. Lytton a cash consideration of $25,000. The sale was negotiated by Albert H. Wetten & Co. and John B. Ackerman, while the legal details were handled by Henry M. Wolf and Edward F. Bayley.

Another Leasehold Sold.

Another downtown transaction made a matter of record was the sale by the Printers Equipment company to Poole Bros. of the leasehold estate and the six story steel construction building at the southeast corner of South Clark and Harrison streets, lot 100x100, for an expressed consideration of $75,000.

The purchasers gave back a purchase money mortgage to Francis King of Alma, Mich., trustee, for $75,000, at 4 per cent interest. The land was leased for ninety-nine years from 1890 from J. E. Baker at an annual rent of $10,000 for the ninety-eight years of the term.

There was considerable doing of an important character in outside business property, several fairly good sized transactions being reported.

The most important of these was the purchase by W. K. Young and G. H. Young of W. K. Young & Bro. from R. J. Henry of the business block at the southwest corner of Fifty-fifth street and Blackstone avenue for an indicated consideration of $95,000, subject to an incumbrance of $40,000.

The lot fronts 150 feet on Fifty-fifth street by 75 feet on the avenue and is improved with a four story building containing six stores, thirty-two apartments, and four suites of offices and is said to have a gross annual rent of $12,000. The corner is regarded as among the most valuable on the street.

Fifty-third Street Sale.

Another Hyde Park deal was the sale by Mrs. Anna M. West to Mrs. Rosa Siegel of the property at the northwest corner of Fifty-third street and Woodlawn avenue, 164 feet on the former by 61½ feet, improved with a new one story white tile front building containing eight stores. A consideration of $55,000 was reported, the seller taking the residence property at 3642 Michigan avenue, valued at $30,000. Frank H. Lang represented both parties.

The business property at the northeast corner of North Clark street and Estes avenue has been placed under contract of sale by Lawrence P. Boyle to the G. A. Springer estate for a reported consideration of $60,000, subject to an incumbrance of $32,000. The property is improved with a building containing eight stores on the ground floor and offices and apartments on the upper floors, and in exchange the seller took the eight residences at 3800-3824 Forest avenue. George W. Dingman and E. L. Springer represented both parties to the transaction.

Ben Lowenmeyer Sells Corner.

Ben Lowenmeyer, who a short time ago acquired the business property at the southeast corner of Forty-third street and Drexel boulevard, has sold the same to Harold E. Hammond for an indicated consideration of $50,000, subject to an incumbrance of $30,000, taking in exchange for the equity a tract of 1,240x1,340 feet, south front, in One Hundred and Thirtieth street, 100 feet east of the center of Torrence avenue, comprising nearly twenty acres. The Forty-third street property is 99x180 feet, west front, with one and two story improvements.

PLANS HIGH GRADE FLATS.

A high grade twelve apartment building of five, six, and seven rooms is to be erected by Axel Johnson, the builder, on 74x127 feet at the northeast corner of Briar place and Cambridge avenue, which he has purchased from Dora Brecher for a reported price of $19,000. Greenebaum Sons' Bank and Trust company has made a loan of $55,000 in connection with the construction of the building. The sale was negotiated by H. W. Croxton.

STUDY IDLE SCHOOL LAND

President Steinbrecher of the Chicago real estate board has named the following committee to recommend to the school board some policy looking to the disposal of its idle outlying properties: Walter Mills, chairman; Perkins B. Bass, J. Lewis Cochran, Ernest Woltersdorf, and Raymond E. Herman.

Leases and Loans.

THERE was little doing of an important nature in the way of leases of building space in the downtown district, the most important one reported being the lease by Willis & Frankenstein for Elger Bros., owners of the Cunard building, southwest corner of Randolph and Dearborn streets, to George B. Beaman of the Beaman Drug company of the "L" shaped store and basement in that building. The store and basement contain 1,800 feet of space, and the lease is for nine years and ten months from July 1 at a term rent of $94,019.

Several 4½ per cent loans were reported. One which was to Edward S. Hunter and secured by the property at the southeast corner of Madison and Market streets was for $100,000 and runs five years. W. H. Henkle of the Illinois Trust and Savings bank was trustee.

Edgar M. Snow & Co. made several small 4½ per cent loans. One was for $35,000, 5 years, at 4½ per cent, secured by the property at the northwest corner of Federal and Polk streets, 100x100 feet, improved with old frame and brick buildings.

The same brokers also made a loan of $20,000, five years, at 4¾ per cent, on the property at 162-66 North Clinton street, lot 72 2-3x150 feet, between Randolph and Lake streets, with a four story brick improvements.

They also made a loan of $20,000, five years, at 4¾ per cent, on the property at 919-21 South State street, lot 20x138 feet, west front, with three story brick improvemens.

hey also made a loan of $20,000, five years, at 4½ per cent, on the property at 122 West Lake street, 20x180 feet, improved with four story brick building, between La Salle and Clark streets.

S. W. Straus & Co. have made a bond issue loan of $70,000, seven years, at 5½ per cent, to Carl Edwards, on the Carlton Court apartments at 6236-42 South Park avenue, lot 100x160 feet, east front.

It has been leased to the Combs Garage company for a term of ten years at a reported term rent of $33,000, at the rate of $3,000 a year for the first five years and $3,600 for the last five years. T. D. O'Hern and C. W. Parker of C. W. Hoff & Co. were the brokers.

VACANT TRACTS IN GOOD DEMAND IN ALL SECTIONS.

August von Glahn has sold to Oliver M. Burton, president of the Oliver M. Burton company, the tract of fourteen acres at the southwest corner of Forty-seventh street and Archer avenue for an indicated consideration of $56,500. At the time Mr. von Glahn acquired it last March in connection with the sale of the property at 642-48 South State street it was said to have been given a value of $100,000.

It is stated Mr. Burton will improve a large part of it for the use of the companies of which he is the head, which includes the Dixie Felt Mattress company in addition to the Oliver M. Burton company.

It is said the improvements probably will consist of large warehouses, a manufacturing plant for the Dixie Cotton Felt Mattress company, and mill buildings for the Oliver M. Burton company. WOODROW WILSON, PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES, 1913-19??. (From a snapshot by the International Film service.)

HERE COMES A FOKKER!—This cry, anywhere on the battle front of the allies, sends the crews of the anti-aircraft guns flocking to their posts in the hope of bringing down an enemy aeroplane scout. The upper photograph shows British crews rushing their guns into position for firing, and the lower picture the range finders keenly striving to determine the elevation and speed of the air scouts for marksmen.

HIS FIRST INAUGURAL, WILL HE HAVE ANOTHER?—President Wilson is shown reading his inaugural address in Washington on March 4, 1913. Chief Justice White, who swore in the president, is seen in the robes of his office. William Howard Taft, whom Mr. Wilson succeeded in the White House, is shown, hat off and pensive, listening to his own funeral. (Photograph by the American Press association.)

HOUSE on the pavilion of the Gordon Auchincloss home at Roslyn, Long Island, where the president received a long verbal report of his visit to Europe as a personal emissary of the president. Col. House is the president's unofficial adviser and the person to whom the president goes frequently for advice on matters of grave importance. No president has made use of a personal adviser to the extent that President Wilson has made use of Col. House. (Photograph copyright by Underwood & Underwood.)

THE TREE THAT OWNS ITSELF—This white oak tree, alone of all trees, is one that no one can claim, buy, sell, or cut down. The tree owns itself, trunk, boughs, twigs, and leaves, together with eight feet of land on every side of it. It stands on the summit of a hill in Athens, Ga. Beneath it, early in the nineteenth century, William H. Jackson used to sit directing the work of his slaves on his great plantation. In consideration of the cool comfort it gave him and the love he bore it, Mr. Jackson made a will deeding the tree to itself. The city of Athens takes care of the tree.
